CHRIST ALL AND IN ALL.
THE GATEWAY INTO THE KINGDOM.
THE TWO CLASSES.
WORDS OF COUNSEL.
A DIVINE SAVIOUR.
REPENTANCE AND RESTITUTION.
ASSURANCE OF SALVATION.
BACKSLIDING.

"The strongly-marked characteristics of its author are displayed in "The Way to God," by D. L. MOODY, closing with a very earnest appeal to backsliders....The American Evangelist is specially effective in his remark on backsliding parents. He declares that he has never known a man and his wife backslide without its proving utter ruin to their children."—Christian Leader, Jan. 17, 1884.

"The Addresses are intensely biblical, and direct in appeal."
Christian Chronicle, Jan. 24, 1884.

THE NEW YEAR PRESENT.

DAILY LIGHT ON THE DAILY PATH.

In the very Words of Scripture. Two Volumes. Morning Hour and Evening Hour. Sold separately or in sets. "These two text-books have long been favourites, but we would call the attention of those who may have not seen them to the fact that they are devotional text-books containing only the words of Scripture. The text chosen as key-note heads the page, and other texts bearing on the same subject follow. They are very precious little books, and few more suitable gifts could be found."—Christian. Small Edition, each volume, French morocco, gilt edges, 2s.; Large Type Edition, each volume, cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d. A Cheap Edition also, in cloth, at 1s. Various Styles, in Morocco and Calf.—S. BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster-row, London.

REST FROM SORROW;

OR, THE MINISTRY OF SUFFERING.

By the Rev. WILLIAM GUEST, F.G.S.

"We are confident that no pained or weary soul will read it without perceiving a golden thread of divine and loving intention, running through the most afflictive dispensations, and a silver lining of divine comfort and compensation lightening the darkest clouds of sorrow."—Christian.

"Each section of this interesting volume is concluded with a prayer or meditation, and the whole may be characterised as good and instructive."—Record.

"Whatever Mr. Guest touches with his pen becomes at once interesting and suggestive; and though he has here worked a line of things on which much has been written, he has managed to say something both fresh and strengthening. Sorrowing hearts need a Barnabas, and here they will find him. There is tenderness and beauty, pathos and piety, and these in their robustest and most Scriptural form."—Rev. C. H. SPURGEON, in Sword and Trowel.

BOOKS FOR ENQUIRERS AND CONVERTS.

Young Converts;

Or, Beginners in Zion's Ways. By Rev. R. BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"I have been continually asked by young converts where they could get a book in which they might find advice that would be helpful to them. This book seemed just the thing needed at this time. I have known the author, Rev. Dr. Boyd, for many years as a dear father in Israel. I have read his work carefully, and recommend it to all young Christians for prayerful meditation." D. L. Moody

The Way of Life.

A Book for Enquirers. By Rev. ROBERT BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth Boards, 1s.

"About fifteen years ago this little book attracted my notice. I read it with interest, and felt so much profited that I re-read it several times, and then circulated hundreds of copies among the soldiers during the American war. The number that then seemed blessed through reading the book has induced me to ask Messrs. Morgan & Scott to republish it, hoping that it may be the means of good in this country, as it has been in America." D. L. Moody

All About Jesus.

Thoughts and Reflections on the Person and Work of Christ. By ALEXANDER DICKSON. This book was printed at the express desire of Mr. D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"The volume sets forth Jesus very much in Scriptural language, for we have counted over 1340 passages of Holy Writ, chastely and lovingly interwoven in the discourses. Throughout, Jesus is the subject of delightful meditation, affection, and adoration."
The Methodist.

Addresses to Young Men.

By Rev. DANIEL BAKER. With Preface by D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"These discourses were designed to be of an awakening character. They were preached (in substance) in numerous revivals, and were blessed to the hopeful conversion of many precious souls, of whom some fifty or more have become ministers of the Gospel. May He who was pleased to bless these discourses when they came from the pulpit, bless them also now." AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

OTHER CHEST DISEASES.

Containing ONE HUNDRED and THIRTY-THREE SELECTED CASES. May be had from ELLIOT STOCK, 62, PATERNOSTER-ROW, E.C., or from Mr. Congreve (the Author), COOMBE LODGE, PECKHAM, S.E.

NINTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

OBSTINATE CHRONIC BRONCHITIS. CASE of PHILIP CHAMBERLAIN of GAMBLE HILL, BRAMLEY, near LEEDS.

The first letter I received from P. C. was in November, 1883. Six years ago a severe attack of influenza was followed with bronchitis, which never had been radically cured. Cough, continual expectoration, running of the nose, loss of flesh, with feeling of starvation, were the leading symptoms. For this I duly prescribed. In one month there was such relief that the patient went to work with comfort.

In a recent letter he says: "I cannot tell you the good your medicine has done me. I gained 6 lbs. in weight in less than a fortnight. I can do a day's work without being tired—in fact, I am like a new man."

In a letter dated January 5 he says: "I am still keeping well, although the weather has been so trying. Make what use of my case that you please."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

Neatly Printed on Tinted Paper, suitable for enclosing in Letters. Price 1s. per dozen (post free).

The White Fields of England.

An Entreaty to Communicants.

By REGINALD RADCLIFFE.

"What Christian does not long for the Gospel to spread on the Continent of Europe? And who that reflects can fail to observe that the gross state of our large towns arises very much from their being grossly neglected by us communicants. Their sad state is patent to every observing foreigner whom business brings into the midst of us, and he naturally looks with contempt and abhorrence on what he styles our "Christianity."

BACKSLIDING.

"The strongly-marked characteristics of its author are displayed in "The Way to God," by D. L. MOODY, closing with a very earnest appeal to backsliders....The American Evangelist is specially effective in his remark on backsliding parents. He declares that he has never known a man and his wife backslide without its proving utter ruin to their children."—Christian Leader, Jan. 17, 1884.

"The Addresses are intensely biblical, and direct in appeal."

By J. R. ANDREWS,

Author of "The Life of Oliver Cromwell to the Death of Charles I."

In cloth (with Portrait), 1s.

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 5s.

"Whitefield was not a framer of discipline, not a leader of a sect, not a founder of societies, not a ruler of men, but pre-eminently a winner of souls. Would that such preachers were multiplied in the present day! We thank Mr. Andrews for this seasonable addition to our religious biography. No young preacher or student should be without it. But it possesses an interest far beyond any special class, and deserves a wide and general circulation."—Methodist Recorder.

Rev. C. H. SPURGEON in the Sword and Trowel for September, 1883, says:—

"Here we have gold dust, 'and the gold of that land is good.' We hardly know a man more noteworthy for abounding grace and deep piety than ROBERT C. CHAPMAN. His name has never been sounded abroad, but those who know him value him beyond expression. Some of these brief 'Sayings' contain whole sermons. Personally, we expect to gather many discourses while studying this little book. A dew from heaven rests upon Mr. CHAPMAN'S expositions."

"Presents us with notices of a life spent in loving, intimate, and uninterrupted communion with a personal Lord. . . . We have read the book with deep interest. We would that indolent professors might read it and be quickened, and that suffering saints might read it and be comforted."—Christian Times.

"The sentiment of this book is illustrated in a pleasing narrative, in which its influence upon the experience of an eminently pious friend of the author's, and of her own, is admirably pourtrayed. It is calculated to produce a certain impression upon the hearts of true Christians that will be greatly beneficial to them."—Sword and Trowel.

MAGNETIC FORCE, A CONSTANT ENERGISER.

Magnetism is the primary force affecting all nature, and controlling all the elements and properties of nature. It can only be known by what it does, not by what it is. We cannot by analysis discover its constituents, or mark any solitary element in the production of a Magnetic current: like all the beneficent impulses of the universe, and of the human mind, it is invisible, immeasurable, illimitable. We are acquainted with the media of its communication, and the qualities and effects which mark its presence, but beyond this it is ours as yet to know comparatively nothing. For our present purpose, however, this obscurity is not of consequence. The manifestation of its wonderful powers in the cure of disease has become sufficiently striking to prove its natural, and doubtless Providential, adaptation to that end; and for this purpose we have distinct and well-ascertained laws for our guidance.

Many instances are on record in which the employés of Electric and Telegraph works have been, by the nature of their employment, protected against the ravages of epidemic diseases. Occupants of the same houses have sickened and died, while those in daily contact with this energising influence have been exempt. It is well known that man is especially liable to succumb to disease when in a low and languid state, and that he is open to these attacks from external influences when the magnetic and electric forces are not in their normal condition. We can now counteract these external influences by the use of simple Magnetic apparel. Every man, woman, and child may be in this safe, Magnetic condition. So marked is the different experience of the protected and unprotected, that many of those who had never crossed the Channel without being sick, have, as a consequence of the healthy equilibrium established by the Odo-Magnetic influence, found themselves to be the only persons on board not sick during severe storms. It is as clearly within the ground of certainty that our whole organism is beneficially energised by Odo-Magnetic influence, as that the breathing of a pure and genial atmosphere is a natural means of energising the invalid, although the influence upon the system is unperceived.

"January 12 1884.

"I ought, long ago, to have written to you respecting the Belt, for it has been of great service to me, and I am quite sure I could not do without it. I am a firm believer in the value of the Magnetic treatment of disease, and that it is one of the means which God often blesses, while sometimes He heals without means at all."

Mr. Garratt will always be happy to reply to inquiries from sufferers, or to explain the principles of his treatment to any scientific or medical gentleman, and to confer with them upon any case where his advice may be sought. Consultations, whether personally or by letter, are free.—B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

STEPPING STONES TO HIGHER THINGS.

By CAPTAIN SETON CHURCHILL.

Second Edition. Price 2s. 6d.

CHRISTIAN.—"This book has been written specially for the purpose of bringing home the Gospel to those who are unsaved. We trust that it may be circulated among educated people, for which class it is more especially suited."

SWORD AND TROWEL.—"These addresses are calculated to do much good; there is about them a robust manliness, a healthy, racy frankness of style, and a spirit of love for Jesus and the souls of men."

RECORD.—"It is a great comfort to find a distinctly evangelistic book sound on the nature of sin, sound on substitution, sound on holiness, sound on regeneration, sound on conversion, sound on the means of grace."

ROCK.—"Had these addresses been anonymously published, they would have commanded the praise of the reader as the production of a well-trained and skilful labourer in the Lord's vineyard."

"What Christian does not long for the Gospel to spread on the Continent of Europe? "In the Volume of the Book;"

Or, The Profit and Pleasure of Bible Study.

By GEORGE F. PENTECOST, M.A.

With Introductions by Rev. Joseph Cook and Rev. J. H. Vincent, D.D.

SEVENTH EDITION.

"The Author is well known in this country as well as in America as an able and successful evangelist and preacher. The book is a well-arranged product of a fresh and vigorous mind, steeped in biblical thought and spirit, and fitted in no ordinary measure to give clear views of the scope and purpose of the Bible, to confirm faith in its Divine origin and authority, and to guide to such a use of it as may build up the reader, both in holiness and comfort, and in zeal and usefulness unto Eternal Life. While admirably fitted for young converts, no Christian can read it without both stimulus and profit."—The Outlook, Feb. 1, 1884.

The Christian.

FIRST MEMORIES.*

By Mr. J. DENHAM SMITH.

CAN we ever forget when first we could say, "Abba, Father"? Sweet turning-point in our life! And can we ever forget the added promise, "And shalt not turn away from Me"? (Jer. iii. 19.)

The very feeling of fear we had, lest we should fall away, He used as a kind of law of moral gravitation, binding to Himself; for this holy and filial fear is like the law which binds alike the tear and the planet to their centre; it binds to Himself, work of his own Holy Spirit, blessed be his Name! This is his promise, "I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not turn away from Me."

Another passage, akin to the foregoing, shows the same tenderness of love: "I remember thee, the kindness of thy youth, the love of thine espousals, when thou wentest after Me in the wilderness." Immutable love! Immutable Lover! He "remembers," but what does He remember? Israel's sins? That is not said. Their infidel worship of miserable idols? That is not said, No; what He remembers is, the kindness of our youth, the love of our espousals, when we went after Him in the wilderness; all which we did. Well do we remember it; how we went after Him in the Word,—discovering more and more of Himself in that glass of his love; and how we went after Him in his ordinances,—drinking of those rich streams flowing from Himself, the Fountain of all blessedness. And how we went after Him in the Gospel of his grace; for always fresh, always blessed to our souls, was the good news of God. And how, too, we went after Him in prayer, in holy, happy communion with Him. So sings our favourite bard—

"What peaceful hours I once enjoyed!
How sweet their memory still!"

But, blessed Lord, is the remembrance unalloyed? Is it full only of Thee; and of a life only for Thee; corresponding, in its ripe harvest, to the fair young days of its springtide bloom? The Holy Dove, that third Person in the adorable Godhead, will never leave us; but with folded wing He may be hindered, grieved within us. Oh, our souls! have we not grieved Him?

Sweet, sweet are the memories we have of his first quickening and enlightening power! with all the hallowed associations connected therewith. I never look at that first Bible, which, as a child, I received from one now long since laid beneath the clod of the valley, without calling such memories and associations to mind. Therein was inscribed what told the true wish of her heart, and which may be written by many another mother in the first Bible given to her child—

"Thy mother sought a pledge of love,
The holiest, for her son;
And from the gifts of God above,
She chose a goodly one;
She chose for her beloved boy,
The source of life, and light, and joy.

We may say of our departed, to whom we owe so much—

"Oh for the touch of a vanished hand,
For the sound of a voice that is still!"

But in such memories as these, being dead, they yet speak to us; and their hands, though lying in the dust, still aid in guiding us.

God Himself delights in his remembrances of our first love. How He reminded Jacob of that pillar he set up at his conversion, after he had seen the vision of heaven and earth united by the mystic ladder!

Are we weary of these words of his love? Here is another: "I will allure her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her," or, as the word is, "speak to her heart." But before He can do this He must deal with the conscience. Whenever God works with a backsliding soul, He begins by giving first a conscience of sin, which makes way for the confession of it, with all the attendant blessedness of a full, free, and plenary forgiveness.

We see this in Joseph's brethren. First a sense of their great guiltiness was wrought in them. Joseph himself did it by his hard questions; by "Ye are spies," and by his hard words, together with the perplexities they endured respecting Benjamin their brother. He did this that they might feel and confess their sin, and that he might have the great joy of forgiving them. What he longed for was that they should be reconciled to him. Wonderful moment when, contrary to their thought of his not knowing their language (for he spoke to them through an interpreter), he heard those words, "We are verily guilty concerning our brother!" He knew not how to forbear, but yearned to throw himself on their necks and forgivingly embrace them. Meanwhile he put a restraint on his love, such as Christ now exercises in not coming at once to his own according to the flesh, or for those who are "members of his body, being of his flesh and of his bones." Only Joseph could have told what a relief to the bursting emotions of his heart was the moment when he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck and wept, and Benjamin wept upon his neck, and when he kissed all his brethren and wept upon them, and after that talked with them,—communion following upon confession and forgiveness.

Inimitable picture! He required no words on their part telling of their sin. The sweetness of their regrets, spoken or unspoken, seen, it may be, only in their tears, or felt in their deep embrace, was comfort enough for him. I repeat it: Oh, inimitable picture and foreshadowing of the time when Israel shall look upon Him whom they have pierced, and shall mourn and be in bitterness, but when He will say, "I am your Saviour—Jesus, your Messiah." But if there will be mourning for their sin, there will be double joy. Oh, it is now that He will speak comfortably unto her; i.e., will speak to her heart. It is in this speaking to the heart that so great a change will come. It is in her heart—the hearts of those now hardened against him—He will put his laws—yea, will write them there. Seeing Him, and having his laws in the heart, what a change! How will Israel have a different mind, another judgment of things then; and another history!

The Psalmist, speaking of this day of Israel's blessing, says, "Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people, Thou hast covered all their sin. Thou hast taken away all thy wrath: Thou hast turned from the fierceness of thine anger" (Ps. lxxxv. 2, 3).

And now, how does the prophetic fire glow with yet more brightness as the seer tells it all out: "I will heal their backslidings." This is his Name, "Jehovah-Rophi, the Lord that healeth thee." Israel's wound in itself was quite incurable; but now God acts in grace, and not only forgives, but heals.

"To heal," says another, "is a deeper thing than forgiveness; it is the wound sin had made, covered, removed." Do we not know something of such wounds in places where we said we should never sin again? And do we not know something of such healing? We have failed, and have grieved to break our promise to the Lord; but He not only forgives the sin, He heals the wound.

Again the vision grows; there is no limit to the preciousness of it, as indicated by such words as "I will love them freely." Nothing is to be a hindrance to his love; which will be satisfied. "Freely" as their Saviour Messiah will He love them. "Impelled," as the word is; i.e., impelled by Himself, moved by his own essential delight and bountifulness, He will infinitely love, and will rest in the objects of his love. Joseph loving on the necks of his brethren is an image of Him thus. Anyone seeing would have said, "Oh, how he loves!" A spectator at the scene of the music and dancing might have said, "Oh, how freely, how impelled, as it were, does the Father love!" See Him! It is as if He said, "My child is come back to me. He has turned to me at last; he has come to weep upon my bosom. I have had compassion. I ran towards him. Swift did I run. I fell upon his neck, and kissed him."

"Oh! who" asks another, "knows God's kiss but they who have felt it?" Returning one, He will wrap his holy, holy, holy arms around thee, and bury his face in thy bosom, and hold thee to his heart, and kiss thee. Oh! what is this? The embrace of God. No; no. What? The embrace of God?

Sinner, if you will return, God will as much embrace you as if He threw human arms about your neck, and laid a human face, pale with sorrow, and joy, and love, upon your bosom, and kissed you with human lips. Yes; God is love. You may come to Him, and say to Him, "Father." He will not break the heart already bruised; He will call you son. "This is my son," he will call out, as if all others knew. "Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him."

This is God's elect way of having his love

satisfied, and of resting in his love. And He can do this, not at the expense of, but in accordance with his righteousness. Some would say, reading Luke xv., that God is all mercy; that He does not mind sin; that He does not act with such strictness as is imagined; that He said not one word against the prodigal, and. in fact, never intended we should always take Him at his word. Others go to another extreme. They tell of God as if He were all justice and no mercy; or, as if there were no provided atonement for sin. They tell the sinner to think only of his sins; lying down and rising up, morning, noon, and night, the dark, black catalogue is to be ever present to the mind. Sorry remedies these for sin-sick souls! We would say of them as Lady Powerscourt once said of a bad book sent for her instruction, that "it smelt of the devil's dispensary." No; what a sin-sick soul wants is the healing of the blood of Christ, the knowledge of the love of God, applied by simple faith in the Word to the anguished conscience. It is at the Cross all his great attributes and perfections are seen in one harmonious combination engaged on our behalf. The Gospel is—I am as much at peace and rest with his justice as with his love. Such love surely begets love in us. Not faithful love merely, that is not enough; but the deep, personal love which rest in its object.

It is told of a French soldier who was undergoing an operation, that as the surgeon pressed the probe far into his lungs, to feel for the bullet that lay there, a ghastly smile came over his face as he said, "A little deeper, and you will find the emperor." Thousands there are who, while deploring their own failures, have God thus—shall I say the name of Jesus, which reveals God?—written in their heart deeper down than all other names; deeper than life or death; deeper than all else, both now and for ever. God has made glorious provision for the righteousness of such love. He has filled all time and eternity with Christ's value and merit for his people. Hence, what is Psalm xl., asks a friend, but the Lord wafting the fragrance of his burnt-offering sacrifice into all eternity past? And for the future, what is Hebrews x., but the same blessed God wafting it on and on into the eternity before us?

St. Luke's Invalid and Convalescent Home, Ramsgate.

TWO hundred and fifty patients and visitors were received in the year 1883 for rest and change, many of them being invalids who required much care and attention. The number of gentlewomen in straitened circumstances benefited is larger each year, and their gratitude is very touching in many cases. It is especially so when advanced in life; they find their strength more difficult to recruit than in earlier years. It is easier in this Home than in those on a larger scale to provide the quiet repose and personal comforts they need.

An effort is being made to enlarge the Home in order to accommodate thirty-five patients comfortably, in the ensuing season, as applications for admission are so numerous. The testimony of loving hearts to spiritual blessing experienced in the Home, as well as bodily health regained, is so cheering that advance in the work seems clearly indicated.

Increased subscriptions in the present year are earnestly sought in order to meet the added expenses attendant on receiving more inmates, that the Home may continue its work in freedom from debt. The anxiety of sending so many weak ones is enough for those who bear the responsibility without being weighed down by burdens of which kind friends might relieve them if acquainted with the facts of the case. These will gladly be supplied by Miss Rosalind Hosking, Finsbury House, Ramsgate.

ELEMENTS OF TRUE PRAYER.—4.

By Mr. D. L. MOODY.

(Concluded from our last.)

THE next element in prayer that I want to call your attention to is

PETITION.

How often we go to prayer-meetings without really asking for anything. Our prayers go all round the world without anything definite being asked for. We do not expect anything. Many people would be greatly surprised if God did answer their prayers. I remember hearing of a very eloquent man who was leading a meeting in prayer. There were not a single definite petition in the whole. A poor earnest woman shouted out: "Ask Him summat man." How often you hear what is called prayer without any asking. "Ask and ye shall receive." I believe if we put all the stumbling-blocks out of the way God will answer our petitions. If we put away sin and come into his presence with pure hands, as He has commanded us to come, our prayers will have power with Him. In Luke's Gospel we have a supplement to the "Disciples' Prayer" (chap. xi.). "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." Some people think God does not like to be troubled with our constant coming and asking. The only way to trouble God is not to come at all. He encourages us to come to Him repeatedly, and push our claims.

Having read the illustrations used by our Lord, in this chapter, of the man who roused his friend at the midnight hour that he might prefer his request, Mr. Moody said: I believe you will find three kinds of Christians in the Church to-day. The first class are those who "ask;" they never get beyond that; they do not wait or look for the answer. I remember when I was a little boy I went to a neighbouring town where there was a house with an old-fashioned knocker on the door; it was old-fashioned then. I used to think to myself, I would like to hear how the knocker sounds. One day I plucked up courage and lifted the knocker, then I let it go, and off I went as fast as I could. I thought it sounded pretty good, and I would like to hear it again. So I used to pass that way on the road to school and lift the knocker; but one day I got caught, and I have never done it since. A great many people pray in that way; they do not wait for the answer. Our Lord teaches us here that we are not only to ask, but we are to wait for the answer; if it does not come, we must seek to find out the reason. I believe that we get a good many blessings just by asking; others we do not get, because there may be something in our life that needs to be brought to light. When Daniel began to pray in Babylon for the deliverance of his people, he sought to find out what the trouble was, and why God had turned away his face from them. So there may be something in our life that is keeping back the blessing; if there is, we want to find it out. Someone speaking on this subject has said, we are to ask with a beggar's humility, to seek with a servant's carefulness, and to knock with the confidence of a friend.

How often people become discouraged, and say they do not know whether or not God does answer prayer. In Luke xviii. Christ teaches us how we are not only to pray and seek, but to find. If the unjust judge heard the petition of the poor woman who pushed her claims, how much more will our Heavenly Father hear our cry. A good many years ago an Irishman in the State of New Jersey was condemned to be hanged. Every possible influence was brought to bear upon the Governor to have the man reprieved, but he stood firm and refused to alter the sentence. One morning the wife of the condemned man with her ten children went to see the Governor. When he came to his office, they all fell on their faces before him, and he sought him to have mercy on the husband—the father! The governor's heart was moved, and he at once wrote out a reprieve. The importunity of the wife and child saved the life of the man, just as the woman in the parable who pushed her claims induced the unjust judge to grant her request.

It was this that brought the answer to the prayer of blind Bartimeus. The people, and even the disciples, tried to hush him into silence, but he only cried out the louder, "Thou Son of David, have mercy upon me!" You notice that prayer is hardly ever mentioned in the Bible alone; it is prayer and earnestness, prayer and watchfulness, prayer and thanksgiving. So you will find that throughout Scripture prayer is always linked with something else. Bartimeus was in earnest, and the Lord heard his cry.

Then the highest type of Christian is the one who has got clear beyond asking and seeking, and keeps knocking till the answer comes. If we knock, God has promised to open the door and grant our request. It may be years before the answer comes; He may keep us knocking: but He has promised that the answer will come.

I will tell you what I think it means to knock. In Philadelphia, a number of years ago, when we were having great meetings, it came to a point where there seemed to be very little power. We called together all the mothers, and asked them to meet and pray for their children. About 1500 mothers came together, and poured out their hearts to God in prayer. One mother said: "I wish you would pray for my two boys. They have gone off on a drunken spree, and it seems as if my heart would break." She was a widowed mother. A few mothers gathered together and said: "Let us have a prayer-meeting for these boys." They cried to God for these two wandering boys. See how God answered their prayer. That day these two brothers had planned to meet at the corner of the street where our meetings were being held. They were going to spend the night in debauchery and sin. About 7 o'clock the first boy came to the appointed place; he saw the people going into the meeting. As it was a stormy night, he thought he would go in for a little while. The Word of God reached him, and he went into the inquiry-room, where he gave his heart to the Saviour. The other brother waited at the corner until the meeting broke up, expecting his brother to come; he did not know that he had been in the meeting. There was a young men's meeting in the church near by, and this brother thought he would like to see what was going on, so he followed the crowd into the meeting. He was also impressed with what he heard, and was the first one to go into the inquiry-room, where he found peace. While this was happening the younger one had gone home to cheer his mother's heart with the good news. He found her on her knees. She had been knocking at the mercy-seat. While she was doing so her boy came in and told her that her prayers had been answered; his soul was saved. It was not long before the other brother came in and told his story—how he, too, had been blessed.

On the following Monday night the first to get up at the young men's meeting was one of these brothers, who told the story of their conversion. No sooner had he taken his seat than the other jumped up and said: "All that my brother has told you is true, for I am his brother. The Lord has indeed met us and blessed us."

I heard of a wife in this country who had an unconverted husband. She resolved that she would pray every day for twelve months for his conversion. Every day at twelve o'clock she went to her room alone and cried to God. Her husband would not allow her to speak to him on the subject, but she could speak to God on his behalf. It may be that some of you have got some friend who does not wish to be spoken with about his salvation; you can do as this woman did—go and pray to God about it. The twelve months passed away, and there was no sign of his yielding. She resolved to pray for six months longer; so every day she went alone and prayed for the conversion of her husband. The six months passed and still there was no sign, no answer. The question arose in her mind: Could she give him up? "No," she said; "I will pray for him as long as God gives me breath." That very day, when he came home to dinner, instead of going into the dining-room he went upstairs. She waited and waited and waited, but he did not come down to dinner. Finally she went to his room, and found him on his knees crying to God to have mercy upon him. God convicted him of sin; he not only became a Christian, but the Word of God had free course, and was glorified in him. God used him mightily. That was God answering the prayers of this Christian wife; she knocked and knocked till the answer came.

I heard something the other day that cheered me wonderfully. A man was prayed for about forty years, but there was no sign of any answer. It seemed as though he was going down to his grave one of the most self-righteous men on the face of the earth. Conviction came all in one night. In the morning he sent for the members of his family, and said to his daughter: "I want you to pray for me. Pray that God would forgive my sins; my whole life has been nothing but sin—sin." And all this conviction came, as I have said, in one night. What we want is to press our case right up to the throne of God. I have often known cases of men who came to our meetings and could not hear a word that was said. It seemed as though some unseen power laid hold of them, so that they were convicted and converted then and there.

I remember at one place where we were in America, a wife came to the first meeting and asked me to talk with her husband. "He is not interested," she said, "but I am in hopes he will become so." I talked with him, and I think I hardly ever spoke to a man that seemed to be so self-righteous. It looked as though I might as well have talked to an iron post; he seemed to be so encased in self-righteousness. I said to his wife that he was not at all interested. She said, "I told you that, but I am interested for him." All the thirty days we were there that wife never gave him up. I must confess she had ten times more faith for him than I had. I had spoken to him several times, but I could see no ray of hope. The last night but two the man came to me and said, "Would you just see me in another room?" I went aside with him, and asked him what was the trouble. He said, "I am the greatest sinner in the State of Vermont." "How is that?" I said. "Is there any particular sin you have been guilty of?" I must confess I thought he had committed some awful crime, which he was covering up, and that he now wanted to make confession. "My whole life," he said, "has been nothing but sin. God has shown it to me to-day." He asked the Lord to have mercy on him, and he went home rejoicing in the assurance of sins forgiven. There was a man convicted and converted in answer to prayer. So if you are anxious about the conversion of some relative, or some friend, make up your mind that you will give God no rest, day or night, till He grants your petition. He can reach them, wherever they are—at their places of business, in their homes, or anywhere—and bring them to his feet.

The last element in prayer is

SUBMISSION.

All true prayer must be offered in full submission to God. After we have made our requests known to Him our language should be, "Thy will be done." I would a thousand times rather that God's will should be done than my own. I cannot see into the future as God can; therefore, it is a good deal better to let Him choose for me than to choose for myself. I know his mind about spiritual things. His will is that I should be sanctified; so I can with confidence pray to God for that, and expect an answer to my prayers. But when it comes to temporal matters it is different; what I ask for may not be God's purpose concerning me.

Some of the best men the world has ever seen have made great mistakes on this point. Moses could pray for Israel and could prevail with God, but God did not answer his petition for himself. He asked that God would take him over Jordan, that he might see Lebanon; after the forty years wandering in the wilderness he desired to go into the promised land, but the Lord did not grant his desire. Was that a sign that God did not love him? By no means. He was a man greatly beloved of God, like Daniel, and yet God did not answer this prayer of his. Your child says, "I want this or that," but you do not grant the request, because you know that it would be the ruin of the child to give him everything he wants. Moses wished to enter the Promised Land, but the Lord had something else in store for him. As someone has said, God kissed away his soul and took him home to Himself. "God buried him,"—the greatest honour ever paid to mortal man. Fifteen hundred years afterwards God answered his prayer; he allowed him to go into the Promised Land and to get a glimpse of the coming glory. On the Mount of Transfiguration, with Elijah, the great prophet, and with Peter, James, and John, he heard the voice come from the throne of God, "This is my beloved Son." That was better than to have gone over Jordan, as Joshua did, and sojourn for thirty years in the land of Canaan. So when our prayers for worldly things are not answered, let us submit to the will of God, and know that it is all right.

Elijah was mighty in prayer; he brought fire down from heaven on his sacrifice, and his petitions brought rain on the thirsty land. He stood fearlessly before King Ahab in the power of prayer. Yet we find him sitting under a juniper tree like a coward, asking God that He would let him die. The Lord loved him too well for that; He was going to take him up to heaven in a chariot of fire. So we must not allow the devil to take advantage of us, and make us believe that God does not love us because He does not just grant all our petitions.

As Moses takes up more room in the Old Testament than any other character, so it is with Paul in the New Testament, except, perhaps, the Lord Himself. Yet Paul did not know how to pray for himself. He besought the Lord to take away "the thorn in the flesh." His request was not granted, but the Lord bestowed on him a greater blessing. He gave him more grace. It may be we have some trial—some thorn in the flesh. If it is not God's will to take it away, let us ask Him to give us more grace, in order to bear it. We find that Paul gloried in his reverses and his infirmities, because all the more the power of God rested upon him. It may be there are some of us who feel as if everything was going against us. May God give us grace to take Paul's platform and say, "All things work together for good to them that love God." So when we pray to God we must be submissive, and say, "Thy will be done."

[These and other addresses on Prayer by Mr. Moody, carefully revised, are about to be issued in book form].

THE GOSPEL, A MESSAGE.

By Rev. JAMES GALL.

IT is generally said that the Gospel means "good news" or "glad tidings," but it is more. It is a message, and like every other message requires not only belief but obedience. We must not only believe, we must "obey the Gospel."

In the very heart of the word ev-angel-ion there is bound up the idea of a message, and in the word evangelist there is bound up the responsibility of a messenger. It is composed of two Greek words: angelos, a messenger, and the word, or rather the prefix Eu, which requires many English words to express it, meaning both good and true. Evangel, therefore, is a message of peace and love from a righteous God to a guilty sinner. It is more than news—it is a personal thing, and is itself a fact.

In the first place, it is God who speaks through the evangelist: "As though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead be ye reconciled to God." If it were merely good news, which somebody heard and somebody repeated, and which anybody may believe if he happen to hear it, it would carry with it no authority, and the hearing it would involve no responsibility. But as it is a message, it commands attention from those to whom it is addressed. Immediately the hearer is brought into relationship with God, he cannot escape the responsibility of having heard it. The message has been delivered, and at his peril he must "obey."

In the second place, it is a message addressed to the man that hears it—not as a piece of news, but as a summons. It is a message from God to him, as if he were alone in the universe; and it is addressed to him now while he hears it, and only now. To-morrow it may be no message to him. If the Gospel were nothing more than glad tidings, the first announcement would exhaust it, because after that it would be news no longer. Every time that it is repeated, it would only be the old, old story, and no news at all. But if it be a message, every time that it is delivered it acquires fresh emphasis and power; and, like a repeated summons, becomes louder and more imperative than before.

Do evangelists understand this? Do they not sometimes content themselves with merely stating, and explaining, and illustrating the Gospel, without delivering it? If it be all in the third person and the Greek aorist, the languid hearers listen to the oft-told tale and fall asleep. But if the evangelist were to burst out upon them and say, "I have a message from God to you; and in his name I demand an answer. Will you have Christ or no?" might not the result be different?

THE ROYAL DIARY.*

AMONG the many features of interest which mark the Queen's new book, we must rejoice in the traces of simple faith and unaffected piety which adorn its pages. Referring, for instance, to the trying part she had to take in unveiling the statue of Prince Albert, at Aberdeen, in 1863, Her Majesty thus indicates her faith in the power of prayer:

"I was terribly nervous in the morning. Longed not to have to go through this ordeal. Prayed for help, and got up earlier."

Her Majesty's estimate of Dr. Norman Macleod's character, reveals her regard for that which most draws the soul to confidence in God. We read:—

"No one ever felt so convinced, and so anxious as he to convince others, that God was a loving Father, who wished all to come to Him, and to preach of a living personal Saviour, One who loved us as a brother and a friend, to whom all could and should come with trust and confidence. No one ever raised and strengthened one's faith more than Dr. Macleod. His own faith was so strong, his heart so large, that all—high and low, weak and strong, the erring and the good—could alike find sympathy, help, and consolation from him. How I loved to talk to him, to ask his advice, to speak to him of my sorrows, my anxieties!"

It is equally interesting to note her readiness to see and acknowledge in the Word of God that which rebukes national sin. Take the extract dated October 2, 1870:—

"Dr. Macleod gave us such a splendid sermon on the war, and without mentioning France he said enough to make everyone understand what was meant when he pointed out how God would punish wickedness, and vanity, and sensuality; and the chapters he read from Isaiah xxviii., and from Ezekiel, Amos, and one of the Psalms, were really quite wonderful for the way in which they seemed to describe France."

We cannot omit one other reference to this aspect of these Highland reminiscences. It is a description of a communion service held in a country kirk, and indicates how the religion of Christ unites high and low, Queen and subject, in one common bond, when its true nature is discerned:—

"It would indeed be impossible to say how deeply we were impressed by the grand simplicity of the service. It was all so truly earnest, and no description can do justice to the perfect devotion of the whole assemblage. It was most touching, and I longed much to join in it. (Since 1873, says the Queen in a footnote, I have regularly partaken of the Communion at Crathie every autumn, it being always given at that time.) To see all these simple, good people in their nice plain dresses (including an old woman in her mutch), so many of whom I knew, and some of whom had walked far, old as they were, in the deep snow, was very striking."

These deeply interesting leaves from the record of an exalted and useful life will undoubtedly strengthen the bonds of true affection that unite the Queen of these realms with her loyal and dutiful subjects.

GROCERS' LICENCES.—The committee of the Women's Union of the Church of England Temperance Society have decided to prepare a petition of women's signatures in support of the Bill, introduced by Mr. Coleridge Kennard, for the withdrawal of grocers' and other shopkeepers' licences for the retail sale of spirits and liqueurs. The Bill is backed by Viscount Folkestone and Sir H. Selwyn Ibbetson, Conservatives, and the Hon. E. Stafford Howard and Mr. James Cropper, Liberals. As it is important that this petition should be largely signed, the committee earnestly ask the help of all interested in the movement. Petition sheets, with full directions for signing, may be obtained free from the secretary, Miss Haslam, Palace Chambers, Bridge-street, Westminster, S.W., and should be returned to her not later than March 25.

For the Young.

THE BINDWEED'S LESSON.

"THIS horrid grammar! I can't learn it. I don't see a bit of good in such stuff," said a brown-eyed girl about ten years of age. She was seated, Turkish fashion, in a low, broad window-sill. Her usually bright countenance was clouded with discontent and sullenness. Letting the unwelcome lesson-book slip from her lap to the floor, she pressed her hot cheeks against the cool glass, and gazed on the pleasant scene without.

A robin red-breast was hopping across the lawn. Annie loved birds, and she silently watched her feathered friend as, with a graceful turn of the head, the robin scanned first this side, then that, hopped a few paces, and so gradually drew near the window for the daily meal of crumbs prepared by Annie's hands. Soon, the robin was satisfied, and with a grateful chirp! chirp! he flew to a tree close to the house and warbled out his song of thanks. Perhaps the robin had a special message for Annie; at any rate, as the little girl listened to the bird's sweet notes, her countenance cleared, and picking up the neglected lesson-book, she approached a lady who was steadily sewing at the other end of the room.

Annie quietly watched her mother's busy needle passing in and out of the pretty garment, which she knew was for herself. The silence was only broken by stitch! stitch! stitch! as the bright steel flashed on and on, seeming to say, "Idle girl! how can you waste your time when mother and I work so hard to keep you warm and neat?"

Annie could bear her mother's silent reproof no longer. One little hand crept softly round her mother's neck and the other rested on her work, thus checking busy needle's stitch! stitch! stitch!—an unpleasant sound to Annie just then.

"You are grieved with me, mother!" said the little girl, in a low voice. "I do not wish to be idle, but I dislike grammar: it is no use trying, I shall never like it."

"You think so now, Annie," replied her mother, gravely, "but I hope you will grow wiser in time. Even a disagreeable duty, sweetened by cheerful obedience, may eventually become a pleasant task. But, come, little daughter, you and I will take a walk in the garden. I have something to show you there."

Very gladly Annie obeyed her kind mother, and in a few minutes they were standing together by a small plot of ground, which Annie called "her very own garden."

"What have you to show me, mother dear?" asked Annie, eagerly.

"Only a troublesome weed, my child," said her mother, pointing to a trailing plant, which had twined in and out among the pretty flowers, and had twisted itself round and round a few of the best plants, shooting out here and there white bell-shaped flowers, which Annie thought very pretty.

"That a weed, mother!" said the astonished child. "Why, I thought it quite a beauty! and how funnily it crawls along the ground, and lays hold of the first flower it can reach to raise itself up!"

"Yes, my dear; harmless as that plant appears to you, it is an enemy to your pretty flowers. They and it cannot live together. If the bindweed flourishes, your flowers will die. One will surely conquer the other."

"I will root it out, mother; it shan't destroy that beautiful pansy."

"Yes, Annie, that is the only remedy—root it out! And will my dear little daughter bestow as much care in rooting from her heart selfishness and disobedience—ugly weeds which grieve the Lord Jesus?

"I knew a little boy who disliked grammar as much as you, Annie dear, and yet that lesson was always as carefully prepared and repeated as any other. A companion asked why he took such pains with a task he did not like? 'It must be good for me, or I should not have to do it,' said he; 'so I learn it for Jesus' sake, and He helps me never to let 'Don't like' take the place of 'I ought.'

"Try Willie's plan, my child, and always remember that 'even Christ pleased not Himself.'" Ruth.

A CHRIST FOR LITTLE CHILDREN.

"Is there a Christ for little children?" was the question asked of a lady by a little blue-eyed child.

There's a Christ for little children
Full of tender, pitying love,
Who is waiting to receive them,
And to welcome them above.
Every fault is freely pardoned,
Every weakness fully known,
And every childish sorrow
Made lovingly his own.

There's a work for little children
Which their tiny hands may do,
A love their hearts can render,
And a service bright and true;
There are souls they may win for Jesus
By their Christlike words and ways,
And He smiles upon every effort,
To tell out his wondrous praise.

There are those in heathen darkness,
Who know of no loving Christ,
Who never have heard the story
Of his precious love unpriced!
It may be the little children
Will send them the tidings sweet
Of the Lord who has freely loved them,
And woos them to his feet.

Are you trying to send his Gospel
To the souls that have never heard
Of the Saviour's boundless pity—
Of his true and faithful word?
He will bless every weak endeavour
With his look of tend'rest love,
And each soul you win for Jesus
Shall star your crown above.

The Late Bishop Gobat.

THE Journal Religieux calls attention to a "Life" of the late Samuel Gobat, Bishop of Jerusalem, published by Spittler, of Bâle. It compares the book to a new Gospel of Mark; it speaks of it as a living vindication of the Divine Government of the world, and of the Fatherly Providence of God over his people. During his journey through Abyssinia he on one occasion put to flight a leopard simply by fixing upon him his clear and fearless look, and on another a fierce lion came near him as if smelling him and then quietly turned away. M. Gobat prayed for whole hours at the entrance of a cavern full of hyenas without suspecting their presence.

One day he found that he and the twelve or thirteen men who were dependent on him were utterly destitute of money or food, but he set out on his journey with the air of one who did not doubt that He who feeds the birds of the air would provide him with what was needful, and had not travelled far before he received a basketful of provisions sufficient to supply the hungry company, which had been sent by an unknown chief.

The book also contains accounts of many striking conversions, and it would seem desirable that a translation of it from the German should be given to English readers.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey.

GLEANINGS AT STRATFORD.

By Miss ANNIE MACPHERSON.

IT was my privilege to attend several of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's meetings at Stratford. I remembered how, years ago, when in my village home, I used to read the smallest details of such gatherings where after-meetings were held and souls saved, and what deep longings I had to be there. I read also that she who tarried at home by the stuff shared alike in the spoils. We do realise that much prayer is ascending all over the world at this time for the people of this great and drunken city, cursed at almost every street corner with gin-palaces. These are now erected with every imaginable allurement outside and in.

It is just 6 p.m., two hours before the meeting in West Ham-lane Hall is announced to begin. We are sitting on the platform before several thousands already gathered, mostly working-men. We have met and heard the masters of these men pleading for the souls of their servants, in earnest cries to God. Indeed, for these past fourteen weeks, Christians of all denominations in Stratford have assembled for daily prayer for this season of blessing. Now most fully are their expectations being fulfilled, in the Spirit witnessing that not only hundreds, but they believe thousands, are being brought to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus.

In front of us, in several rows, sit clergymen and ministers, taking a deep interest in the service, and uttering many a hearty "Amen." Afterwards they are mingling among the people, so Christ-like, true pastors rejoicing in the blessing. During frequent visits to Stratford it has been refreshing to hear of the unanimity existing among the Christians. Let us work while the Spirit is among the people, forgetting all differences, emulating each other to still greater love and good works. During these happy weeks old sores have been healed, which some thought could only be accomplished when the heavenly land had been reached, for which we shall for ever praise God.

It is now 7.15. The choir has led song after song, the congregation joining heartily. The place is filled to overflowing, making one's heart glad. What a striking type these thousands are of what all believers should be! On the tiptoe of expectation we look and wait for the Man who comes, and whose right it is to reign as King over every heart He has created and made one with Himself. May the increase of love to the souls of others cause the united cry, "Even so, come quickly, Lord Jesus!"

7.30.—The evangelists are in their places. We are singing Hymn 327. Mr. Sankey asks that the first three lines of the chorus may be sung successively by the different sections of the vast audience. Then all join in the closing line. One sees the words issuing from lips that had been closed until now, and prays that they may from their inmost soul cry, "Take me as I am." After this Mr. Moody bids the congregation "rise and sing" 436, to Tune "Belmont"—

> "I to the hills will lift mine eyes
> From whence doth come mine aid;
> My safety cometh from the Lord
> Who heaven and earth hath made."

How richly did these thousands of men's voices pour forth this fine old Psalm!

Dear friends! do praise God for the seed sown by these grand songs. This morning I asked one of our little rescued girls if it had done her any good yet, coming to live with us? "Yes," she replied; "I've been saved.' "How, and when?" The child of eleven said so simply, "When Mr. Sankey sang 'One by one,' and 'She touched the hem of his garment'; since then I've bin so happy, my sins are all taken away." On inquiry, I found that her life testified to a change of heart.

Mr. Sankey's first solo this evening is, "A Stranger at the door," with a chorus, "Let Him in." How ennobling and softening such utterances are; how they have hushed up those low, common rants sung at every corner!—even the whistling of the street boys has a higher lift in it. Ask, in prayer, that all the hymn-singing may lead to decision and new birth. After prayer Mr. Sankey gives out, "Over the line," and tells the touching story of the young American and Major Malan, which, as related on a platform, a young lady turned into verse and handed it to the reporter.

Next day, when speaking to many of the dear women as they poured forth from the hall, a young woman said: "We've had joy in our house; I told the story about 'Over the Line' to my only brother, and when he came down to breakfast this morning he exclaimed, 'Oh, mother, I've not slept a wink all night, but I'm "Over the Line;" the question is settled, and now I am saved.'" The faces of this mother and daughter beamed with joy.

8 p.m.—Mr. Moody asked that No. 400 might be sung, the men to sing the chorus. He told an incident of a man at Baltimore trying to drown this hymn by drinking whisky, still he could not forget the words of the chorus, "Come! come! come!" Thus when the attention of the congregation had been arrested, the preacher introduced his text, "Come." For half an hour the listening is intense; not a face is averted; all seemed to be drinking in the words of life.

8.30.—Mr. Moody asks the Christians to get down among the people. We pass with others into the nearest aisle, and find it easy to address first one and then another. A man asks us to speak to his wife. As we whisper in her ear she looks most miserable. We invite her to accompany us to the inquiry-room; she does so, followed by a friend, who also looks condemned and miserable. As we reached the inquiry-room we found every seat filled. We turned up a basket lying in the midst of a heap of sawdust; one of the mothers sat down, and soon, forgetful of all surroundings, we three women are kneeling together giving thanks that the eyes of their understanding have been opened, and that they are willing to come to Jesus just as they are. The weary load of sin had been removed; now they went away to try and win their children, and tell how they had entered into peace.

Blessed, happy after-meetings—heart to heart work, with "angels hovering round," envying us our privilege of "repeating the story o'er and o'er"! On leaving the large hall we hear workers comparing notes. "Mine has been a deeply-interesting case," &c. Others, with Bible in hand, are still endeavouring to show how the mystery is revealed when the heart yields and the poor sinner asks for mercy.

Truly, the weeks of continued prayer by the Stratford Christians have enabled the preacher to speak with power, and the answer in the conversions of many souls has brought glory to God. Dear reader! continue in daily prayer for these tens of thousands now being brought under the sound of the Gospel. Pray, too, that the evangelists and their helpers may be sustained in body and mind under the constant strain.

We London workers are all requiring more fellow-labourers. From our own Mission numbers of young men are now in Africa and other parts of the earth, who were revived and thrust into the fields that are white. Again, we are expecting devoted men and women as the fruits of this work, who will join us and be willing for any service. In Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey we have precept and example blended, one aim and object—to bring souls to Christ. They are wise and self-reliant, urging upon all Christian to be "out and out" for the Lord Jesus Christ. God honours them in meeting the great need of these thousands. All can behold, night after night, the slain among the enemies of our blessed Gospel.

All classes are being reached, even to the lowest of the low. The poor street waifs come back from the meetings awakened. Men and women with hard hands, boys and girls, are seen as never before, solemnly determined to speak for their Master to others of their own age. Whole families are being made happy. Many coming from the country to visit their friends in London are caught in the Gospel net, and return rejoicing. It is a time for great thanksgiving.

By Rev. WILLIAM H. BOOTH.

In "Methodist Recorder."

This Mission, which has been the most successful yet held in London, has just closed, and the American Evangelists are now in full swing at New Cross. We had full opportunity of judging both the men and their methods during their visit to London in 1875. The favourable impression then made has been immensely deepened during the past three weeks. If numerical attendance is a fair indication of aroused interest in religion, then Stratford has never been so aroused before. There were seldom less than 6000 persons in the West Ham Hall at night; sometimes there were nearly 7000. Overflow meetings were also held each evening at the Congregational Church, into which as many as 2000 were sometimes crowded.

No doubt the charm of the singing, the novelty of the services, and the fame of the preacher sufficiently account for the large congregations which assembled night after night. But none of these factors, either separately or collectively, could produce the blessed and wonderful results which have been unmistakeably produced upon the minds and in the lives of not only hundreds, but thousands of men and women of all sorts and conditions. When we say that upwards of 3000 names have been sent in by the workers to the committee as those of persons who entered the inquiry-room at Mr. Moody's invitation as anxious inquirers concerning the Way of Life, we shall not be understood to affirm that all these are converted, or that they will be additions to Church life; but without doubt a large proportion did leave the room at peace with God. To our minds, the most interesting and impressive side of the whole movement is seen only in the inquiry-room. There one comes into contact with soul agony, with life tragedies, with perplexing mental entanglements, and with sad, sad stories of sin-sick prodigals, weary of the far-off land, and just waiting to be led home. The writer has spoken with infidels, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, Christadelphians, as well as church and chapel-goers of all kinds. And a more soul-refreshing work it is impossible to imagine.

At Stratford there have been one or two features of special interest. Some 3000 railway-men are employed at the Great Eastern Works. These men have attended in large numbers, and as special seats have been reserved for them each evening right in front of Mr. Moody, their presence has always added a serious, earnest element to the appearance of the dense mass of human faces before the platform. Many of these men have been soundly converted. In one case we met with, the husband found the Saviour at the Sunday morning service, and the wife came in the afternoon, found her way to the inquiry-room, and went home rejoicing in the favour of God.

But the most unusual feature in connection with this Mission has been the presence night after night of a considerable number of professed infidels. Two nights before Mr. Moody commenced his work Mr. Bradlaugh addressed a crowded meeting of his friends and supporters in the Town-hall. There were some thousands unable to get inside, so eager was the desire to hear him. Many who were then his disciples are now disciples of a better Master, and the leader of the Cromwell Club, under whose auspices Mr. Bradlaugh lectured, has not only attended the services every night for the last week, but actually invited Mr. Moody to his home to tea. Mr. Moody went, and when he came on to the platform he brought the man and his daughter with him, and gave them seats by his side. Mr. Moody assured us that the confidence of the infidels in their position had been thoroughly shaken. The evening service, when he specially addressed them from the words, "Their rock is not as our Rock," was one of the most remarkable and powerful we have ever attended. We were not at all surprised that one, at least, who came in a professed atheist went home a happy and humble believer.

One of the most interesting cases we met with was that of a Roman Catholic, a mother of a large family, who has been thoroughly awakened but found it difficult to get rid of the intellectual fables and superstitions of a lifetime in a few hours. She was in such a state of mental distraction and uncertainty that she told us she felt sure she would lose her reason unless she found some sure footing. A night or two after, when Mr. Moody had been speaking on the word "Trust," I shook hands with her, and she assured me with deep feeling and quiet confidence that she was trusting, and had found rest at last. As she unburdened her heart and told us in the inquiry-room of her difficulties in shaking off the yoke of Popery, we understood, I think as never before, what a terrible master-piece of the devil that system of superstition and priestly tyranny must be to those who live under its baleful shadow.

Of course, the question will be asked—and very properly asked—"What about the future? Will the converts stand? Will they be gathered into the churches?" We have only to say that if they are not it will not be Mr. Moody's fault. He has most emphatically avowed himself as not only a member but an officer of a Christian church, and in full sympathy with the churches. Every care has been taken to ascertain the name and address of every inquirer, as well as the church or chapel (if any) which they usually attend. These will be thoroughly visited under the direction of the central committee, and every effort will be made to house them. The inquiry-room has been managed by Mr. J. E. K. Studd, who has proved himself as efficient at this work as in captaining the Cambridge University Eleven. We can only rejoice that so many devoted gentlemen and ladies, as well as ministers of all sections of the Church of Christ, have been constrained to rally round these plain but God-anointed ambassadors of Christ, and consecrate their gifts of social influence to this the grandest work in which mortal man can engage —that of winning souls.

A Y.M.C.A. FOR STRATFORD.

Stratford, at any rate, will have something to show to all the world as a permanent and tangible result of the evangelists' visit. A branch of the Y.M.C.A. was formed on the last day of the Mission. Mr. George Williams presided at the formal inauguration of the young society, and a number of sympathisers, including many of the clergymen and ministers who have been active helpers at West Ham-lane, were present. Mr. Moody, too, was there. With an eye to the future of the young converts, the evangelist pointed out that something much more extensive would have to be done if the many artisans and working men who have been influenced for good during these past weeks are to be shepherded and cared for. In accordance with this suggestion it was without delay resolved to erect in connection with the Y.M.C.A. a Conference Hall for the holding of united Gospel meetings, and for various objects of a cognate nature. One friend, said Mr. Moody, had generously promised the free gift of an excellent site, and it only remained for other friends to subscribe the sum that would be needed for the erection of the buildings.

A goodly sum was promised on the spot, and we understand that since the close of the meetings other amounts have flowed in, so that the project is in a fair way to speedy realisation. It is hoped that the new Conference Hall may be erected befor the close of the London Mission, so that the evangelists may be present at the opening and thus share in the joy of those whom they have made joyful.

THE NEW CROSS MEETINGS.

Crossing the river once more the evangelists have found their next field of labour at New Cross. The New Cross-road Hall stands on an open space, on the south side of the great highway leading from London to Greenwich. It is in the centre of a populous middle-class neighbourhood; being near several railway stations, it is very accessible, not only from the city but from the south-eastern provinces. The opening meeting on the afternoon of Tuesday week was largely attended, and since then the crowds that flocked to the hall every day, and all day on Sunday, have been enormous. The human tide seems to rise higher and higher in each successive district.

Mr. Sankey, having unfortunately contracted a cold at Stratford, has been laid aside for the most part of the past week. He was present and sang at the opening meeting in the New Cross Hall, but for the rest of the week his voice has not been heard, much to the disappointment of the great crowds. This week we hope he may be able to be at his accustomed post. Despite this drawback, there has been no diminution in the attendance, or in the interest. The key-note struck by Mr. Moody in his first address was on the need of the Holy Spirit's power to give efficacy to the Gospel message spoken or sung. The subsequent course of the meetings has surely proved that God Himself is working mightily among the people in this neighbourhood.

At one of his earliest Bible-lectures Mr. Moody took up the subject of "Revivals." We do not know of any recent opposing utterance that may have evoked his defence of the movement; anyhow, it was well fitted to disarm such opposition, if it exists, and to provide the friends of the work with ample material from which to meet critics and objectors. He said that opposition was to be expected from the keepers of publichouses and others who were losing the hope of their gains, but it seemed rather hard that good people should not be in the fullest sympathy with a movement that is saving so many people from the dominion of sin. So many appear to be afraid that things will not be done "in the regular order." The great movements under John Wesley and Whitefield were departures from the ordinary routine, and so indeed are all great awakenings of religious interest. When the Holy Ghost begins to work He will mark out channels for Himself. There is plenty of "order" in the cemetery, but there is no life. Talking of Wesley, Mr. Moody thanked God that the work of that mighty preacher was still going on. There are now perhaps 30,000 Wesleyan ministers and 80,000 local preachers on the American Continent alone. If one method does not succeed, why should the Church not try another? The methods that were successful fifty years ago may have lost their force now. Let us not be afraid of new methods and new plans. People are stretching their necks, and asking where are the fruits of the Mission in London nine years ago. Well, he thought it would not be easy to say where the fruits were not. London is the centre of the whole world. When at Stratford, a man told him they had at the meetings some from India, some from Africa, some from Canada, and some from America. The fruits of the London work in 1875 are to be found in every part of the city, and in almost every town in England. When the meetings were at Clapham, a lady helped in the mission who had worked in the Camberwell Hall in 1875. She took the names and addresses of those with whom she conversed in the inquiry-room. She has kept up a correspondence with them all these years; at Christmas she sends them cards, not one out of the thirty-five has gone back. That is pretty good testimony, and it is only one instance out of many. Mr. Moody quoted many other authentic facts, proving the permanence of the past work. Probably, however, no array of facts will satisfy those who are anxious to give some excuse for not joining in the work. Meantime, the stream of blessing flows on unhindered. Many dark lives are being lighted up with a new found life and joy; many hearts and homes are being transformed, day by day; the Gospel, so faithfully, simply, and affectionately presented to the people, is continually proving itself, as of old, the power of God unto salvation.

LAST SUNDAY

was a very busy day in the neighbourhood of the hall. Early in the morning Mr. Moody stimulated the workers by an address on the Good Samaritan. At 11 o'clock the vast congregation, composed largely of men, was much moved by the evangelist's presentation of the love of God. The same can be said of the afternoon meeting for women, to whom Mr. Moody discoursed of rest for the weary soul. In the evening the question "Where art thou?" was sounded out in the presence of a packed audience of men.

Perhaps the outstanding feature of the day was the dialogue at the evening meeting between Mr. Moody and Pastor Theodore Monod, of Paris, who was in London en route for Edinburgh, to attend a conference there for the promotion of spiritual life. The replies of the Pastor to Mr. Moody's questions we hope to give at length in our next issue. Pastor Monod addressed overflow meetings afternoon and evening in a tent that has been erected in an adjoining field. Mr. Scroggie had good overflow meetings in the Wesleyan Chapel, where he has also preached during the week to those who failed to enter the great hall. The work has taken a deep hold at New Cross, and there seems every reason to believe that the Mission there will be equally memorable with those that preceded it at Clapham and Stratford.

CHILDREN'S SERVICES.

The services for children at Messrs. Moody and Sankey's halls on Saturday afternoons have been conducted by different friends connected with the Children's Special Service Mission The three at Stratford were taken by Messrs. E. J. Kennedy, E. H. Kerwin, and H. Hutchinson, and the attendance rose from 1800 on the first Saturday to 2500 on the last of the series.

Mr. J. W. Jordan conducted the first of these services at the New Cross Hall on Saturday last, and between 4000 and 5000 must have been present. Mr. Jordan gave an acrostic address on the word "Gift." The attention of the children at these large gatherings has been excellent. On each occasion an after-meeting has been held, when a very short special address has been given, and a number of Christian workers have also been engaged in speaking to the children individually.

Some Results of the Cambridge Mission.

It is frequently asked by those who are sceptical about the work of the American evangelists, "Are the results permanent? Is not the impression produced ephemeral and transient?" The following facts, coming within the range of the personal knowledge of a Christian graduate resident in Cambridge, and furnished by him to a correspondent, speak for themselves, and supply a sufficient answer to the question. It will be remembered that it is now fifteen months or more since the Cambridge Mission, so that the cases referred to have been fairly tested by the lapse of time.

(1) An undergraduate member of —— College, who had previously been an avowed sceptic, was brought to the light by Mr. Moody's preaching. He is placed in the first class at all his College mathematical examinations, so that his conversion has not made him lazy. Since the Mission he has been a diligent attendant at the means of grace, and an earnest teacher in the Sabbath-school.

(2) A graduate of the same College, who has distinguished himself both in his College and in the University, was "born again" during the Mission. He has since taken a prominent part in connection with one of the Cambridge congregations, and is now studying for the ministry of the Presbyterian Church.

(3) A third member of the same College, once careless and flippant, was converted at the same time. He is now preparing, under the direction of one of the first of English theologians, for the Church of England ministry. Everyone noticed the immense change in the tone and bearing of these three men during the whole period of their residence after their conversion.

(4) An undergraduate of —— College was, prior to Mr. Moody's visit, a noisy, swaggering fellow. Since then he has altered entirely, and has prevailed upon at least five men to become devoted Christians along with him. He has also taken a leading part in the religious work of Cambridge.

(5) Two other members of the same college —foreigners—were brought to Christ under Mr. Moody's preaching. They have continued genuine, consistent Christians.

(6) In —— College, a meeting of Christian undergraduates has been maintained three times a week ever since the Mission. The excellent results produced in this college by Mr. Moody's visit are well attested.

These cases represent the personal knowledge of an individual Christian of the results of the Mission. If all Christian members, of the University of Cambridge were to collate and collect the permanent results of which they have cognizance, we should be confronted by a formidable array of well-authenticated evidence. Surely facts like these ought to make the most sceptical critic pause and consider.

BARBICAN JEWISH MISSION.—Mr. P. Warschouski, assisted by two missionaries and a staff of lady workers, are encouraged in their work among the Jews of the east central district of the metropolis. The meetings and classes are well attended and with good results. The report may be had from the Superintendent, 6, Farleigh-road, Stoke Newington, N.

EAST-END TRACT SOCIETY.—On the 12th inst., the annual meeting of this Society was held at the Town-hall, Poplar; Sir Arthur Cotton filled the chair. Mr. Fuller, the superintendent, stated that there were seventy different friends working in connection with the Mission. During the year, a large number of portions of Scripture, almanacks, books, and tracts, had been distributed. Many ships had been visited and also several thousand houses. Attention had been given to different classes of men in the East-end, and a Band of Hope had been established. Services were regularly held in the Mission-room. The Chairman, Mr. W. Green, and Rev. J. W. Atkinson, spoke at some length on the good work being done by Mr. Fuller and his helpers, and commended the work to the hearty support of all present. The address of the Society is 34, Cawdor-street, Poplar, E.

Miss Elizabeth Beach.

THE following touching narrative appears in Galignani's Messenger:—

"The telegraph brings the sad news that among those lost by the distressing wreck of the City of Columbus was Miss Elizabeth Beach, who was beloved by a wide circle of friends in Paris.

"Miss Beach came to Paris to study French. Her personal attractions and her intellectual gifts made for her many friends. But the charm of her grace and culture was crowned by a spirit of earnest, happy, all-pervading piety which was irresistible. To such a one life is but an unbroken opportunity for a helpful Christian influence. Wishing to perfect herself in the knowledge and practice of the French language, she secured as teacher one of the best professors in Paris. He was an unbeliever, but at once interested in her sincerity. As subjects for French conversation he asked her to recount to him anything that had most interested her. She listened attentively to Pasteur Persier, and one Monday morning repeated all she could of his sermon. The Professor was interested not only in the language but in the matter, asking her where she had heard that. The third Monday he was still more impressed, and exclaimed, 'I must hear that preacher for myself.' He did so; not only once, but many times, and became a changed man.

"The MacAll Mission offered to Miss Beach a wide field of effort. Returning to America she could but tell to her friends the story of the work in a foreign land, which had so filled her heart. These friends were so delighted that they begged her to repeat the story to ladies here and there, whom they would gather to listen. To her surprise, even against her protest, this frail girl found herself addressing large audiences in many of the cities of the United States. And everywhere those who heard were charmed with her and with her story. Large contributions were made to support and enlarge the work of the MacAll Mission. Auxiliaries were formed which from that time have continued, and in some cases largely increased their gifts. And last spring the results of her campaign took shape in the organisation of a National Society named 'The America MacAll Association.'

"But under the strain of so great labour her strength gave way. Tenderly friends cared for her, and provided all that love and skill could suggest for her comfort and recovery. Lately her gain was marked and hopeful. To escape the rigour of a New England winter and spring, she was placed on board of the City of Columbus, to be borne, as they thought, to the sunny south.

"Her influence in France and for France has been great, and there are not only many who deeply mourn her loss: there must be those who are roused by the knowledge of what even a tourist may accomplish for strangers in a strange land." WILLIAM W. NEWELL, Jun.

WAIFS AND STRAYS.—The annual meeting of the society in connection with the Church of England for providing houses for waifs and strays, was held on the 12th inst. at the Mansion House, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor. Rev. G. H. Woolley stated that the number of children under the care of the committee was 184, making a total of 238 since the commencement, two years ago. The Bishop of Bedford said that drink was at the root of a great deal of the poor children's misery, and urged the claims of the society for increased support. Bishop Claughton and several clergymen also spoke to the same effect.

BE YE ALSO READY.—A series of evangelistic services was held from the 11th to 15th inst., at Salisbury, conducted by Rev. J. R. Wood, of Upper Holloway Chapel. He was accompanied by an intimate friend, a deacon of his church, Mr. J. D. Freeman. On Wednesday, in the inquiry-room of Mr. Short's chapel, Mr. Freeman was conversing with the people; whilst kneeling down in prayer he was suddenly seized with paralysis, and taken to the hotel where he had been staying. Medical aid was called in, but it was of no avail; and although he remained in a partially conscious state he was unable to speak, and expired on Thursday morning at 4 o'clock.

The Busy One's Need.

'TIS well to dart the arrow glance to Heaven,
Amid the toil that fills the busy day;
To know that Heaven returns the glances given.
But is a glance enough? Nay, come away;
It may be when the early dawn is breaking,
Come from earth's midnight shadows to the light,
It may be when the shades of eve are shaking
Their long black pinions, resting for the night.

Whene'er thou can'st, away, away, my brothers!
And speak with thy great Father for awhile;
Unloose the bands that thy free spirit smothers,
Relax thy brow beneath his gracious smile.
I know the storm beats high, that nature labours
And strains her utmost to outride the blast;
But thou art faint, and like the Roman sailors,
Must even pause till thou shalt break thy fast.

'Tis for thy health. Say not the time is wasted;
Thy spirit starves, and therefore thou art weak;
Thou wilt once more be strong, when thou hast tasted
The Living Bread. Rise, and thy portion seek.
Oh! there are many spirits faint and drooping
Beneath the stress of cares that never cease;
They cannot stay to see the Guardian stooping
To breathe o'er the worn worker heavenly peace.

Rest, busy friend. This everlasting stirring
Disturbs the foul defilement of thy soul,
Mingles the good with ill, till, ever erring,
The streams that once were fair corrupted roll.
Oh! stay that clacking mill, for ever going,
Until the stream grows bright with beams from Heaven;
'Twill gather strength, and by and by o'erflowing,
Thy single stream shall do the work of seven.

WILLIAM LUFF.

Mission Work in Baltimore.

CAPT. WM. BETSWORTH, of Baltimore, who was won to Christ in the meetings held by Mr. Moody, while he "rested" (?) there during the winter of 1879 and 1880, sends the following interesting account of work for Christ among the lost in that city:—

Baltimore, December 26, 1883.—The Master's work is going right along. The Moody converts have become strong bands of soldiers for Christ in many parts of our city. Many of the old ministers of the Gospel say that the lay workers among the Moody converts are doing more, as rare instruments in God's hands in reaching a class of non-churchgoers, than all the churches in Baltimore. In one of our little Mission halls we have held meetings now about two years; there have been over 200 converts to Christ, who are standing firm, and for whom homes have been furnished by Christian workers. Many sailors who have confessed Christ have gone to sea to tell of the glad tidings of great joy all over the world. The Holy Spirit is wonderfully blessing our work among fallen men and women. There are many great miracles by the power of the Holy Spirit, and strong witnesses for Christ.

Mr. E. W. Bliss is doing a great work here, and many have been converted. Our open-air meetings during the summer were a success. The Sunday-schools in the Mission-halls are filled; the Mizpah Band has done good service in their hall, as well as holding many meetings in the churches. I sail for Florida on the 29th to spend the winter, and I hope to be a light for Christ, that some one who is in the dark may be led by me as an instrument in God's hands. Pray for me, that I may be helped with the mighty power of the Holy Spirit.—Gospel Union News.

AGED PILGRIMS' FRIEND SOCIETY.—The report of this excellent society states that there are now 1011 pensioners on the books; 98 receive ten guineas annually, 319 seven, 488 five, and the rest five shillings per month. The benefits of this society are only intended for the aged Christian poor of Christ's flock who are over three score years of age. The Secretary is Mr. J. E. Hazelton, 33, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

Notes and Comments.

THE acceptance by Canon Fleming of the post of Hon. Secretary to the Evangelical Alliance is a fact in which all lovers of Christian unity will rejoice. It can scarcely fail to be a means of still further breaking down the walls of separation which have so long stood between those of varied ecclesiastical proclivities.

The wonderful awakening in many minds in Russia to the value and importance of the sacred Scriptures, appears to be affecting Jews as well as Gentiles. A missionary from that country has just told us of the rise and growth of a sect called Biblical Jews, who have quite renounced the Talmud, and are diligently studying the books of the Old Testament. Once the Jew is led to receive the pure word of inspiration apart from Rabbinical tradition, even though it be only that known as the "Law and the Prophets," we may soon expect to find him inquiring about the New Testament, without which the Old is incomplete.

A striking little tractate, entitled "England's Woe" (Partridge & Co., 1d.), has just been published by Rev. C. G. Baskerville, M.A., of Birmingham, in the interest of the Temperance cause. It is based on Proverbs xxiii., which is aptly described as the yearning of a parent's heart for the true welfare of a beloved child, whom he warns against the evils of intemperance in eating and drinking, and against sensuality. The facts adduced, and the lessons inculcated in this tractate, are especially noteworthy, and we commend them as calculated to be eminently useful.

Among other facts referred to by Mr. Baskerville, is one asserted by Archdeacon Farrar, that "in four hours in one evening, in one city, 36,803 women were seen going into public-houses." The statement is scarcely credible by those unacquainted with the true state of things, and reveals a painful aspect of our social conditions. Dr. Forbes Winslow's statement before a Select Committee of the House of Commons is equally startling. He said: "I know numbers of ladies moving in good society who are never sober, and are often brought home by the police. They are wives of men in very high social position." This is no time for truce with strong drink and its advocates.

A meeting for day-school and pupil-teachers was lately convened at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Fielden Thorp, York. Mrs. Bradley, of London, addressed them as an old teacher, urging the importance of their personal influence and example in this burning question, and pressing on them the duty of total abstinence. All who were not previously abstainers took the pledge before leaving. Many inquiries for information on special points indicated the hold which Temperance principles had on some. The kind host offered any head-mistress present, who would use it, a copy of Dr. Richardson's recent valuable addition to reliable Temperance literature, called "Brief Notes for Temperance Teachers." Seeing the ignorance as to the hereditary as well as the present physical evils of drink among parents, and the fact that so many are ensnared by the fatal habit of drinking, the responsibility of all teachers, and the value of their sound teaching to the children in our schools, must be evident.

An interesting fact concerning Arabi, the leader of the recent insurrection in Egypt, has come to our knowledge. A missionary lately showed a lady, through whom we learned the fact, the Bible used by Arabi before his flight. It was interlined, and bore other marks of having been well used. How far this bears fruit we cannot say, but where the seed is well sown, a harvest sooner or later may be looked for.

One of the most gratifying circumstances connected with Messrs. Moody and Sankey's present campaign in London is the permanent unsectarian and evangelistic work to which it is giving rise. At Stratford, as at Wandsworth, a Mission Hall of large dimensions is to be erected. The work is to be conducted under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, a branch of which has just been formed at Stratford.

The advances made in various directions by Protestantism in France, as well as other signs of the times, are causing the Pope considerable anxiety. In addition to addressing an encyclical letter to the French bishops, the Pontiff has summoned them all to Rome, that he may confer with them. The object of the Vatican is said to be to arouse the Romish spirit in France, in order to counteract the efforts of all who are opposed to that faith. Whatever course is adopted, it is too late to arrest the progress of Evangelical truth on the Continent; and the fact that Romanists are so vigorous in their opposition will only stimulate the zeal of those who are at work for the true Gospel of God.

A Chinese convert recently baptized at Kioto, on a profession of his faith in Christ, said, during his examination as a candidate, "Many dislike Christianity because of the Cross, but to my mind the Cross is the distinctive glory of Christianity. Buddhism and Confucianism have nothing like the Cross, and so I make the Cross very important." It should be very strengthening to our own faith in the power of the Gospel, to find converts abroad thus glorying in the Cross of Christ. This Chinese brother is seventy-three years of age, and has become a marked man in his own village by adopting the practice of prayer and Scripture-reading in his family.

The telegrams from General Gordon during the past few days have been such as to cause devout thankfulness, and give ground for hope that he will be able to bring about the pacification of the Soudan. The absence of hurry and anxiety, the calm confidence and courage, which his brief messages indicate, convey a lesson that many of us may learn with advantage. Animated by faith in God and a thirst for righteousness, "one shall chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight."

We often stand in the way of our own success, and impede the work of Christ, by our want of faith and lack of quiet waiting upon God. We are forgetful that the race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong, and that sometimes, at least, our strength is to sit still. Worry not only is not work, but hinders work, and sadly injures the worker. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee, because he trusteth in Thee," is a truth for to-day and for ourselves.

We are asked to publish the following communication:—

"The Young Women's Christian Association desire to warn the Christian public against a man calling himself Rev. S. B Carey Lee. He goes about asking young women to join him in a Mission, which he calls the 'Church Evangelistic Army.' He is a man about 30 years of age, of middle height, thin, and of a reddish complexion. After gaining the confidence of several young women, who have gone forth to help him in his work, he has proved to be unworthy of their trust. It is hoped that all Christian institutes, homes, schools, and young women in any situation whatever, will be on their guard, and enter into no communication with him, under any circumstances."

The subject of over-pressure in education continues to demand and receive attention. Dr. Crichton Brown, Superintendent of the West Riding Lunatic Asylum, has just uttered the following note of warning:—

"It seems to me high time for a declaration of rights on behalf of helpless children, and on behalf of future generations also, whom, if we are not careful, we shall load with a burden more grievous than the national debt, a burden of degeneration and disease. I have encountered many lamentable instances of derangement of health, disease of the brain, and even death, resulting from enforced evening study in the case of young children, with the nervous excitement and loss of sleep which it so often induces; and I am fully persuaded that even when it does no perceptible injury to health, it is inimical to true progress. It implies a maximum of labour with a minimum of result."

Parents do well to see that their children are taught on common-sense principles and with a view to their welfare, instead of for the gratification of teachers whose one object is, for their own benefit, to pass as many heads as possible under the examiner's rod.

In replying to a deputation from the London School Board last week, Mr. Mundella admitted the necessity of diminishing the pressure as to needlework in girls' schools. He urged that needlework should be taught usefully and not as a fine art, not as for sempstresses, but as for thrifty wives and mothers. This is the great point to aim at—that in all departments practical and thrifty, rather than artificial and ornamental results, should be secured.

A correspondent of The Daily News has called attention to the increasing prevalence of card gambling by passengers in railway carriages. The practice is not uncommon on some suburban lines; it proves a strong temptation to City clerks and others who are thus necessarily exposed to its fascination. The writer states that he saw one young man, a clerk in a bank, lose 12s. in about half an hour on one journey. In the interest of public morality, and on behalf of thousands of youths exposed to danger by this habit, public opinion should be aroused and authority exercised to put it down.

Commenting on a book just written by Mr. Mark Thornhill, on "The Clergy and Vivisection," The Spectator says: "We believe, with him, that the question raised is virtually the controversy between Materialism and Christianity." This is a view of the case which reflection fully establishes, and which furnishes an additional argument of great weight with all who are concerned for the maintenance of truth. It is a strange fact, that a practice which, as Mr. Thornhill says, "deadens all natural feelings of compassion," should have any advocates among those who believe in a merciful and beneficent Creator.

We are sorry to find that Rev. Wm. Booth has lost his appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Stephen, having to give up possession of the Eagle Tavern at a rental of £100 a year during the remainder of the lease. The result is that the Eagle finally reverts to its former use as a place for the sale of strong drink, and Mr. Booth is condemned in the costs of the litigation.

The Methodist has been discussing the question of raffling at bazaars. One correspondent gives the following reasons why it should not be allowed: (1) If a citizen, because it is illegal. (2) If a Christian, because it is a species of gambling. (3) If a Methodist, because it counteracts the spread of Scriptural holiness, which it is the avowed aim of Methodism to promote. Another correspondent adds, that it hinders people from buying, and that it is injurious to public morals. The practice is so essentially and manifestly unscriptural and evil in its tendency, that it is passing strange any Christian community can be found to tolerate it. Yet there are cases where it is unblushingly resorted to, and objectors regarded as puritanical and squeamish in their ideas.

Medical missionaries are more and more felt to be the want of our times. We observe that the British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews has issued a special appeal in this direction. The committee are anxious to have two missionaries in each field of labour, and that one of them may be a medical missionary. Openings are constantly presenting themselves for fresh work, and men are also forthcoming, but lack of funds bars the way. It would indeed be a grand thing if the £10,000 asked for could be raised for so important a purpose. Everywhere, and for all races, to combine the art of healing the body with endeavour to win the soul, is a wise and scriptural plan, and certain of success.

Persecution is not extinct. Giants Pagan and Pope have not quite lost their power. In China heathen fanaticism not seldom bursts out, and wreaks its hate upon followers of Christ. The Freeman cites painful instances of this from Mrs. Bishop's book, entitled "The Golden Chersonese, and the Way thither." One case is that of a native convert who was seized by the mandarin of his district, and by a cruel mob clothed in garments dipped in oil, and then burnt to death. It is well for us to remember that our brethren in China are exposed to dangers like these that they and the work they have undertaken may be oftener on our hearts when we are bowed at the throne of grace.

In Spain, too, despite the increased facilities afforded of late years for Gospel effort, the difficulties and perils which attend Christian workers are very great. We read, for example, of a village called Camunas, in the province of La Mancha, in the very heart of the country, where a little community of Protestant Christians has existed for fifteen years past, subject to cruel persecution worthy of the days of the infamous Inquisition. The law refuses them protection or redress, and so they suffer in silence, and bitter indeed is their outward lot, although they are spoken of as firm and unwavering in their trust in God. Be it ours to plead with renewed earnestness for all who suffer for righteousness' sake, and for the speedy dawn of the day when all shall know the Lord.

We are glad to hear that a second vessel is being fitted up by Mr. Cook, of Gosport, for Mission work. The Annie left a few days ago for the usual evangelistic work among the fishermen on the west coast of England, and either she or the new vessel will shortly sail for France, in continuance of the very encouraging work already begun there.

W. O. M. writes: Will you please tell me what you take the meaning of 1 Peter iii. 21, to be . . . . "baptism doth also now save us." It cannot mean that we are saved by baptism, because Peter in his first Epistle i. 19 says we are redeemed "with the precious blood of Christ," and there are very many other passages to the same effect.

Baptism in water is the outward symbol of that work of the Holy Spirit by which we are baptized into the death of Christ, and rise into newness of life (1 Rom. vi. 1—4; Col. ii. 12). The Apostle Peter shows that as the waters of the flood were death to the old world, and the eight of Noah's family were saved out of the old and sinful world by means of the water, and brought into a new world and a new covenant with God: so the believer, by that work of the Holy Ghost, of which baptism is the outward and visible sign, is baptized into the death of Christ, and rises into his new life. For Peter says that baptism saves by the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The worst fallacies are travesties of truth. Baptismal Regeneration is a soul-destroying lie, if we only mean by baptism an outward ordinance performed by a man; whether the subject be an infant or an adult, and whether the water be applied to the person, or the person be immersed in the water. But Baptismal Regeneration is an essential truth if by baptism we mean that operation of the Holy Spirit by which the believing soul is "buried with Christ by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." This is that "one baptism" of which all saints are partakers, and which is one of the seven elements of that unity of the Spirit, which, with all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love, we are exhorted diligently to endeavour to keep, in order to our walking worthily of the heavenly calling wherewith we are called. "For in one Spirit were we ALL baptized into one body; . . . and were ALL made to drink of one Spirit."

It is very refreshing from time to time to meet with cases of extreme suffering and need, in which the sufferer is not only upheld by the grace of God, but enabled to exult in the Lord. A correspondent sends to us an instance of this in the case of a dear child of God who is totally blind. So afflicted is she in body as to be unable to sit up in her bed, and she is often in extreme pain. Poor in circumstances, she is yet a source of blessing to many through the testimony she continually bears to the Saviour's presence and power. She has learned to write, and that with marvellous skill; so by her pen as well as her voice she bears witness to her Lord. We subjoin one or two extracts from her letters furnished by our correspondent. They are redolent of faith and love, and will perhaps cheer some troubled souls and help to animate their confidence in God.

Our suffering sister writes: "Oh, what a grand thing it is to be an ambassador for Christ! but is it not even more blessed still to be an imitator of his example, whose only will was to glorify the Father? I think how rejoiced He must be to see his redeemed ones seeking in all things to follow in his footsteps. Oh, what encouragement He gives to his followers in these his own words of promise, 'If any man serve Me, him will my Father honour!'" And, again, she says: "I am sure, from growing, happy experience, that the nearer we live to God the greater and richer are the privileges He gives us to enjoy. It is to his goodness and mercy that we owe everything, and the very stones would cry out against us if we withheld the praise and glory which, at best, we feel is all too imperfectly given." Such language from one in such circumstances may well stimulate our courage and excite our emulation.

We are requested to say that the Church Army are in need of a large number of earnest young men to train for the work. This is done free of expense, and the workers are sent forth as home missionaries amongst the poor of our land. Possibly there are some in London stirred by Mr. Moody's work who may be glad to know of such an opportunity. Full particulars can be had of the Secretary, 21, John-street, Adelphi, W.C.

We would direct the special attention of our readers to the announcement elsewhere of a Conferenee on Foreign Missions, to be held at Powis Hall, Powis-gardens, Westbourne-park, on March 18—20. Various aspects of Missions to the heathen will be dealt with by those who have been in the field, and are therefore able to speak from practical experience. We trust the occasion will not only be one of individual profit, but will be the means of awakening a deeper solicitude for the evangelisation of the world.

Rev. John Hunter, in a recent sermon at Hull on "Christ and the Working Classes," said a true thing, and one that needs frequent enforcement, when he asserted that "Christ made every man sacred, and his doctrine of brotherhood struck at the root of all caste and class distinction. He never thought of one man as being better than another on account of anything external." The worship of wealth and respect of persons which are so common in religious circles, finding their way even into church-life, are wholly foreign to the genius of Christianity, and accounts, in no small degree, for the alienation of the masses from our places of worship and from the truth itself.

Our friend Mr. S. G. Prout, of Ilfracombe, has decided upon going out to Egypt for Christian Mission and ambulance work among the British troops and others engaged in the present campaign. He purposes taking with him a good supply of Gospels, books and tracts in English, Arabic, Coptic, and other languages. He will be glad of the addresses of any Christian officers or residents in the neighbourhood of Suakin. Mr. Prout goes out mainly at his own expense, but as there will be many charges in addition to his travelling expenses, and much distress requiring some relief, he will be thankful for the help of our readers. We most cordially commend him to their prayers and sympathy. His address is: care of Mr. R. Gillespie, 11, Leyland-road, Lee, S.E.

Special Services in Theatres, &c.

A SPECIAL social gathering of subscribers and friends interested in the services held in theatres, halls, &c., was held at the Mansion House on the 12th inst., under the presidency of the Lord Mayor. About 700 were present.

The Lord Mayor said that the work had been prosecuted for a quarter of a century, and had been blessed of God in the conversion of many souls. He urged its continued support. Mr. C. M. Sawell, secretary, spoke of the beneficial results of the services to the masses who would not go to hear the Gospel in a church or chapel, and asked for £20,000 for the extension of the work. Lord Shaftesbury animadverted on the cry of "Outcast London," and said he did not think there was such a thing really as Outcast London. London had been sought out for many years, and the agents of the City Mission had gone over every part of it by day and by night. The services hitherto conducted had been greatly blessed, and he hoped those present would respond to the appeal made to them.

Resolutions were passed expressive of the necessity for aggressive effort being put forth for evangelising the people. Addresses were also given by Messrs. H. M. Bompas, F. A. Bevan, G. Williams, and S. A. Blackwood.

Our Sailors and Fishermen.

BY invitation of the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress, a distinguished company of friends interested in the welfare of our sailors and fishermen, were entertained in the Egyptian Hall of the Mansion House on the 14th inst. Upwards of 500 guests responded to the invitation. The evening was chiefly devoted to a descriptive lecture by Mr. E. J. Mather, Secretary of the Mission, illustrated by dissolving views, of "Mission Work Amongst Seamen, Emigrants, and Fishermen from Putney Bridge to the Dogger Bank." Short addresses were delivered, not only by the kind host of the evening, but by Mr. Lowman, one of the Society's missionaries, and who, forty years ago, was mate of the Swan, the first Mission vessel on the Thames, also by Mr. Barnes, for many years a fisherman and until recently master of one of the fish-carrying steamboats that run between the Dogger Bank and Billingsgate.

As we have so frequently had occasion to refer to the very excellent, humane, and evangelistic work carried on by this Mission at so many points of the compass, it will not be necessary that we should attempt even a sketch of Mr. Mather's deeply interesting and instructive address. The true spiritual aim of this Mission is now well recognised; we hope it will be correspondingly well supported financially, so that there may be no lack of means to carry on and expand its operations in spreading the glad tidings of salvation amongst our seamen, fishermen, and emigrants. Mr. Mather instanced the case of a lady in her 100th year, who only a fortnight ago awoke to the fact that old as she was she could yet do something to assuage the hardships of fishing life in the North Sea; she is now busily engaged in knitting woollen cuffs to try and prevent the dreaded sea blisters which are produced by the friction of their oilskins upon their cuffless wrists. The Lady Mayoress was so deeply touched by the facts laid before her through this Mission a few days ago, that she has volunteered to try and find time from her many engagements to knit some cuffs and comforters for the fishermen; some other members of the family are following this excellent example.

Books, magazines, &c., are also much in request by sailors and fishermen, and the secretary will be grateful for any parcels sent to the offices of the Mission, 31, New Bridge-street, Ludgate-circus, E.C. Pamphlets descriptive of the work will be forwarded on application.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for the ensuing week:—Feb. 24, John iv. 31—42; Feb. 25, John iv. 43—54; Feb. 26, John v. 1—13; Feb. 27, John v. 14—24; Feb. 28, John v. 25—35; Feb. 29, John v. 36—47; March 1, John vi. 1—14.

Africa and Christian Missions.

ONE of the most successful of native African Missions is that carried on upon the West Coast near the English Colony, Sierra Leone, in which the agents employed consist entirely of the African race, and which is under the care of the "United Brethren" of America. The American Missionary Association have lately transferred their Mendi Mission, which is in an adjoining district, and is conducted upon the same method, to the "United Brethren," and this has brought the English society known as the Freedmen's Mission Aid Society into co-operation with them. The result of this Mission is most encouraging. There are at present 28 missionaries and helpers engaged, and about 400 brought into church membership. There are 15 stations occupied, and 14 Sunday and day schools established. The whole district is now permeated by the influence of the Gospel, whilst a few years ago it presented nothing but heathenism of the most degrading type. The chiefs from the interior seeing the beneficial results of Christian education, not only gladly welcome the Christian teacher when sent to them, but often come to the missionaries begging for teachers for their people.

A small steamer was lately built in this country for the use of the "Mendi Mission," the cost of which was defrayed by the Sunday-schools of America. In her voyage out a few weeks ago she was overtaken by one of the most terrific storms of the winter, and was compelled to return to Dartmouth, where she must now remain till the spring. The damage and detention will add very materially to her expense, and unless met by special contributions, will greatly interfere with the extension of the Mission this year. On behalf of the Freedmen's Mission Aid Society's appeal to the Christian liberality of the British public, who have already enabled us to do so much in the preparation of the freedmen of America for the work, £2000 is needed to meet this unexpected extra expense, and for immediately extending the work into the exterior from stations already occupied on the coast. Contributions may be sent to Lord Kinnaird, the Treasurer, or Rev. Dr. Bevan, Honorary Secretary, at the office of the Society, 18, Adam-street, Strand, London, W.C.—We are, gentlemen, yours truly,

LETTERS TO EMIGRANTS.—Dear Christian Friends,—May I ask your help in an effort that is being made to reach the emigrants in a vessel bound for Australia in March? We purpose, by God's grace, to send out a packet of clearly and simply written letters telling the Gospel message, to be delivered during the voyage by one of the passengers, who will kindly undertake to do this. I shall be most thankful to receive letters suitable for this purpose by March 1; also, will you pray that this effort may be blessed, and that many lonely and friendless emigrants may be led to the best Friend during their voyage.

WEST CENTRAL HOME.—This Home is a safe and happy one for young and inexperienced girls coming from the country to this great city of temptation. Every care is taken to assist them when launching out in a busy, commercial life in work-rooms, shops, &c. Many have occasion to bless the day they ever came to the Home, not only for the temporal good received, but the spiritual help. There is a Free Registry, where girls can with safety rely on the respectability of the houses to which they are sent. Mid-day dinners are provided at cost price. Much blessing has been the result of the weekly social gatherings. But the work has suffered much lately from lack of means. The work is well known to Mr. Denham Smith and others, who from time to time cheer us on with prayer and sympathy. (Mrs.) E. Bramwell.

"The Son of Livingstone."

DEAR SIR,—Allow me through your columns to allay the anxiety of many friends who are deeply interested in the missionary labours in the Upper Zambesi of my son, F. S. Arnot. Letters have just arrived, from which we learn he has not been taken captive to the Matabele country, as the natives reported; he has, however, suffered much from fever and the unhealthy climate. He writes:—

"I tried to live on it (bruised corn) so long that it produced the most painful and serious results, reducing me to a living skeleton, and this at a time when I neither could get nor keep a dry blanket or mat to lie on, or cover myself with. My first house was wrecked with the storm and rain. The next I got was drenched through the first night I was in it. There I sat for ten weary days of perpetual rain, without food, I may say, with scarce two inches of dry clothes about me. Shut in from the very light of day in that dark, dripping hut, my soul sank within me, and I thought I was enduring the misery of miseries. . . . I have a hard, but happy life here. Many times have I gladly eaten the putrid flesh of some animal or reptile. Often after my arrival, during months of famine, have I lain down on my mat to sleep off the fatigue and pain of hunger, deserted by my servants, and treated with suspicion by the people, and robbed on all occasions. But things took a turn; health revived; more sympathy came from the King and people; and I can only look back upon my short stay in the Barotsi valley with much joy and thankfulness to God."

After going down to Panda-ma-Teuka for supplies, he returned to the Barotsi valley—Lea Lui, the capital—from whence he writes on October 28, 1883, and says, he is "quite happy, plenty of work to do, and, thank God, strength to do it." My son is always called by the natives "The son of Livingstone."

The following is an extract from a more recent letter from Barotsi valley:—

"Already there is a rustling among the leaves; a silent solemnity has taken the place among many at the mentioning of the things of God, instead of loud laughter and profane questioning. You will not fail to tell all those that are praying for Africa about the happy encouragement I have got since coming back again among the people (in Barotsi valley). . . . My heart goes beyond these tribes to the tribes upon tribes, nations upon nations, extending north, west, and east, living to kill and be killed, unknown and knowing nothing. Millions of our fellow-beings know not that there is a God and a Saviour. When told the precious Gospel message of life in their old age which WAS FOR ALL PEOPLE, they marvel at the fact that they have lived so long without having heard it. The heathen cannot understand how it is that those who have known these things so long, and have believed in God and in his Son, have never come before to warn them, and to tell them of the true God. These words come from the very heart of Africa, not the words of one man only, but of many. . . . There are tribes upon tribes open and waiting for the Gospel, though they know it not."—Yours faithfully, W. Arnot.

THE BIBLE AND BIBLE UNIONS.—I would like to call the attention of Christian workers to the "International Bible Reading Association," conducted by the Sunday-school Union. There is a new topic chosen for each week, and the daily readings bear upon it. To my own knowledge, some who for years have not been in the habit of reading God's Word, have joined this Association. The portions selected are suitable and helpful alike to old and young. The address of the hon. secretary is 56, Old Bailey, London, E.C. He will, I am sure, give full information to all who care to write to him. J. D. Kilburn.

Visiting 500 Villages and Hamlets.

SIR,—Several readers of THE CHRISTIAN have lately expressed sympathy with us in the village Mission work. Being thus encouraged, and finding, during our journeyings last summer, that others unknown to us were either doing a similar work or had great sympathy with us, I offer a few facts with reference to last year's work. The presence of Messrs. Moody and Sankey in London reminds me of our earliest efforts nearly nine years ago, with pony and chaise, when the Oxfordshire people were continually asking if we were "the Amerikin gintlemen."

It was our privilege last year to visit over 500 villages and hamlets, leaving books, &c., at almost every house. This is a greater number than we have visited any previous year, and it really seems as though greater blessings than ever were granted us in the work.

It is impossible to give details of a work extending over 1400 miles of country roads, but the fact that in one day ten or twelve cases of decision for Christ, or of a most hopeful character, were met with, should encourage the most desponding. Some districts, remote from each other, seemed wonderfully moved by the power of the Spirit. A day in North Essex seemed as full of blessing as one in West Bucks or Herefordshire, while another day in Cambridgeshire was principally remarkable for the fact that probably 5000 persons had the Gospel presented to them.

A nearly three-weeks' tour to the Herefordshire hop-gardens and back, in September, is still spoken of by twelve or more who took part as a most happy time. Hardly a company of hop-pickers were missed over a large area, and every house was also visited on the way. The excursions over the hills south of the valley running from Ledbury to Hereford, were very happy ones to the writer. Being in front of the party on one occasion I met a mother with her child. After inviting her to the Saviour she promised on reaching home to yield her heart to the Lord Jesus. Passing that way again the next day unexpectedly, she told me she was so happy in the realisation of pardoned sin and acceptance in the Beloved.

The hours of the Lord's day, Sept. 16, excepting a visit to one village, we spent from 8.30 a.m. until nearly 11 p.m. in driving from farm to farm collecting the hop-pickers and proclaiming the good news to them, beside leaving them tracts, &c. One party of Welsh pickers had been looking in vain for a place of worship. We sang together of the "Rock of Ages," and rejoiced together in the Lord. During the evening, especially, as we drove from farm to farm everybody turned out, from the lady of the house to the poorest hop-picker.

We might tell of public-houses emptied on Sunday evening by our startling news; of the sick ones and others whom Jesus loves, scattered over the country side, who remember us daily at the throne of grace; of the ploughman "William," who either lodged or obtained a lodging for us, pony and all, because we preached the Lord Jesus; or of another who, when a slight mishap befell our chaise (the only accident during the year), took five of us into his house and lodged us, although total strangers; but time forbids.

It would be easy to reach the whole of the remote country districts in the kingdom, if Christians everywhere would take up the work for a limited time, or would help those to go whose means will not admit of it.—Yours truly,

Wing, Leighton, Beds. T. S. HELEY.

THE SALVATION ARMY IN FRANCE.—Miss Booth is now in the South of France, Nimes being her headquarters, whence she visits the districts around. Last Sunday week a great meeting was held at Nimes by Miss Booth, in a hall hired by the Salvation Army for nine years. Outside, the crowd made a great disturbance, and tried to break open the doors and window shutters, but the police dispersed them, and the proceedings passed off in a tolerably quiet manner.—Daily News.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER IN CALCUTTA.

THE VISIT OF MR. GEO. MULLER.

MY DEAR BROTHER,—It has occurred to me, that readers of THE CHRISTIAN might like to hear something of how the "Week of Prayer" was observed in Calcutta, and what interest has been shown in the visit and addresses of the venerable George Müller. Though we are far away from what we are accustomed to think and speak of as the "home lands," we are nearer the rising sun; and it is often a pleasing reflection with us that the Christians residing in these eastern latitudes are the first to see the King, and to bring to Him the tribute of praise and thanksgiving, when He comes forth with every new day to bless his people with peace.

During the "Week of Prayer" meetings were held, as in previous years, in two places at the same hour—the Free Church of Scotland (Presbyterian), and in a room adjoining the old Mission Church (Episcopal). The hour of meeting was 7.30 a.m., and the attendance was encouragingly large at both places. The unity of spirit and the deep-toned earnestness which characterised the services throughout the week, were evidence of present blessing and the earnest of more to follow.

Members of all the evangelical churches forgot their differences as they gathered together in the name of their common Lord and Master. Christian laymen as well as missionaries and ministers presided by turns, and the Spirit of grace and supplication was poured out in large measure. It was a time of refreshing to all who attended the meetings, and the general feeling among the people was well expressed by one earnest Christian worker who had recently arrived from England, when, at the close of the last meeting of the series, she said, "I am sorry this week has come to an end; it has been such a happy time." Among the native Christians also there is a growing desire to take advantage of such unions for prayer; and in Calcutta this season the Bengali Christians have had some precious meetings and conferences.

The Week of Prayer has been speedily followed by a visit from the honoured servant of God, Mr. George Müller, of Bristol, and his devoted wife. Mr. Müller is still in the midst of us, and intends to remain for two weeks more. He gave an account of his conversion and life-work in the Methodist Episcopal Church to a large audience on Friday evening last, and on Sabbath he preached to crowded congregations in the Circular-road Baptist Chapel and the Free Church of Scotland. Other engagements are mapped out for this and the following week. He is the servant of all the churches and the slave of none.

At a meeting of Christian workers held in Union Chapel to welcome him to Calcutta, a beautiful spirit of love and unity prevailed; and it is the desire and prayer of many that his visit may be the means of stimulating the spiritual life of the churches, as well as of leading into the way of peace those who have been hitherto strangers to God. I anticipate that if this man of God is welcomed all over India by the Lord's people as he has been in Calcutta, his tour will result in untold blessings to this country. Pray that it may be so.

The Lord is opening for his servant a door of entrance also among educated natives who are not Christians, but many of whom are not far from the kingdom of God. May the hearts of many such be touched by the Spirit through the simple and assured testimony of one who has so fully and so long lived to demonstrate the power of faith in the living and true God.—Yours faithfully, W. MILNE.

Free Church Manse, Calcutta, Jan. 22.

The Indian Witness of Jan. 19 has the following note about the venerable and much esteemed evangelist:—

"On a recent evening, Mr. Müller was passing through Wellington-square, when the missionary in charge of the out door service asked him to speak. He at once mounted the box which served as a pulpit, and gave a most interesting and impressive address to the people who crowded around. He told of his conversion fifty-nine years ago, of his desire to become a missionary to India, of his five unsuccessful attempts to get away to this Eastern world, and of his gratitude in at last being permitted to preach Christ in this great city. He then proceeded to give a very simple and yet very forcible address, and was listened to with the closest attention; his voice was wonderfully clear, and his venerable appearance seemed to impress all present, not only with a feeling of respect, but of reverence. As he stood before the people, we were reminded at once of Abraham and Paul. He was the embodiment of the patriarch's faith and the apostle's quenchless love and zeal."

Times of Refreshing in Natal.

DEAR SIR,—The Lord has blessed us lately, both in spiritual and temporal things. Three of the schoolgirls have recently come out from heathen darkness—bolding confessing Christ and steadfastly defying persecution and threats from their heathen friends. Pray with us that these tender plants may be preserved through it all, and that they may grow in virtue and grace. On Christmas morning many of the heathen attended; we numbered over 400 persons. We had an interesting service in the morning, accounts given by the evangelists of work done at the preaching out-stations. After the midday feast, the whole school was placed in the centre of this large congregation, and entertained the people with singing and recitations. It greatly astonished some of the heathen fathers and mothers to see their boy or girl step forward and speak out so well. It was quite delightful to see the proud and happy looks of these parents.

One father stood up and said, "I am glad to see this day. I remember that when this school was first commenced and for long after that we were ashamed to acknowledge that we had been to the services, or that our children went to school. My boy there always wished to come, but I was ashamed to let him do so. It seemed to be a kind of disgrace amongst us to have anything to do with the school, and, of course, our children partook of the feeling shown by their elders. However, as time went on, the school has grown, and we have lost a good deal of that reluctance; and now what has this day shown us? Our boys and girls to be clever, and making us feel very happy and glad to have the Umfundisi amongst us."

We made a collection which was fairly good, 16s. 3d. Then came the distribution of gifts sent by five English friends, and we were glad to find that there was something for each one present. The whole day was spent very happily, and we were glad to have had such an opportunity for so many being brought together to hear the Gospel, and to see what the children can attain, if they are allowed to come regularly to school.

Last Sabbath we received into Church-fellowship two young men who had for some little time been wishful to be openly acknowledged as Christian brethren. Both young men are earnest helpers in trying to win others to Christ—may they be given the needed wisdom and words to speak to their fellow-countrymen. We hear from Mr. Alfred Eyles that the services at Malan Cliff are still well attended, also that there are some anxious ones, but very fearful that any change should come to them at present. The school is about the same, but we trust that as time passes its numbers will increase. Mr. Eyles is now able to speak a little to the people in their own language, which is a great advantage gained.

We thank some unknown friends for periodicals received occasionally. We are ever glad to communicate with anyone interested in the heathen and shall be pleased to give any particulars of our work if friends will kindly write to us. We ask for constant prayer that we may be sustained and guided in all we are led to undertake for the Master.—Faithfully yours,

FANNY E. AITCHISON.

MEDICAL MISSIONS.

AN important meeting of medical students, representing the various hospitals in the metropolis, in furtherance of the object of the Medical Mission Association, was recently held at the Mildmay Conference Hall; much earnestness characterised the proceedings. Prayer having been offered by Rev. J. Wilkinson,

Dr. S. O. Habershon, who presided, pointed out that in engaging in this great work of preaching the Gospel, medical men were but following in the footsteps of Christ, the Great Physician, who also gave this command to his followers: "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Very slow had his people been in obeying that command. But what opportunities and facilities had the earnest Christian doctor for such work amongst the heathen! Having opened his dispensary, one and another would come for medicine or advice, and when people were suffering, or when relieved from pain, they were often more disposed than at any other time to listen to the Gospel. Medical men knew something of the pleasure of seeing a patient rallying from disease, but what was this compared to the joy of bringing men to Christ? Recently, over the mantelpiece of a medical friend he saw a Chinese inscription, and ascertained that it had been presented to his friend by some Chinese patients, who, in their address, spoke of him as the restorer of spring to them. This proved how grateful these people were for such relief. Of course, self-denial must be practised, but what was this to the joy of years of service for the Master and the reward He will give at the last. Many of the noblest and most talented i their profession had thus gone forth to serve tne Master, willingly laying their scientific attainments at his feet. Dr. Moffat's medical knowledge helped him greatly in his work amongst Hottentots and Becuanas. He believed God's blessing would rest on their work. In China and India and Japan the same grateful feeling was manifested, and he hoped many then present would devote their energies to the service of Christ in this and other lands.

Dr. Palin, who has lately returned from Japan, gave a statement of work done there, affirming that a young medical man had far better opportunities of gaining experience abroad than at home. In the Mission with which he had been connected, the total number of patients who attended during nine months last year was 3200; during the last twelve months a profit of 500 gen (nearly a dollar) was realised, in the previous year 1000, this sum being used for Mission work, and for building a chapel. The first year was spent in learning the language, and the second there were between fifty and sixty patients; but he had had the large number of 5000 in one year—quite as many as one man could attend to. The Japanese, if possible, always made a return for the benefits received, and disliked to be treated gratuitously. But Japan was not so good a field for such labour as China, for in the former country the Government encouraged the practice of medicine, and established hospitals in the principal towns, appointing in most cases a foreigner to take charge of them. China, India, and Africa were the great fields for Medical Mission work, but little effort being put forth for alleviating the vast amount of suffering endured in these countries.

Dr. Palin went on to speak of various rules to be observed in the conduct of such a Mission. Each day a portion of God's Word should be read to the patients, some of whom came a distance of 300 or 400 miles, and it was impossible therefore to estimate the amount of the good that might thus be done. A medical missionary was not a kind of officer attached to a Mission; but he should be eager to embrace any opportunity for setting forth Christ to his patients.

Rev. J. Hudson Taylor said the point for consideration was how could they as Christian men invest their talents so as to bring the fullest glory to God and benefit most their fellow-men; for their desire must be not only to benefit the body but that immortal principle within, which, in joy or misery, must live on for ever. Believing in the plenary inspiration of the Bible as the Word of God, they should study that as they would their professional text-books, but it must also be remembered that a theoretical knowledge of anatomy would never make an accomplished surgeon, and it was necessary, if the Word of God was to be as a sharp sword in their hands, that they must put in practice the lessons it taught them.

He then gave a very interesting account of how he came to undertake the management of a large hospital in Ningpo. The question was suddenly put to him, the doctor in charge being obliged to leave for England, "Will you take charge of this hospital?" He had previously done some Medical Mission work, but this was a great responsibility, especially as there were no funds, and it would be four months at least before any help could reach him from England. On the other hand, there were the patients to be considered, and the bad effect which the closing of a large hospital would have on the cause of the Gospel. After a week's prayer on the subject, therefore, he decided to undertake the work, but as there were no funds available, he felt constrained to dismiss the paid assistants, their places, however, being filled by members of the native church, who freely offered their services when the matter was laid before them. The average number of patients was 70 to 120 a day, besides in-patients, and several surgical operations he had to carry out alone—he never entrusted chloroform to the natives—were very successful; and God was pleased to restore many patients of whose restoration there was no human hope. Every morning they prayed for funds, and what was the joy of his native assistants when, one morning, he received from a Christian merchant in Liverpool a letter enclosing a sum equal to about £50 for any work to which he might wish to apply it. The effect on these stolid men was marvellous; they were convinced that God had sent this provision for them; they rushed into the wards and told the patients, saying, "None of the gods you serve send you money like Mr. Taylor's God does!" Their faith, too, was contagious, and the joy in the wards was very great. This proved whether the Book was to be trusted or not. For thirty-five years he had believed in the Bible; by God's help he had lived on it; it had never disappointed him. What joy it was to trust God fully; there was nothing like yielding everything into his hands, resting in his promises. The more they trusted God the more successful would they be in their earthly calling. For the good of humanity, and from love to God, they should go forth to these lands, where there was so much need of their services; if they went in God's strength they would have reward indeed.

THE DUBLIN VISITING MISSION.—The annual meeting of this branch of the work of the Irish Church Missions, which was held a few days ago in Dublin, was very largely attended. Rev. Dr. Fuller, who presided, said it was perhaps difficult for outsiders to realise the comfort which this society brought, not only to the Roman Catholic, but to the Protestant poor. At times it almost seemed to some of them as if a messenger had come to them from heaven, when, in the midst of sore trials and afflictions, they heard the Word of God read to them. Rev. H. Fiske, superintendent of the Dublin Mission, gave interesting details of the manner in which the efforts of Christian visitors were appreciated. The meeting having been addressed by Rev. Dr. Maurice Neligan, Rev. H. Dening, and Rev. J. Lynch, himself a convert from Roman Catholicism, Rev. Horace W. Townshend, Clerical Secretary, stated that two new schools and a new home had been opened; these were now actively at work, and were, in fact, so crowded that it would be absolutely necessary still further to extend the work.

Mr. Moody's Chicago Sunday-School.

WE take the liberty (says The Gospel Union News of Newhaven, Conn.) of quoting a few extracts from a letter of Mr. J. M. Hitchcock, who is associated with D. L. Moody in superintending the Sunday-school of the Chicago Avenue Church, Chicago.

The school is one of the largest and most prosperous in the world. Mr. Hitchcock, upon whom, in Mr. Moody's absence, the real work falls, has reason to rejoice at the success with which his labours have been blessed. He writes:—

"I enclose a brief report of our Sunday school, which was founded by Mr. Moody twenty-five years ago, and of which he is still the nominal superintendent, though he has been absent from our city for twelve years. An occasional visit from the great Evangelist acts upon the school like the winding of a clock, giving it new strength, and a letter from him while abroad always acts as a healthy stimulus to us all. We have just passed our first Sunday after the holiday inducements are over, and our attendance was fifteen hundred and twenty-one."

From the report enclosed by Mr. Hitchcock we learn that the school has increased from an average attendance of 1306, in 1880, to an attendance of 1733, on December 9, 1883.

A Christmas letter from Mr. Moody was as follows:—"London, December 14, 1883. Dear Friends,—I have only just time to wish you all a happy and prosperous new year. But to be happy and joyous, one needs first to be at peace with God through his Son. I am delighted to hear good news from the school. I hope to hear that 2500 men, women and children meet to study the Word of God every Sunday afternoon. My wife and children want to be remembered to all in the church and school.—Your old friend,

Soul-Winners in Plymouth.

DEAR SIR,—I have recently had some happy Gospel work in various halls in Plymouth and Stonehouse. I was rejoiced to find that several earnest workers have been carrying on a useful work in St. Andrew's Hall every Lord's day with more or less success ever since Messrs. Moody and Sankey were there. I was privileged to hold two services in the Hall on Sunday, February 3. At the close of the address in the evening nearly the whole assembly remained for prayer. At the after-meeting a large number were spoken with, and there is reason to believe many received blessing. One lady said, "Many fears and vexing doubts have been taken from me this night, thank God!" Another said: "I have been a wanderer from God for thirty years, but the Shepherd has found me, praised be his Name!" Another man, who was in an awful agony, was able to leave praising the Lord, who had kept him back from self-destruction and had saved his soul.

I had several meetings among the soldiers at the Soldiers' Home, where a deeply-interesting work is carried on every night by several of the officers and other gentlemen. I believe some precious fruit was found, and will be found in the day of the Lord, among these men and others who attended the services. I could but rejoice at seeing such agencies as the Soldiers' Home at Stonehouse; many have been truly converted, and are seeking to lead their companions to the Saviour. The ladies are most zealous workers for God. I had the joy of holding several other meetings in the town among women. I also sought to help the young converts in Bible readings; this is a special need in these days.

Clayhidon, Wellington, Som. Geo. Brealey.

EAST-END TABERNACLE.—On the evening of Sunday week Rev. Archibald G. Brown preached his annual sermon to young men. On this occasion the whole building was reserved for men only. It was filled in every part. The text chosen was "Thou art the man." After the service, about one thousand stopped to a prayer-meeting. Many requested prayer for themselves, and were personally spoken to after the second meeting.

Continental and Foreign Notes.

ITALY.

Il Tempo, of Venice, Jan. 31, there appeared the following notice:—"Abjurtion to-morrow evening with the public abjuration which a Roman clergyman will make there, a course of polemical conferences will commence in the evangelical church of Santa Margherita, on the error of the Church of Rome. A special pulpit is placed at the disposal of any theologian who may wish to assume the defensive." This means war in the heart of the citadel.

THE SPEZIA MISSION.

The method of extending the Kingdom of Christ by house to house visitation has been sealed with divine blessing. In a country such as Italy, where religion is regarded as a church service or sacramental entirely in the hands of the priests, by what more effective method can we preach Christ to the people than by holding Gospel services in the houses of those who believe? Impressed with this fact, several brethren of the Mission laid the matter before the church, and at once it was unanimously received with thanksgiving. During last month six houses in this city were offered for the expounding of the Holy Scriptures to the people. It has been my privilege to preside at these services; my heart has rejoiced to see neighbours and friends crowd these dwellings! God is blessing these means, we believe, to evangelise hitherto unreached districts.

Spezia, Italy. JOHN S. ANDERSON.

SOUTH AFRICA.

The Baptist Union of Churches of South Africa is already a power in the colony; and through its instrumentality churches are being raised in almost every town of importance. Mr. Batts is the president of the South African Baptist Union. To his pulpit power and genuine earnestness the church owes much of its present success. At Southend there is a large population, European and coloured, with only one evangelical church. The Baptist congregations and Sunday-school attendance have doubled, and the hall (which seats 200) is speedily filling.

JEWS IN NEW YORK.

The work carried on among the Jews by Rev. Jacob Freshman in New York continues to make progress. From a report just issued we find that two halls are now used for meetings, at which a good number of Jews assemble, some of whom give testimony of their trust in Jesus as their Saviour and Messiah. Two Sunday-schools are also carried on by an earnest band of workers. Visitation and various other agencies for reaching the sons of Abraham are used, and the reports of the missionaries and testimonies of the converts are pleasing and satisfactory. Mr. Freshman's address is 25, Seventh-street, New York.

MEDICAL MISSIONS IN NEW YORK.

The Medical Mission, under the superintendence of Dr. Dowkontt, recently held a meeting at which a number of persons bore testimony to the good they had received, through him, both for body and soul at the Mission. Nearly 3000 cases were treated last year, the total number of consultations given during the two and a half years at the three dispensaries being over 18,000. Through the kindness of one friend a Medical Mission is about to be inaugurated in Chicago, for which there seems to be as great need as elsewhere.

NEW ZEALAND.

Mr. D. Wright, who has been labouring in New Zealand, writes most hopefully of his work there. He notes with gratitude that hundreds of believing souls have verbally, and in writing, declared that they were refreshed and strengthened, and have quietly and solemnly vowed to be more consecrated to the service of Christ their Saviour; that in many places the prayer-meeting and the Bible classes are better attended; in homes family worship is now conducted where there was none before; the ordinary services of God's house are more largely sustained by interested and attentive hearers. The names of many who were without God are now on the communion roll; over 1300 persons have signed the Temperance pledge, and donned the blue ribbon.

Rev. John M'Neil concluded a fortnight's Mission in the Rokewood and Cressy district, and closed his labours for the past year, by an evangelistic service at Illabarook. His work in this district has been eminently successful, the whole community being deeply moved. At most of the services the attendance has been very large, and in some places especially there was abundantly manifest the demonstration and power of the Spirit. At every service some were impressed and awakened, and sometimes as many as fifty remained to the inquiry-meeting. In Illabarook especially, the work among the younger part of the community has been extensive.—Southern Cross.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

CHURCH ARMY.—On Monday week, the fifty-second station of the Church Army was opened at Haggerston. Other halls will be opened at Hull, Preston, and Newcastle.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON.—MESSRS. Mateer and Parker brought their Mission to a close on the 11th inst. The meetings were very successful throughout. The meetings for the men, and also those for women, were fruitful in conversions.

WOOD GREEN, N.—A new Mission-room was opened on the 13th inst. in connection with the work carried on by Mr. Browne at the "Workmen's Rest" in Station-road. Nearly 200 persons met for tea, and were afterwards addressed by Messrs. Browne, Seywood, Gillingham, and others. The opening of the room is, happily, a result of the work.

LEIGHTON-ROAD MISSION, N.W.—The anniversary of this Hall was held on the 11th inst. Nearly 300 persons sat down for tea, after which addresses were given by Rev. R. M. Thornton, Messrs. J. Dunn, W. R. Copeland, and others. The secretary reported that there had been considerable advance made in the Gospel and temperance meetings, and that many had been brought to Christ and had joined a neighbouring church.

KIRKWALL.—A fortnight's special evangelistic meetings have been conducted by Mr. D. Carnegie, of Aberdeen, and Rev. J. C. Hodge, in Palace-road Congregational chapel. On Sabbath evening many had to go away, the place being entirely crammed. Solos were sung, and the Gospel thus expressed came in power to many hearts. After the address anxious ones remained behind to be spoken to, and not a few went home rejoicing in the Saviour. S. WILSON.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.—A correspondent writes:—"Meetings have again been held in the villages of Buckingham and Everton by Mr. Gibbens. Large numbers have attended, and a deep interest has been aroused in the neighbourhood. Many walked miles, and a carrier's waggon was hired to bring others. There is cause for thankfulness for the fruit which remains from the meetings held last year, and every reason to believe that these have been no less successful."

HOLBEACH, LINCOLNSHIRE.—Very successful services were conducted in the Wesleyan chapel in this town by Mr. John Harris, of the Evangelisation Society, from Jan. 27 to Feb. 13. Night after night large congregations assembled, and listened with great attention and eagerness to the glorious Gospel. Many have been aroused from their sinful slumber, and about forty have fled to Christ to lay hold on the hope set before them, whilst God's people have been quickened to renewed activity.

REV E P. HAMMOND AT CAMDEN, U.S.A.—The revival among the children under Mr. Hammond's ministry has been unprecedented at Camden. Up to Jan. 18 it was computed that over two hundred children had been definitely brought to the Saviour. The meetings were both large and attentive. Many parents, who at the commencement were sceptical concerning the conversion of children, afterwards brought their young people to get a blessing. One of the friends of the work told of a mother who had heard that her children had been seeking Christ at these meetings, and she was greatly troubled about it. She thought her children did not understand what was meant by being converted, and then she was in considerable distress of mind as to the effect which a profession of religion might produce upon the children's minds in the future. So she told her husband, and they talked the matter over together, and finally he resolved that he would come to the meetings and see for himself before he put any restrictions upon his child; he came with his child, and listened to the beautiful singing; heard Mr. Hammond talk to them, and then saw the efforts which were put forth by the ministers and Christian workers to explain the way of salvation to the children. So deeply was he impressed with the great spiritual good that was being done, that he said, "If this be the kind of meetings you hold for the children, mine can come every time; it is the best thing I know of for my child."

KIRKBY STEPHEN.—The evangelistic work here is being sustained with much power, and numbers are being broken down under the power of the Word. Christians are asked to remember us in prayer, especially that the dear young converts may be kept. F.

NEWPORT, ISLE OF WIGHT.—On the afternoon of Sunday week, Rev. H. G. Thwaites preached in St. John's Church to 300 women. On Wednesday, the 13th, the members of the Young Women's Christian Association assembled in large numbers for tea in the rooms of the Legh Richmond Hall at 6 o'clock, and at 8 o'clock between 300 and 400 women were addressed by Mrs. Urmstone. On Thursday, the 14th, a drawing-room meeting was held in the Legh Richmond Hall, when Mrs. Urmstone pleaded the cause of the Zenana work in India; 130 were present.

WISHAW, N.B.—Mr. Richard Hill commenced a series of evangelistic meetings here on Sabbath, February 3, in connection with the Y.M.C.A. To God's people it has been a time of real quickening and blessing. Many have entered into fuller joy and liberty, and backsliding ones have been restored. There have also been a number of good cases of professed decision for Christ. There is a spirit of unity among God's people which is very pleasing to see. All the churches are represented at the meetings, and a deep interest is being taken in the work. Many who were converted to God ten years ago, through Mr. Hill's preaching, are still living for Christ, while not a few have gone home to the rest above; others are toiling in distant lands.

PORTSOY, N.B.—Mr. Joseph Cleworth has been holding here a series of successful evangelistic meetings for the past three weeks. We have had no such meetings for many years. At least 500 have been present every night. A deep interest is awakened, and there is appearance of much good being done. The meetings are under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. The young men gave their cordial support, as did also Revs. Mr. Boyd and Mr. Simmers. On Thursday night last Mr. Clifford, who is at present staying with the Earl of Seafield at Cullen House, conducted the service, the Earl and his mother, the Countess, being present. Mr. Clifford has been holding services in various places in the locality during his stay in the North. The Earl of Seafield and Countess of Seafield take a great interest in the navvies at work on the railway being formed in Banffshire, and have done much to promote the cause of Christianity and temperance among them. S.

GRANGEMOUTH.—Special evangelistic services are being carried on here by Mr. W. D. Dunn, in connection with the Y.M.C.A. It is exceedingly gratifying to report that at every meeting there has been fruit more or less amongst all classes, and not a few very striking and remarkable cases. One evening a miner from a neighbouring village came into the meeting the worse for liquor; he was arrested by the Spirit of God, and could get no rest until the following evening, when he entered into joy and peace in believing. He comes every night to the meetings with a beaming countenance. A prodigal son of a wealthy merchant in Boston is in deep concern about his soul, and is found night after night at the meetings. A young woman was arrested, and could find no peace till pointed to John iii. 18 and 36. One very interesting feature of the work is the large number of young men who have been brought of late to the Saviour, and now devote time and talents to his service. A Christian conference is to be held on Saturday, 23rd inst., as a suitable close to this memorable and fruitful campaign.

MIDNIGHT MEETING MOVEMENT.—A tea was given on Thursday last, and a breakfast on Friday, at the Mission Hall, Colliers' Rents, Borough, to two hundred outcast women. Mr. J. H. L. Christien, assisted by various ladies and gentlemen of the locality, conducted the proceedings. The women were all sober, appeared to enjoy the refreshments, and remained for a devotional service on each occasion, and some were taken to institutions.

WHAT IS THE GOSPEL?—In the article on this subject, by Mr. G. F. Trench, in our last number, there was a serious misprint, which was only corrected in a portion of the issue. In the paragraph setting forth the view of the Gospel given in the Epistle to the Romans, the last clause should read:—"And that thus in peace with God, by the Holy Ghost indwelling them, the saints may walk as men dead and risen with Christ, not under law, but yet superior to sin's power," &c. For the italicised word was substituted the word or, which conveyed a sense exactly opposed to the view of the writer.

Mr. T. E. Murphy at Sale.

THIS Mission has been a wonderful success. Our large public hall became fuller night after night, until Wednesday, the 13th, the closing night, when we believe hundreds failed to get admission. Over 1300 persons signed the pledge, and over 2000 put on the blue ribbon.

Before the movement began, some of us were rather doubtful of its success, owing to the fact that as this is a residential place for Manchester gentlemen, it might be difficult to get them with their families to turn out to the meetings after coming home from business in the evening, but we soon saw how groundless were our fears.

In the work Mr. Murphy was helped by most of the clergy and ministers of Sale, and the chair each evening was taken by a leading layman. We had a large united choir, under the leadership of Mr. Lewis, and a goodly number of ladies and gentlemen gave their services at the signing tables. Mr. Frank Milne acted as secretary and treasurer, and it gives us pleasure to say the people gave so liberally, that, after paying all expenses, there is a balance on the right side. Mr. Murphy leaves Sale with the good wishes of all who identified themselves with the movement, and their gratitude for the great work which, under God, he has done. Arrangements are being made to keep up the interest, and, if possible, to organise means by which practical and continued benefit may accrue to the community. ADAM SCOTT.

Christian Efforts at Luton.

THE blind evangelist of Bessbrook, Ireland, Mr. Thomas Houston, has been holding a series of Mission meetings in the Friends' meeting-house, Luton. They have been opportunities of much spiritual blessing to many. As soon as the public found the power attending them, the old meeting-house, so unaccustomed as it has been to such meetings, was crowded in every part. Even the lobbies were on Sunday nights filled with those standing to hear the Word of God, which was preached with marvellous power. Many an eye was filled with tears, particularly on Sunday night, February 3, when Mr. Houston related his life, the cause of his blindness, and his conversion. During the fortnight's Mission, over one hundred professed conversion, who had never experienced the new birth before; many backsliders returned, and Christians were strengthened and established in the faith. The after-meetings were well attended, and were times when the power of God was greatly manifested.

We trust that the Friends will see to it that the results of the Mission are not lost, and that they will again open their meeting-house for such services. We understand Mr. Houston represents the Friends' Home Mission Association, which was officially recognised at the last yearly meeting of the Society, and we trust that it will obtain the services of many more such devoted labourers for the Lord's harvest.

On Monday night, February 11, Mr. A. S. Dyer gave a lecture in the large Plait Hall at Luton to over 2,000 men, on the subject of "Personal and Public Morality." The lecturer was listened to with the deepest interest and attention, which was sustained during the two hours the meeting lasted. Many were astounded at the startling facts given relating to the Contagious Diseases Act, and when Mr. Dyer gave an account of the practice of kidnapping poor English girls for immoral uses, much indignation was expressed.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a suggestion was made by Mr. Dyer, seconded by Mr. Henry Brown, J.P., supported by the Mayor of Luton, H. Wright, Esq., and carried with acclamation, that a telegram be forwarded to Mr. Gladstone by the chairman of the meeting (Mr. Alderman Gilder), asking for the immediate repeal of the obnoxious Act. A more unanimous and enthusiastic meeting has scarcely ever been held in Luton.

Social Evenings for Young Women.

A SECOND social meeting for young women employed in refreshment rooms and restaurants was held on Thursday, February 14, at the house of Rev. J. J. Coxhead and Mrs. Coxhead, 12, Fitzroy-square, under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A. and the Women's Union (C.E.T.S.). About forty young women were present. All seemed to enjoy the meeting, and thoroughly to appreciate the kind attention and generous hospitality of their host and hostess. Earnest addresses were given by Rev. Canon Barker, Vicar of Marylebone, Rev. J. J. Coxhead, and Miss Andrews, Y.W.C.A. Sacred songs were sung by Mrs. Willis, Miss Cockerton, Miss Andrews, Miss Rumney, and Miss Sydney Roberts.

Miss Gough, who superintends this special branch of work, has received with much pleasure the grateful thanks of some of the young women, many of whom are looking forward to attend future meetings. May God's blessing rest upon this effort!

Messrs. Whittle and McGranahan.

DURING last week Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan held meetings in Mr. Park's Congregational Chapel, Wandsworth; this week they are at the Methodist Chapel in the same district. The Bible-readings in the afternoon have been well attended. Major Whittle has discoursed on subjects calculated to establish the young Christians in the faith and set them to work for the Lord; the results have thus far been most cheering. The evening meetings have been largely attended and full of power; many have been brought to decision for Christ. Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan's sweet songs have greatly helped in preparing for and also in confirming the spoken messages.

The testimony meetings for men held by Major Whittle at the close of the evening meetings have encouraged many to accept Christ as their Saviour. Taking the men and women together, a goodly number have nightly professed to trust in the Lord Jesus for salvation; many are giving clear evidence of their conversion to God by a consistent walk.

Richard Weaver at the Edinboro' Castle.

ON Sunday last vast congregations assembled in the new hall, recently opened by Dr. Barnardo, to hear this well-known evangelist, who preached three times—at 11 a.m., 3 a.m., and 7 p.m. Spite of his years and long-continued and very arduous labours, Richard Weaver's old fire seems unabated; the dense throng turned from the doors on Sunday night, long after the capacious building had been crowded to its utmost limits, showed that Richard's influence and power over a working-class population are still immense. The secret is not far to seek; like Mr. Moody—although in a manner characteristically his own — Richard uplifts Christ alone. He preaches a very full and simple Gospel message, which is illustrated by touching narratives gathered wholly from personal experience, and which moves his audience alternately to smiles or tears. The three inquiry-rooms were crowded with anxious seekers after salvation; on Sunday night numbers of these found peace in believing.

There is much prayer going up at the Edinboro' Castle, and a manifest and widespread interest exhibited in the Mission throughout that part of the East-end. The great hall, lit up by the incandescent electric lamps, is a beautiful sight; when all the approaches are paid for and can be fully opened so as to give free ingress and egress to the crowds, it will be one of the noblest as well as the most perfectly arranged Mission stations in London. Richard Weaver preaches there every night this week and next week except on Fridays, also three times next Sunday. The services will be continued nightly for a month.

Hoxton Hall Anniversary.

THE annual meeting in connection with the Gospel Temperance work at Hoxton Hall was held on the 11th instant. Mr. W. Noble presided, in the absence of Mr. W. Palmer. The body of the hall and one gallery were filled with an enthusiastic audience, many of whom were not long since slaves to drink, and living in other sins. The Secretary said that 2124 successive nightly meetings had been held; they had resulted in the salvation of many souls, and the outward reformation, at least, of many others.

Mr. Robert Rae, Mr. Hughes, and others gave short addresses bearing on the advantages of Temperance, and the greater blessedness of knowing Christ as a personal Saviour. They urged the continued support of so good a work, not only in its relation to Hoxton, but also in its provincial influence.

Our Policemen.

TAKING into account the exceptional difficulties of their calling, and the many temptations to which they are exposed, we fear the guardians of the public peace do not as a rule get so much sympathetic attention as they deserve. All the more, therefore, we rejoice in the good work which has now been going on among this useful class of the community for the last year or so, in connection with the Christian Policemen's Association. During that time the interest has spread among the members of "the Force" with remarkable rapidity, until now there are seven branch Associations in the Metropolis, as well as a good few provincial branches. Meetings of various kinds are periodically held for promoting the spiritual weal of the members and for extending the area of the work.

Like many other associated efforts for the good of a special class, the Association has its organ, On and Off Duty, which has a considerable circulation, and not only serves to keep alive the interest, but helps by its varied contents to strengthen the spiritual life of the men. It is greatly desired by the workers to establish a healthy branch of the Association in all the large provincial towns; any Christian friends who may feel led to give themselves to this work are asked to communicate with the Hon. Secretary, Miss Gurney, 11, Ladbroke-terrace, London, W. A number of copies of the interesting Christmas issue of On and Off Duty are still on hand, and will gladly be sent to any who can see to their careful distribution. We hope to learn at the annual meeting in Exeter Hall, which is fixed for March 11, that this movement is taking root in many fresh places.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—For blessing on the Barrow Gospel Temperance Mission, conducted by Mrs. Bradley. ——For what the Lord is doing in connection with the meetings held in Edinburgh for the deepening of spiritual life.

PRAYER. — For special meetings at Exeter March 16 to 30, by Miss Spearman and others.—— For the work at Easter Fair, Exeter, in April.—— For a social gathering of East-end Theatricals at Bishopsgate-st. Chapel school-room on the 27th inst. ——That suitable men may be raised up for officers in the Church Army.——For a Mission at Littlehampton by Mr. J. Sida, Feb. 21 to Mar. 6.—— For blessing on a ten days' Mission at Congregational Church, Ledbury, Feb. 17 to 25.——For a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the city of Edinburgh, in connection with the visit of Messrs. Smith and Fullerton.——For special services by Mr. Opie Rodway at Stonehouse Chapel, near Stroud, February 23 to 27.——For a series of Evangelistic services in Berwick, until March 1. ——For much blessing upon an eight days' Mission at Clophill March 9 to 18.——For blessing on a Mission at Morecambe, Lancashire, till March 9, by Mr. T. Wales.——For great blessing on the tracts and Gospels given to the starving rag-pickers and men out of work, over 800 of whom are fed daily at the temporary soup-kitchen of the Belleville Mission, Paris.

Letters to the Editor.

LIBERTY IN RUSSIA.

Dear Sir,—It is at Morshansk that Mr. Almanoffsky is imprisoned—not in St. Petersburg—as stated in a recent Note in your paper. There is a probability of his being liberated soon. You will be glad to hear that the order to dismiss the Molochans has been appealed against, and will, very likely, be set aside. It arose from the strange and unaccountable custom of leaving laws on the statute-book, after new ones have been passed annulling them. This is the cause of no end of trouble, as many of the provincial officials act on the old laws, and either forget or ignore the new ones. You can easily see, too, that this makes justice very difficult for the poor and illiterate. It is, indeed, a pity that the Government do not give full liberty to the spreading and proclaiming of God's Word. Nothing would do so much to crush Nihilism and establish right and truth in this great empire.

I may mention at the same time that the Emperor has of late been driving very freely about the city, to the great satisfaction of the people. As I was going along the Litanaya last week he drove past in an open sledge, without even a footman in attendance.—Truly yours, J. D. Kilburn.

BAZAARS AND RESCUE WORK.

Dear Sir,—May I, as one of those who have to lead our great national women's movement, protest, in all deep sadness and earnestness, against penitentiary work being brought to the notice of young girls by being made the object of a bazaar under Royal auspices in the Dôme of a fashionable watering-place, and the degradation of women robbed of all its shame and awfulness by being exposed to the idle chatter of a public fair?

I am thankfully aware that no one belonging to our movement would be guilty of what I cannot but think a grave dereliction of good taste and of right feeling. Our preventive work for our little rough girls we have felt might be produced in public; but our rescue work we have always considered must be done in silence, and kept from the public gaze in the background. Now that these traditions of modesty and shamefacedness are to give way to public bazaars and royal patronage, it behoves us to protest strongly against what we feel to be the desecration of our efforts to raise our own womanhood, and the breaking-down of those very barriers of modesty which we are endeavouring to build up.

May I implore women to face and strengthen one another to meet a very real danger which is threatening our movement from its very success. We have no choice but to face this evil, now that it is spreading to the very children of our land, and polluting the springs of our national life. But, for God's sake, let us take heed how we face it, for it will be to us either life unto life, or death unto death. In touching this evil, let us remember we touch the crucified body of our Redeemer Himself, and we shall handle it in reverent sadness and deep awe, in much silent prayer and few words, and then only to stir up the hearts of his people. If we so utterly forget ourselves as to lower our sense of its awfulness to the level of bazaars, and expose it to the idle gaze of fashionable resorts, or make it the subject of idle gossip in our own drawing-rooms, how can we wake in our sons a fuller sense of its shame and awfulness? And are we not unconsciously lowering the very sanctity of the womanhood which is to lift them up?

May I therefore implore my fellow-workers to take warning in time; to do their utmost to discountenance and denounce all publicity, other than that of a church or a meeting, in raising funds for rescue work; never to speak about it but as a means for doing; never to tell the horrible story for the horrible story's sake; never to leave publications about on the table; and never to touch the work in its sadder and deeper aspects, except in a spirit of reticence and prayer, gazing on the splendour of our Lord's purity till we gaze at all evil with sun-dazzled eyes, seeing not it, but Him.

In conclusion, I can only express my deepest regret that the penitentiary which was once at the head of the work in England, should now be reduced to raise, by such questionable means, the funds which once poured in upon it, through its excellent and quiet work from hearts that suffered and prayed. I do not believe that so false a step would have been taken had it not lost its committee of management, and passed in some measure into other hands than those that made it what it was. —Very faithfully yours, Ellice Hopkins.

Percy House, Brighton, Feb. 15.

THE CABMAN'S SUNDAY.

Sir—,I was glad to see in The Christian of Jan. 24, a letter calling attention to the case of the omnibus drivers on Sunday, and remarking on the number of persons with prayer-books in their hands who travel by these public conveyances on God's day.

I have long have had it on my mind to plead for the poor cabmen, who seldom if ever get a day of rest, or opportunity of attending a place of worship. One of them, to whom I was the other day speaking on the subject, said: "We should not have our cabs out if there warn't people as goes in 'em." And who are these? Only the worldly and thoughtless? No; they are the religious, church-going, ladies especially, who put this stumbling-block in their poor brothers' way because they want to be "edified" by hearing some favourite preacher, instead of going to the less attractive church near them, which they would be able to reach on foot.

Anyone who stands outside one of the fashionable evangelical churches, can see this for himself every Sunday, with shame and sorrow. And yet these are the Christians who, after being told they are to go out and take the blessed Gospel to the poor and ignorant, carry such teaching into practice by breaking the Sabbath themselves, and causing their "weak brother to offend." Will Christians lay to heart such inconsistency?—Yours faithfully,

G.

ENGLAND AND EGYPT.

Dear Sir,—At the present time, when all eyes in this country are being turned towards the progress of events in Egypt and the neighbouring regions, the following sentence will doubtless interest many: "Professor T. R. Birks understands the 'King of the South' in Daniel xi. as applying to England, who, by taking upon herself the protection of Egypt, will specially merit the name."

This extract is taken from "Palestine Repeopled" (p. 95, note), by the Rev. James Neil, published in London in 1876. Perhaps Mr. Neil himself, or some other of your readers, can give the exact reference to Professor Birk's book. If the words are taken from that writer's work on "The Two Later Visions of Daniel," published in 1846, they furnish an interesting illustration of the value of the study of prophecy. Who anticipated, even when the words were quoted in Mr. Neil's book in 1876, that England would be forced to establish her control in six years, and afterwards to maintain and strengthen it when taking steps to terminate it?

I need scarcely say I write in no political spirit, but merely in order to remind Christians of the importance of studying the opening roll of history alongside the open roll of prophecy. Surely at no time has it been more necessary than it is now for God's people to take heed to the "sure word of prophecy," for the prophetic words spoken to Daniel were to be "closed up and sealed till the time of the end" (Dan. xii. 9). Even then only "the wise shall understand" (ver. 10).—Yours very truly, C. N. B. M.

Mission Appeals.

Dock Labourers' Mission.—Mr. C. Coleman, 26, Chamber-street, London Docks, E., appeals for help towards the expenses of this Mission. He is in urgent need of funds.

Penarth-street Mission, S.E.—The workers of this Mission will be thankful for pecuniary help. The district is a poor one; a good work is being done, and the workers are all voluntary helpers. The superintendent is Mr. S. Clayton, 85, Montpelier-road, Peckham, S.E.

Shacklewell Mission, Winchester-place, Kingsland, N.—Mr. Gull writes: "We need now about £15 to clear up our accounts by the end of this month. The people coming to our meeting are very poor, while we also have a great deal of distress and want to contend with. We give free meals as far as our funds will allow, and help in various ways. Our treasurer is C. W. Mutlow, 46, Farleigh-road, Stoke Newington, N.

Gospel Temperance in Cornwall.—There is great need in the village of Flushing, Cornwall, with a population of about 1000, for a hall in which Gospel and Temperance work may be carried on. It is desired to erect such a building, and in connection with it, on the quay, a coffee-room and shelter for sailors and boatmen. A good site is now ready, and an appeal is made for the needful funds. Help will be received by Mrs. M. Punnett, Flushing, Falmouth.

Notices of Books, &c.

Luther Miller's Ambition, by Lillie Montfort, 1s. 6d. Wesleyan S.S. Union. A most excellent little book to put into the hands of any youth who has to fight his way in the world without parental or other external help.

Annals of the Disruption. By Rev. Thos. Brown. Part I., 4d. Macniven & Wallace. This promises to be an interesting and comprehensive account, from the Free Church of Scotland standpoint, of one of the most stirring epochs in modern Scottish Church history.

The Science Monthly (illustrated, 6d., David Bogue, 3, St. Martin's-place, W.C.) is a serial of engrossing interest and attractiveness to all students in Nature's vast and wonderful laboratory. The February number contains a portrait of Lord Rayleigh, the successor of the late Professor Clerk-Maxwell at Cambridge.

Volume III. of Present Day Tracts, issued by The Religious Tract Society, contains six papers by Mr. S. R. Pattison, Sir Wm. Muir, the Dean of Canterbury, Dr. Henry Wace, the late Rev. W. F. Wilkinson, and Dr. Jas. Legge. There is little fear of Christianity and Revelation being discredited while they possess such able defenders as the gentlemen who are producing these valuable brochures.

Simple Words to Anxious Seekers. By the Author of "Light and Rest." Partridge and Co. 2s. per dozen. A useful, because thoughtful and practical, as well as thoroughly evangelical little book. It is a difficult task to trace the anxieties of an awakened soul through their many intricate windings, but the author has done much to help those in soul trouble to joy and peace through faith in Christ.

Hester Lennox; or, Seeking a Life Motto. By Howe Benning. Religious Tract Society. Hester in early womanhood became the possessor of a fortune; therefore, according to Mr. Moody, she had not "an even chance" of turning out well. Her search for a life motto and how she found it are here related after the liveliest American fashion. The fact that the book hails from across the Atlantic will recommend it to many, because they can be sure of finding freshness and "swing" in the story.

Daddy's Bobby, and other Stories. Simpkin, Marshall & Co. This little book is published on behalf of the Children's Aid Society, Strangeways, Manchester, and relates some touching stories of waif life in that city. Well written, and with several illustrations, it opens our eyes to the keen hardships endured by the little barefoot vendors of matches and newspapers who beset our path in all great cities; it also brings out traits of kindness and self-denial often found in their dealings with each other.

Samuel Rutherford. By Rev. Andrew Thomson, D.D. 2s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. As long as there is any beauty in holiness, and anything to be admired and imitated in a saintly life of Christian activity, Samuel Rutherford will rank high among the "men worth remembering." Dr. Thomson's interesting monogram is evidently the product of a sympathetic and kindred spirit; it will help still further to enshrine in the heart and memory of the Christian Church the good pastor of Anwoth and the "prisoner of the Lord." The appended selections from his letters will be prized by many readers.

Reasonable Apprehensions and Reassuring Hints. By Rev. Henry Footman. 1s. Field & Tuer. These papers, says the author, are "designed to attract attention to the nature of modern unbelief, and to meet some of its fundamental assumptions." We think every candid reader will admit that he has accomplished his task with wonderful ability and success. Mr. Footman is a model controversialist; he aims more at convincing than humiliating his opponent—a method not too common in Christian apologetics. To all trembling and doubting spirits we earnestly commend the thoughtful perusal of these reassuring pages. An interesting foot-note by the author deserves to be quoted. "When I was Vicar of Shoreditch," he says, "I often took down the Baptismal Register Book, and looked steadily at the name of 'Charles Bradlaugh' there. I prayed and wondered about him, and the answer I generally got was this: 'The Spirit of God has not done with Charles Bradlaugh yet.'"

We ought to have stated that the new edition of "The Imitation of Christ," to which we recently referred in connection with General Gordon, consists only of a number of selected passages from that work.

Forthcoming Meetings.

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY IN LONDON.

Miscellaneous.

ANXIOUS INQUIRERS are again earnestly invited to write. Many have received blessing.
Jno. vi. 40. EVANGELIST, Clapham, S.W.

"LETTER TO THE REV. ROBERT DAWSON, Secretary of the London City Mission, on the dismissal, by the Committee of the Mission, of Mr. Samuel Ship, one of its missionaries, apparently as the result of his having recently adopted higher views than he formerly held of the extent of deliverance from sin offered to us in the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." By JAMES PILLANS WILSON, Local Superintendent in the Mission.
Any desirous of obtaining a copy of this letter can do so by writing to me at the undernoted address, sending 4d. for the price and postage, or without money if not well able to send it. But my immediate object in this advertisement is to obtain employment for Mr. Ship. For it is surely a reflection on the Church of God that a first-class missionary should remain unemployed only for believing and daring openly to avow his belief that "if we walk in the light . . . the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."
Mr. Ship can have the highest testimonials from the Committee and other Officers of the Mission, and other Christian friends, as to his personal Christian character and his devotedness to his work. J. P. WILSON,
2, Lake-terrace, Wandsworth-common, London, S.W.

MISSIONARIES AND FOREIGN RESIDENTS should call or write to BYWATER, PERRY & Co., special agents for missionaries, &c. Outfits and goods at wholesale prices. Passages engaged. Shipments effected. 2,000 references. 11, Queen Victoria-street, London.

BOMBAY.—Will some Christian Lady, or Captain of steamer, take charge on the voyage of a Girl of 16, thoroughly respectable (middle-class), who is to join her mother in India in March. Could act as Servant. Passage up to £25 will be paid.—Address, for full particulars, MRS. KEMP, 43, Lansdowne-street, Brighton.

LOAN.—A Christian Worker wishes to purchase the Freehold of a Mission Hall, with corner "British Workman," in a town of nearly 10,000, having, including dormitories, more than thirty rooms, and to place the Institution, which has been established seven years, under Trustees. The property also includes superior shop and a cottage. For purchase of the whole he desires the Loan of £1800 at 4 per cent., which would be amply covered by freehold mortgage, and in this way permanently secure the premises for Gospel and temperance work. Will any of the Lord's stewards kindly communicate with S., 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

AMERICAN ORGAN.—Handsome black and gold case; six feet high; 22 stops, including coupler; knee swells; bench. Nearly new, £21.—SECRETARY, Mission House, 10, Leighton-crescent, Kentish Town, N.W.

A COURSE OF LECTURES on Egyptian Antiquities, illustrative of Scripture History, will shortly be given to ladies by Miss HELEN BELOE, at the British Museum.—For tickets and particulars apply to Miss JENNER, 63, Brook-street, W.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY. ONE HALFPENNY.

The Herald of Mercy:

AN ILLUSTRATED MESSENGER FOR HUMBLE HOMES.

ORIGINATED BY THE LATE DUNCAN MATHESON.

"It is a true 'messenger' for all homes, whether humble or high. The pictures will make the children's eyes sparkle with delight; the pretty stories, short papers, poetry, and telling illustrations of life, will help many a weary heart; and, indeed, no one can read without both pleasure and profit." Irish Congregational Magazine.

THE ENQUIRY ROOM. Hints for Dealing with the Anxious.

By GEORGE SOLTAU.

These "HINTS" were given in the form of an Address to the Christian Workers who undertook to converse with and assist the ENQUIRERS, in connection with the meetings of Mr. MOODY and Mr. SANKEY. They are now published in the present form, in the hope that they may be found useful in other spheres of evangelistic work.

"A guide of this sort was greatly needed; and even ministers, as well as lay-workers, may profit by its perusal. The 'HINTS' are not the compilation of a mere bookmaker, but the fruit of the personal experience of a man who knows his Bible, and who is also conversant with human nature; and in whom sobriety of judgment and fervour of spirit are finely blended."—Christian Leader.

John Wesley:

HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

By JOHN W. KIRTON, LL.D.,

Author of "Happy Homes, and How to make Them."

"This 'LIFE OF WESLEY' is precisely what it is intended to be—an interesting, condensed account of one of England's most popular men, adapted to popular use."
Christian Commonwealth, January 24.

THE NEW YEAR PRESENT.

DAILY LIGHT ON THE DAILY PATH.

In the very Words of Scripture. Two Volumes. Morning Hour and Evening Hour. Sold separately or in sets. "These two text-books have long been favourites, but we would call the attention of those who may have not seen them to the fact that they are devotional text-books containing only the words of Scripture. The text chosen as key-note heads the page, and other texts bearing on the same subject follow. They are very precious little books, and few more suitable gifts could be found."—Christian. Small Edition, each volume, French morocco, gilt edges, 2s.; Large Type Edition, each volume, cloth extra, gilt edges, 2s. 6d. BOOKS suitable for BIBLE STUDENTS and TEACHERS.

Published by MORGAN & SCOTT.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE

To the Old and New Testaments. Handsomely bound in cloth, price 7s.6d. Half bound in leather, cloth sides, gilt edges, 10s. 6d.

POPULAR EDITION, CLOTH, FIVE SHILLINGS.

THE SPECIAL FEATURE in this Edition is the NEW TRANSLATION, Revision, and Extension of the PROPER NAMES of the OLD and NEW TESTAMENTS, with their Meanings in the Original Languages. By Rev. ALFRED JONES, M.A., Author of "The Proper Names of the Old Testament Scriptures, Expounded and Illustrated."

CHRIST LIFTED UP.

Meditations on the Death, Resurrection, and Ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ. By Rev. ROBERT GILCHRIST. Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"An earnest, practical exhibition of the Gospel under a variety of aspects. Christ lifted up on the cross, and at the Father's right hand, is the grand theme, and affords scope for setting forth a wide range of Gospel teaching. The writer does this in an interesting, while simple style."—British Messenger.

"Old-fashioned divinity presented in a pleasing form. May its readers be many."—Sword and Trowel.

THE GOSPEL IN LEVITICUS.

Chapters on the Old Testament Foreshadowings of the Great Redemption. By the late Rev. Dr. FLEMING, of Kentish Town. Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"The subject is set forth with a clearness, a directness, and a persuasiveness which leave little to be desired. Every lover of sound Scriptural theology, especially in regard to the momentous doctrine of the Atonement, will find in the book a rich treat."—Baptist Magazine.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

The Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. New and Enlarged Edition. By Rev. Dr. CULROSS. With Chromo-Lithographic Views of the "Sea of Galilee" and the "Island of Patmos." Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d.

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."—Sword and Trowel.

"THY FIRST LOVE."

Christ's Message to Ephesus. By Rev. Dr. CULROSS. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"It is a heart-searching and stimulating little book."
British Quarterly Review.

"Its language is chaste and clear; its thoughts are fresh and invigorating; its tone is evangelical without being sentimental. While there is a genial warmth of devout feeling, there runs through its pages a healthy breeze of robustness."—Literary World.

BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR & KNOCK.

Christ's Message to Laodicea. By Rev. Dr. CULROSS. Tinted Covers, 1s.; cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"The exposition is fresh and original, displaying great critical skill and discrimination, together with happy quotations of Scripture. The style is all that could be desired—chaste and polished, yet full of force; here and there, as in the author's other works, we meet with passages of great poetic beauty."
Aberdeen Daily Press.

CALLS TO CHRIST.

A Series of Addresses by Rev. R. W. NICOLL, M.A. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"Force and freshness are eminently the characteristics of these 'Calls to Christ'; they are also brief to a proverb, and hence they may be of great service to an earnest evangelist who knows how to use another man's thoughts."
Kelso Courier.

QUESTIONS ON THE FACTS OF THE BIBLE,

Suited for use in Schools and Families. By JABEZ HORNE, Inspector of the Schools in the Orphan Houses, Ashley Down. Tinted covers, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

"A good examination in the Scriptures might be conducted with the help of this little manual, the questions in which are extremely well arranged."
The Rock.

May also be had (for the use of Teachers only),

KEY TO QUESTIONS ON THE FACTS OF THE BIBLE.

Which furnishes the Answers to all the Questions. Cloth, 6d.

THE NUMBER "SEVEN" IN SCRIPTURE.

Compiled by S. A. BLACKWOOD, Esq., C.B. Paper Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d. Presentation Edition, Cloth Boards. Bevelled, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

"Many other attempts have been made in tabulating the circumstances connected with the word "seven" in the Bible, but we cannot think of any one which is so complete, so concise, and so systematic as in the small volume compiled by Mr. Blackwood. From Genesis i. to Rev. xxii. all the many times the word occurs are duly noted, and each book is dealt with seriatim, so that reference is easy. One object of the book is "to stimulate search and to arouse inquiry," and with this book by the side of the Bible one course of study can be made very profitable indeed."—The Rock.

SEARCHING THE SCRIPTURES

In order to abiding Communion with God. Also, Suggestions for Bible Reading and Study, and a Plan for Consecutive Daily Reading. By Dr. ANDERSON. Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d. Second Edition.

"Whether viewed as an analysis of the whole Bible, or as a plan for its daily perusal, or as a directory to the spirit and intention with which it should be studied, it is equally judicious and complete. The one design of the whole Scriptures is kept in view throughout."—Sword and Trowel.

CHRIST AND THE SCRIPTURES.

By Rev. Dr. ADOLPH SAPHIR. Cheap Edition.—Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth, Limp, 1s. 6d. Superior Edition.—Cloth, Elegant, 3s.; with Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"This book is original. Dr. Saphir has the power of originating and combining, which is the mark of genius. It is the old truths to which we listen; but the old truths clothed in a living language, set in new lights, and drawn out in fresh applications."—Weekly Review.

BIBLE READINGS BY HENRY MOORHOUSE.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.

"We do not wonder that those who heard Moorhouse's Bible Readings found them full of power and suggestion. To him the Word of God was a sword—the only one worth using in spiritual warfare."—Liverpool Courier.

"This volume will be heartily welcomed by not only workers in the field, but by all who love to study the Divine Word. A careful reading must stimulate moral seriousness and earnest service for Christ."—Christian Commonwealth.

THE SURE MERCIES OF DAVID;

or, God's Dealings in the Sanctuary. By ANNA SHIPTON. Best Edition, toned paper, Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 4s. 6d. Cheap Edition, Cloth neat, 2s. 6d.

"This is a well-written volume of spiritual instruction, interspersed with interesting narratives, from the able pen of Mrs. SHIPTON. It is well worthy of a wide circulation, especially amongst members of Christian congregations, Sunday-school teachers and scholars."—Free Press.

NOTES FOR BIBLE READINGS.

A Collection of over Six Hundred Subjects, carefully compiled and arranged. Suitable for Bible Readings, Cottage Lectures, Sermons, Addresses, Sabbath-school Lessons, &c. Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d. A cheap edition may also be had in tinted covers, 2s. 6d.

"A book which every Bible student should possess. It will be of special value to the class teacher, and an assistance also to the preacher. It supplies valuable matter for private meditation, and those who conduct Bible Readings will find it most suggestive."—Christian Progress.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MOSES:

As seen in the Tabernacle and its Various Services. By Rev. GEORGE RODGERS. Frontispiece. Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s.

"No young Christian, and especially no preacher, should be ignorant of the truth which this small volume very simply but very forcibly enunciates."
The Record.

"A very spiritual as well as instructive little book, the Saviour being typically portrayed in the Tabernacle, the High Priest, and the Sacrifices."—Churchman.

BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY of TEXTS

FOR THE CHILDREN OF GOD. A Series of Scripture Texts and Meditations for every Day in the Year. Cheap Edition—Cloth back, 2s.; Toned Paper, Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d. Presentation Editions—Leather Back, Leatherette Sides, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d. Whole bound in Leather, Gilt Edges, 5s.

"BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY" has been translated into nearly all European languages, and has obtained an enormous circulation in Germany and Great Britain. In this country very few books except the Pilgrim's Progress have been so largely circulated or so widely read."

HERE IS A CASE OF A CHILD. Severe Bronchial Attack and Croup in a Child Three Years old.—Testimonial from Mr. F. T. HORNIBLOW, Bookseller, &c., Charlbury, Oxon.

"DEAR SIR,—I am pleased to tell you of the beneficial effect of your medicine on my little girl, aged three years. She has suffered considerably from bronchial attacks for the past two years, and last Spring had a severe attack of croup. About last May I commenced giving her the Balsam, which has so strengthened her chest that she has not had a symptom of a cough since. I strongly recommend it to all mothers who have children with weak chests.

"Yours faithfully,

"December 6, 1883. F. T. HORNIBLOW."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

BOOKS FOR ENQUIRERS AND CONVERTS.

Young Converts;

Or, Beginners in Zion's Ways. By Rev. R. BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"I have been continually asked by young converts where they could get a book in which they might find advice that would be helpful to them. This book seemed just the thing needed at this time. I have known the author, Rev. Dr. Boyd, for many years as a dear father in Israel. I have read his work carefully, and recommend it to all young Christians for prayerful meditation." D. L. Moody

The Way of Life.

A Book for Enquirers. By Rev. ROBERT BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth Boards, 1s.

"About fifteen years ago this little book attracted my notice. I read it with interest, and felt so much profited that I re-read it several times, and then circulated hundreds of copies among the soldiers during the American war. The number that then seemed blessed through reading the book has induced me to ask Messrs. Morgan & Scott to republish it, hoping that it may be the means of good in this country, as it has been in America." D. L. Moody

All About Jesus.

Thoughts and Reflections on the Person and Work of Christ. By ALEXANDER DICKSON. This book was printed at the express desire of Mr. D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"The volume sets forth Jesus very much in Scriptural language, for we have counted over 1340 passages of Holy Writ, chastely and lovingly interwoven in the discourses. Throughout, Jesus is the subject of delightful meditation, affection, and adoration."

The Methodist.

"In the Volume of the Book;"

Or, The Profit and Pleasure of Bible Study.

BY GEORGE F. PENTECOST, M.A.

With Introductions
by Rev. JOSEPH COOK and Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D.

SEVENTH EDITION.

"The Author is well known in this country as well as in America as an able and successful evangelist and preacher. The book is a well-arranged product of a fresh and vigorous mind, steeped in biblical thought and spirit, and fitted in no ordinary measure to give clear views of the scope and purpose of the Bible, to confirm faith in its Divine origin and authority, and to guide to such a use of it as may build up the reader, both in holiness and comfort, and in zeal and usefulness unto Eternal Life. While admirably fitted for young converts, no Christian can read it without both stimulus and profit."—The Outlook, Feb. 1, 1884.

"Letter to the Rev. Robert Dawson, Secretary of the London City Mission, on the dismissal, by the Committee of the Mission, of Mr. Samuel Ship, one of its missionaries, apparently as the result of his having recently adopted higher views than he formerly held of the extent of deliverance from sin offered to us in the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." By JAMES PILLANS WILSON, Local Superintendent in the Mission.

Any desirous of obtaining a copy of this letter can do so by writing to me at the undernoted address, sending 4d. for the price and postage, or without money if not well able to send it. But my immediate object in this advertisement is to obtain employment for Mr. Ship. For it is surely a reflection on the Church of God that a first-class missionary should remain unemployed only for believing and daring openly to avow his belief that "if we walk in the light . . . the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

Mr. Ship can have the highest testimonials from the Committee and other Officers of the Mission, and other Christian friends, as to his personal Christian character and his devotedness to his work.

THE INFLUENCE OF MAGNETISM UPON THE CIRCULATION.

The whole organism is worked by means of the nervo-vital fluid, the blood being its source, and the oxygen of the atmosphere supplying the positive element to the blood, which, when oxygenised, becomes Electrically positive: the lungs being already in that positive condition, there is a mutual repulsion; and, since the lungs cannot leave the chest, the positive blood must, especially as the lungs are being constantly supplied with negative venous blood, between which and the positive lungs there is a mutual attraction. The blood thus repelled from the lungs returns to the heart, and thence is propelled into the great aorta; thence through the whole of the arteries; the most distant, being most negative, attract the blood onward to the extremities of the capillaries; and the venous capillaries being still more negative all the way to the heart and lungs, the blood is attracted through its whole course on electrical principles.

Admitting that the nervous fluid is the channel of Magnetic influence—and by its constant change and repair it is fitted to become the agent of the mind—we see how it really forms the connecting link between the vital organs and all the functions of life; in fact, how the life-force of the animal economy permeates every part of the organism. It has for its great highway the spinal chord and the threefold system of conductors, viz., the nerves of sensation, and the nerves of voluntary and involuntary motion. This vital or "life" fluid is subject to the laws of Electrical polarity, both in its general circulation and in every organ of the body. When in health, the positive and negative forces balance each other: but any agency which changes this relation may be the cause of disease.

From Mrs. BLIGHT, Tythecott, Buckland Brewery, near Bideford, Devon.

January 17, 1884.

"It is with feelings of gratitude that I write to tell you of the benefit I have derived from your treatment. When first I adopted it, I was so crippled that I was unable to do anything, and could not get up and down stairs without assistance, and I quite despaired of ever getting better, the pain in my knee was so severe. But now, although using my crutch, I am able to get about nicely, can walk upstairs or to market, and do a great deal of housework, and am free from pain, for which I am thankful to my heavenly Father. I recommend your treatment whenever I have the chance."

Having spent many years of patient, laborious, and continued study in adapting his treatment to some of the most obscure and intractable affections, Mr. Garratt now claims, as the result of his professional career, to have attained a success unparalleled in the healing art. Those who desire further information on his method of treatment should peruse his Essays, explaining the medical effect of Magnetism upon the human organism in Health and Disease. His practice is essentially unlike the existing agencies for the manufacture or sale of special Magnetic or Electric articles, it being Mr. Garratt's careful study to adapt the remedy to the requirements of each case—a practice based upon the principles laid down in his published Essays, which can be obtained post free on application. He will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentleman, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.—B. COPSON GARRATT, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

GENERAL GORDON.

THE MAN AND HIS MISSION.

THE whole world is looking with astonishment at the movements of this remarkable man. All the world wonders at the magic influence of his name, and the extraordinary success of his mission. And yet the most striking feature of his character is his singleness of purpose, his simple straightforwardness, his directness and honesty—in a word, rightness—righteousness. He sees the right thing to do, he does it at once, and he does it openly.

The Christ, the King, who shall reign in righteousness, is the desire of all nations. Every righteous ruler among men has been an anticipative type of that coming reign of righteousness and peace; and because General Gordon suddenly appears on a scene where fraud and violence and oppression have been rampant, the story of his advent reads like a realisation in miniature of the coming reign of Christ. "He shall judge the poor of the people; He shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before Him. He shall spare the poor and needy. He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence, and precious shall their blood be in his sight."

This kind of government is needed everywhere. Only this will put down Nihilism and Red Republicanism, et id genus omne. It will be world-wide when Christ is King. It is good to see a foreshadow of it, however faint, in the reign of Gordon in the Soudan.

The Man.

The following extracts from the various biographies of General Gordon can scarcely fail to commend themselves to our readers, containing as they do so much of the true Christian philosophy of life:—

"It is our own fault we are so discontented. We throw away the best years of our existence in trying for a time, which will never come, when we shall have enough to content us. I am sure it is the secret of true happiness to be content with what we actually have. Of course you may preach this (and it has been preached for ages) and never be listened to. We raise our own goblins, and as soon as one is laid we raise another. I confess that I have not patience with the groans of half the world, and declare I think there is more happiness among these miserable blacks, who have not a meal from day to day, than among our own middle classes. The blacks are glad of a little handful of maize, and live in the greatest discomfort. They have not a strip to cover them; but you do not see them grunting and groaning all day long, as you see scores and scores in England, with their wretched dinner parties and attempts at gaiety, where all is hollow and miserable. I gave you 'Watson on Contentment'—it is the true expositor of how happiness is to be obtained, i.e., by submission to the will of God, whatever that will may be. He who can say he realises this has overcome the world and its trials. The quiet peaceful life of our Lord was solely due to his submission to God's will. There will be times when a strain may come on one, but it is only for a time; and as the strain, so will your strength be." . . .

"Why are people hearses, and look like the pictures of misery? It must be from discontent at the government of God, for all things are directed by Him. No one has anything to make him really weary, if his heart is in tune with God and he has health. The cruet-stand expression of countenance ought to be taxed among us. . . . If by being doleful in appearance it did good, I would say, Be very doleful; but it does not do any; it only repels people." . . .

"I have done all my accounts with the Government, and am now, as far as the things of the world are concerned, ready to depart; but something tells me I shall not do so yet. The intense comfort of having no fear, no uneasiness about being ill, is very great, and more than half the cause of good health. No comfort is equal to that which he has who has God for his stay; He who has this has already died, and is free from the annoyances of this life. I do not say I have attained to this perfect state, but I have it as my great desire." . . .

"I would that all had the full assurance of future life. Till we throw over the idea that we are better than others we can never have that assurance. We must give up keeping credit lists with God, which are not true ones; they are all debtor lists. Do you know that verse, Eph. ii. 10, which says that ye are ordained to bring forth good works? If certain good works are ordained to be brought forth by you why should you glory in them? Do not flatter yourself that you are wanted—that God could not work without you; it is an honour if He employs you. No one is indispensable, either in this world's affairs or in spiritual work. When things turn out in a way we do not wish we quarrel with God if we feel put out. Most difficult is this lesson, and only to be learnt by a continual thought of this world being only a temporary one—i.e., by continually thinking of death as a release. What a calm life a man living thus would live—what services he would render!—nothing would move him, whether he were soldier, statesman, or what not." . . .

"People say or think, Do not break the world's code of honour, and it matters little how we break the code of God. How we ignore Him in all things. Whilst I live I value God's blessing—health, and if you have that, as far as this world goes, you are rich. . . . . I feel much the want of something to do. I have been working at a great many things, but I cannot fully occupy my time. One cannot tell what a blessing employment is till we lose it. Like one's health, we do not notice these blessings. . . . Inaction to me is terrible. . . . I ask God for the following things: (1) Not to be disturbed if the Khedive sent me away to-morrow. (2) Not to be disturbed if he keeps me. (3) Not to have anything of the world come between Him and me; and not to fear death, or to feel regret if it came before I completed what I may think my programme. Thank God, He gives me most comforting assurance that nothing shall disturb me, or come between Him and me."

His Mission.

A wonderful scene in connection with General Gordon's arrival at Khartoum was described in a telegraphic despatch to The Times last week: the correspondent says:—

"Immediately on General Gordon's arrival he summoned the officials, thus preparing the people for some salutary changes. He next held a levée at the Mudirieh, the entire population, even the poorest Arab, being admitted. On his way between the Mudirieh and the Palace about 1000 persons pressed forward kissing his hands and feet, and calling him 'Sultan,' 'Father,' and 'Saviour of Kordofan.'

"General Gordon and Colonel Stewart at once opened offices in the palace, giving to every one with a grievance admittance and a careful hearing. The Government books, recording from time immemorial the outstanding debts of the overtaxed people, were publicly burnt in front of the palace. The kourbashes, whips, and implements for administering the bastinado from Government-house were all placed on the blazing pile. The evidence of debts and the emblems of oppression perished together.

"In the afternoon General Gordon created a council of the local notables, all Arabs. Then he visited the hospital and arsenal. With Colonel Stewart, Coetlogon Pasha, and the English Consul he visited the prison, and found it to be a dreadful den of misery. Two hundred wretches loaded with chains lay there. They were of all ages, boys and old men, some having never been tried, some having been proved innocent, but forgotten for over six months, some arrested on suspicion and detained there more than three years, many merely prisoners of war, and one a woman, who had spent fifteen years in the prison for a crime committed when she was a girl.

"General Gordon at once commenced to demolish this bastille. All the prisoners will be briefly examined, and if it be advisable set at liberty. Before it was dark scores of wretches had had their chains struck off, and to-day Colonel Stewart is continuing this work."

Telegraphing two days later, the same correspondent sends the following details as to the progress of events under General Gordon's beneficent sway:—

"General Gordon is perfectly confident that he will accomplish the pacification of the Soudan without firing a shot, such is the effect of the almost incredible influence which he has hourly manifested. Colonel Stewart is hard at work examining the prisons, and liberating the poor wretches confined in them. Many of them have been waiting several years for trial; many have remained long after their sentences had expired. In many cases the offences are unknown to the gaolers, and one man has been in confinement for a year awaiting his trial for stealing property to the value of 5s.

"To-day Sheikh Belud, of Khartoum, was carried into General Gordon's presence with his feet fearfully mutilated. Six weeks ago Hussein Pasha Cheri, the late Vice-Governor, bastinadoed the old man till the sinews of his feet were exposed. General Gordon has telegraphed to Cairo to have £50 stopped from Hussein Pasha Cheri's pay for the benefit of the Sheikh. If he objects to this deduction he is to be returned for trial. Yesterday an influential man stated that the ex-Vice-Governor had flogged his brother to death. I have myself heard him threaten to flog a small boy to death, in order to extract evidence from him.

"The minor authorities are accustomed to demand backsheesh from all people entering the one gate which is left open. General Gordon has now opened two more gates and prohibited the custom, and he has proclaimed a free market.

"He has also established boxes, into which the people can drop petitions and complaints. All these are examined, and the blame is quickly saddled on any official guilty of not allowing a petitioner the full benefit of the proclamation.

"The proclamation is posted everywhere. It gives more than the Madhi has promised, and is quickly restoring peace and secure government. The General believes that the petition-box system is equally applicable to Lower Egypt, and that it would go far to abolish the abuses incident to Pasha rule."

In a leading article on "The Power of the Individual," in its issue of Saturday last, The Spectator well remarks:—

"We can hardly recollect in history such a testimony to the power which may live in the individual as the summons sent by a great Government to an Englishman, still little known to the body of his people, to go without soldiers, or followers, or forces of any kind, into a mutinous city in the centre of Eastern Africa, and there, by his personal influence, release garrisons numbering thirty thousand men, imprisoned in cantonments scattered over a territory two thousand miles square, by hordes of savages wild with hatred, new-born hope of deliverance, and religious excitement. Who ever heard of or could have conceived of the possibility of such a feat? Yet it has not only been attempted, but will, if it is ever wise to predict upon evidence, in all human probability succeed. A single man, by virtue of the influence of a man upon men, of the belief he excites, and the awe he inspires, and the devotion he can elicit among men who detest his creed, dread his race, and distrust his colour, has changed the whole aspect of affairs throughout an African empire, has checked a native conqueror hitherto victorious, has calmed a fury which seemed unappeasable, and has, to all appearance, altered the entire complexion of internal politics. . . . No other man than General Gordon could, with the same means, have done what he has already accomplished; or, while still nearly invisible, have made himself in such a region so effectually felt. The strength, wherever it comes from, is in him, in a personality so potent that it lifts him of himself up to the level of kings."

FAITH v. DOUBT.*

By Mr. C. H. SPURGEON.

FAITH HAS WROUGHT WONDERS.

FAITH is a great worker. The men of strong convictions fashion the world upon their anvils. Confidence girds a man's loins, and nerves him to the putting forth of all his energy. In the eleventh chapter of his Epistle to the Hebrews, Paul brings forth a bead-roll of faith's heroes, and erects an Arc de Triomphe to their memory. The names stand out in capitals of light: Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham; and the sculptured scenes are such as these: "Subdued kingdoms;" "stopped the mouths of lions;" "quenched the violence of fire." If the panegyrist of faith comes to a pause, it is not because matter fails him; he exclaims, "What shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gideon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthah; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets."

WHAT HAS DOUBT ACHIEVED?

How is it that no such trophy has ever been raised to the honour of unbelief? Will the poet of infidelity and the historian of scepticism yet appear? If so, what will be their record? "Working righteousness" and "obtaining promises" are rather out of the line of doubt, and it is not likely to endure much suffering to "obtain a better resurrection," for it sneers at the mention of such a thing; the eulogist of doubt would have to content himself with lower achievements. But what would they be? What hospitals or orphanages has doubt erected? What Missions to cannibal tribes has infidelity sustained? What fallen women or profligate men has scepticism reclaimed and new created?

"Sing, muse! If such a theme, so dark, so wrong,
May find a muse to grace it with a song."

The Milton of this subject may well turn out to be like him whom Gray describes in his Elegy as "mute, inglorious." "By their fruits ye shall know them."

What are the precious outcomings of "modern thought"? We hear the shouts of the craftsmen as they repeat this cry, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" But where are the holy and happy results of the "advanced criticism" which is so busily undermining the foundations of faith?

ADVANCED THOUGHT.

We none of us as yet know all that God may cause us to learn from his Word. We have waded into the shallows of that great sea; but, oh, the depths! We are to grow in heavenly knowledge. Possibly one generation may advance upon another in such knowledge. But some growths are suspicious, especially such as weaken faith. It is certain that from the apostolic period to the dark ages, if the Church advanced at all it was in a backward direction. Religious thought made progress in a wretched fashion away from truth for several centuries. It is more than possible that modern thought is starting on another such progressive period.

Those who are infatuated with novelties may make a dogma out of a certain divine's statement that "More light is yet to break from the Word;" but we, without denying it, take leave to question the common interpretation of the prophecy. If it be meant that apostles, confessors, and martyrs did not know the meaning of God's revelation; that holy men of former years were ignoramuses compared with our present professors; and that Puritans and the like are all to be discarded, because new lamps have eclipsed the old light—then we believe the statement to be one great, broad, pestilent lie.

God has not left these nineteen centuries without his grace. He has not tantalised the ages with a Bible which can only be opened up by a succession of Germans with big pipes. We have measured the boasters who are the apostles of "modern thought," and we are slow to admit that the truth of the Gospel was purposely involved in obscurity that their vast intellects might in due time develop it. Under their management our churches are famishing, and religion is falling into contempt; and yet we must daily wait at the posts of their doors, while their changeful oracles reveal to us the progressive theology.

Bah! we shall go on feeding men with the bread of heaven, while these pretenders are proving that sawdust is the true stuffing for the human doll.

FAITH MUST BE FOR EVERY DAY.

God is one; God's works and ways are one. His laws for earth are in the same statute-book as those for heaven. The natural, as God made it, is not in conflict with the spiritual. The line between things secular and sacred is imaginary and mischievous. We believe God for time as well as for eternity, for earth as well as for heaven, for the body as well as for the soul. Far be it from any honest man to confine his faith in God to certain mysterious and impalpable concerns, and doubt Him when it comes to his immediate business, and the trials of every-day life. We are taught by our Great Master to pray to the heavenly Father: "Thy kingdom come;" and the same prayer includes the petition, "Give us this day our daily bread." To confide to heaven the greater cares, and leave the less to unbelief, would be as unwise as to commit the door of the house to a watchman, but expressly to exempt an open window from his oversight. What is little? What is trifling? There exists no such thing to a wise man anxious to be always right. No, we must have a present, home-keeping, shop-keeping, table-furnishing faith; for if our mainstay be only available on great occasions, we may be utterly undone by the ills to which it is inapplicable. "The just shall live by faith." Faith is not a go-to-meeting coat for us; but an every-day suit. Comprehensive, universal, and constant in operation, it is a principle which those always require who are perpetually in danger, constantly in need. As the cherubic sword turned every way to keep the gate of Eden, so does faith guard the soul from the advance of enemies, let them come from what point of the compass they may.

TRUE, AND AS GREAT AS TRUE.

If the things which our faith receives be indeed facts, they are tremendously true, and demand from us life at its utmost stretch. Revelation deals not with trifles. Let men take heed how they behave themselves amid eternal verities. Furthermore, the believer rejoices that these things are also gloriously true. His is an inheritance of inconceivable magnificence. The truths which surround the life of faith are worthy of immortals; yea, worthy of God himself. Let us walk according to our high vocation. Oh! for ardours fit for the temple of the Infinite, wherein we minister this day!

* Under the suggestive title of The Clue to the Maze, Mr. Spurgeon's new book on modern doubt has been issued by his publishers, Messrs. Passmore & Alabaster (1s.) The extracts we give will indicate its valuable and helpful character.

THE GROCERS' LICENCE.

OUR eyes are even yet only half-opened to the mischievous operation of the Grocers' Licence. Medical men are perhaps more alive to it than any other class of the community. At a recent meeting of about forty members of the profession in a southern town, it was unanimously acknowledged and deplored that drinking and drunkenness are greatly on the increase among women, and that the Grocers' Licence is the cause.

"How can this be?" A housewife gives her order; while it is being attended to she is invited to take a glass of wine. She enjoys it. The price is only so-and-so, and a bottle is added to the purchase. Again: A Christmas-box is sent for the servants of good customers, and a bottle of wine or spirits is included. The gift—be it a glass or a bottle—is often the beginning of a very ruinous ending.

A surgeon was called in the other day to a desolate and destitute house, where a girl of nineteen, faint and exhausted, was in travail. He asked the drunken mother, who staggered in, for meal of any kind to make her daughter some food. There was none. The only bright thing in the wretched house was a bottle of gin on the mantel. "We have given her a good deal of that." "Yes, you have almost killed her. Can't you fetch some food?" "No; we owe a score, and they won't let us have anything." The surgeon fetched it himself, and saved the life of the young mother and her child.

But how did all this misery and ruin come about? The father, a painter, was an excellent workman, able to earn £3 a week; he drank, but not often immoderately. In an evil day a grocer added a licence to his business, and the painter's wife was caught in the snare. She drank and taught her daughter to drink. Then the husband got drunk more frequently, earnings decreased, and to make up the deficiency they took in lodgers, men who worked in the brickfield. Then the daughter fell. These are some of the results of the Grocers' Licence.

This pestilent evil has so increased that the greater part of many grocers' profits is derived from drink. Consequently, it is often difficult to find a grocer who is not also a licensed liquor-seller. And the man who shrinks from making money thus, and therefore does not take out a licence, is placed at a serious disadvantage in comparison with his less scrupulous competitor.

Sometimes the licensed grocer gains the Post-office; again his power for mischief is increased, as servants and young people sent with letters, or to buy stamps, become familiarised with the intoxicating drinks. We hope the attention of the Postmaster-General will be directed to this crying evil. It is greatly to be desired that those who seek the welfare of their families would make a point of supporting those grocers who do not take out a licence. It would be much better to do this than to save (possibly, not certainly) a few pounds a year by buying at the Stores, which are all contaminated with the drink traffic.

MR. HENRY HOLLOWAY.—This evangelist has been laid aside many months, but is now restored to health, and wishes us to state that he is ready for evangelistic work. His address is 24, Byrom-street, Normanton-road, Derby.

FLOWERS FOR THE POOR.—Mr. J. C. Rogers, formerly of Camden-town, having been recently appointed by the London City Mission to the overcrowded district of Barrett's-court, adjacent to Gray's-yard, Oxford-street, he is anxious to recommence cheering the homes and hearts of the poor by flowers and texts. Mrs. Gem, 59, Wigmore-street, W., will be glad to receive flowers cards, or donations.

For the Young.

TO BOYS AND GIRLS WHO LOVE FRANCE.

Dear Young Friends,

HAVE any of you thought of our Christmas while enjoying yours? I think none of you will have fancied a Christmas for us so sad as the reality has been. We were planning for our Christmas tree, and had little gifts all ready, when on our return from Valence we found that scarlet-fever had been brought to the village. One child after another took it, till one morning we were shocked to hear of the death of a dear little fellow, an only child. I had seen him the day before sleeping so peacefully that I hoped all danger was over, but we were sadly mistaken. He was buried the day after in his father's field. So sad it was to see father and mother leaning on one another, as if there was no one else in the world.

What did the pastor say? you ask. I have something sad to tell you. There is no pastor in Verchény, so the poor father sent to ask the pastor in the next town to come, but he would not come, and sent word that no one was to ask him again, as he was in another Consistory, So we thought of a young evangelist who had just began work in the Drôme valley. An old schoolfellow drove off to find him, and he came at once, and spoke words of comfort to the parents, and of warning to those who had not yet accepted God's great gift. The boys were all there, excited, but not solemnised. It is so rare a thing for a child to die in these villages that they hardly understood it. One, a tall lad of fifteen, however, cried bitterly. The last time the little fellow was at school there was a quarrel; perhaps he was already fretful from the coming fever, and the one who now mourned so deeply had struck him, "Oh," he said, "if I had known he was to die, I would never have struck him!" It was very sad, for in his delirium he still fancied his companion was attacking him. It should serve as a lesson for life.

Then we lost another, little Rachel—dear little lamb early gathered in the arms of the good Shepherd. She was only two days ill, and no one thought of danger. All the last day the bustle of sausage-making and chopping pork had been going on in the next room to her. She must have been sorely wearied, but before morning she was at rest for ever. It was very sweet to see her little Testament showing marks of diligent reading. I never saw the Testament of a child of six so worn. Almost her last words in delirum were, "Bring me my Testament, I want to learn my text." She was the only Bible reader in the house, and they buried her Testament with her. She looked very sweet, dressed for the grave in the new frock which she had only worn once, to come to the Sabbath school. We noticed at the time how little she was taken up by her dress, though naturally very fond of finery.

This time they sent for the evangelist, but he was away, so they asked another pastor to come (I don't like telling you these sad things, but I want you to know how great is our need here). He came, and what do you think was almost the first thing he said? He told the sorrowing friends that the little darling was not in heaven; he said that was all a mistake. Little by little God would draw her soul out of the grave. I don't know what he meant, and I don't think he did himself. The only comfort he gave the poor parents was that others had lost children as well as they. It was a sad funeral; every one was afraid; one or two young girls were sick afterwards only from fear, and to think of no comfort being given to the weeping crowd was terrible. Oh, if you could grow up quick and come to help us!

Since then we have lost two other little ones—one a little Catholic girl who always came to Sunday-school when she could escape the surveillance of the curé, and who dearly loved her little Bible. The curé told those who were at her funeral that God was angry with France because they had banished the nuns, and that He was visiting the sins of the parents on the children because He would have innocent victims! He told them little Gabrielle was young and not very guilty, but that she would need prayers to get her out of purgatory! I am glad to tell you that at the last funeral they found a pastor, who came several miles to be present, and who did preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

So you see our Christmas and New Year Year have been very sad in some ways. But not altogether; the few little girls who are not ill have come every Sunday, and they know how to find texts for themselves and sometimer surprise ur by their questions and remarks. We are to have a fête of thanksgiving when all are cured, but that will not be for a while.

You will remember having heard of Charens and Artamar, where we were in summer. We have just come back from seeing our friends there, and have had the joy of giving them the delight of a Christmas tree. I had thought of telling you about it, but I do not think there will be space for that now. Poor neglected children! They have no Sabbath school, and their pastor has been there five times during the last year. How they long for a Sabbath school! During the midsummer holidays two young girls, home from school, gathered the children of the three hamlets every Sunday for singing and instruction; but when the holidays were over they went back to school, and the little ones are again neglected.

We were there only three days, having meetings every night, and one day we walked over to Artamar where we saw the poor helpless invalid of whom I spoke last year. We found her able to be lifted from bed and placed in a chair, but her face was sadder and more wearied than when last we saw her. No wonder; her friend the young teacher has been placed in another village. Her successor is a Catholic, who has her own family with her, and who, of course, does not take the same interest in the invalid. We were glad to find some of you had thought of her. She thanks heartily the one who has sent her Rayon du Soliel; but some one has sent her regularly Living Waters, in English, which must have been a little tantalising, as she is, of course, French, and speaks patois even better than French.

The Artamar children are less trained than the Charens children. A group of boys, the oldest perhaps 17, were standing near the door as Miss Mudie sang "Porte ouverte." I gave each a little hymn-book open at the place, but they had not an idea how to follow the words. I think the oldest did understand at last, as he followed the tune of the last verse, and he told me afterwards he had caught the air. We hope to go again, but how to help them is a puzzle. Think, dear children, what Sunday would be to you, with no pastor, no Sabbath-school, no library, no hymns, no family worship, and thank God for your privileges! May He prepare you for his work very, very soon.

Yours very affectionately,

Verchény, Drôme, France, Jan, S. R. Geldard.

Major Whittle and Mr. McGranahan.

THESE evangelists have had a good week at the Methodist Church, Wandsworth. The meetings increased as they proceeded, and at the last many rose to testify of having found peace at Mr. Moody's and subsequent meetings. The minister, Rev. — Brown, and his helpers threw their energies into the work, and thereby strengthened the hands of preacher and singers.

On Sunday last the services were continued in the Presbyterian Church and closed last night (Wednesday). From this place Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan go to Greenwich at the united invitation of five churches. They commence their meetings in the Presbyterian Church on Monday next.

Feasting the Friendless.

A VERY interesting gathering, as remarkable for the place of meeting as for the persons assembled, was held on Friday week at Mr. H. M. Rackstraw's large premises in Upper-street, Islington. This gentleman had very kindly invited the lads from Mrs. Watts-Hughes' Home for Friendless Boys, at Palmer House, Holloway, to a supper, and a splendid repast was placed upon the tables, which they heartily appreciated and appropriated. The delight of the poor boys seemed equalled by that of their generous entertainer and his assistants. The lads then marched through to the extensive shop, now converted into a meeting room, the wide area between the counters having been covered with chairs, which were filled by a large number of Mr. Rackstraw's employés.

Upon the large platform the boys (nearly thirty) performed their military evolutions, showing how excellently they had been drilled. After united singing came solos, &c., from the boys—one song with the touching refrain, "My father's a drunkard, and mother is dead," bringing tears into the eyes of the sympathetic listeners—felt to be only too true a picture of many such friendless children. Mrs. Watts-Hughes, with a voice wonderfully expressive and sweet, favoured the company with, "If I were a voice," and one of Mr. Sankey's hymns; after which Miss Annie Williams gave with great effect, "O rest in the Lord!" The only unpleasant performance was that of the clock, which at last, and too soon, brought this most enjoyable evening to a close, the boys taking away, in the form of oranges and cake, something more than the recollection of a delightful treat.

Mrs. Watts-Hughes has carried on her Boys' Home for some years, and her Gospel Musical Mission for a still longer period: but all has been done so unobtrusively as almost to escape public notice, more especially as but little appeal has been made. She is, however, well known to the poor and destitute, while the children of Highbury and Holloway seem to regard her almost as their personal property. A short time since a little waif, with not much besides dirt to cover him, was observed threading his way through the crowd until he had placed himself by the side of a lady. Was he aiming at her pocket? Oh, no; it was the lady's hand he sought, for he knew he already possessed her heart (shared, however, by numbers of others like himself). He gently insinuated his dirty little hand into hers; nor was it dropped in disgust or astonishment, but with a warm pressure and kindly smile (said the observer), this ill-matched couple passed on to the lady's (Mrs. Watts-Hughes') home, which is very frequently shared with much unaristrocratic company. Would that her purse were as inexhaustible as her sympathy, or that such noble work for homeless and helpless lambs were as well known as it deserves to be; then it would not be hampered and hindered by lack of "the sinews of war."

Lazarus.

"THEY meet together rich and poor. The Lord,
He is the Maker of them all."
The light
Streaming through Gothic windows many-hued,
With paintings of the Master's sad, sweet face,
His eyes full of the love divine, his hands
Touching the leprous and the sin-stained lost,
Fell on the preacher as he spake the words
Unheeded in the comfortable pews.
Then, as the organ rippled mellow notes,
The crowd surged out, and went away to dine.

A mist was creeping from the Thames, the slush
Was ankle deep along the Sunday streets,
And on the biting wind the sleet flew fast:
The poor had fled before it to their dens.

"The Lord He is the Maker of them all,"
Said softly, in an undertone, my friend;
And then he whispered, in a voice full sad,
"Where is my brother, whose shed blood
Crieth unto me from the ground?" "Am I
My brother's keeper, Lord?"

We spake no more,
But slowly turned, each with the same intent,
To seek our brothers and our sisters, poor
And an hungered, starved like famished wolves
In winter-time, and lo! we found them, hutched
In cellars filthier than the filthy streets;
In garrets vile, rank with the noisome smells,
Dread envoys of the pestilence that walks
At noonday in the slums and crowded courts
Where wealthy England's poor are packed like swine;—
Nay, not like swine, for swine, unlike the poor,
Are worth some gold at market and at fair,
And, therefore, are not left to pine and die.

From out one window of a gloomy room—
Where, on a heap of straw, a woman lay
And longed for death—we saw a lofty spire,
Pointing, through wintry mists, upward to heaven,
And on its peak a cross; but in the dens,
Where fever floated in the air, the folks
Were Christless in their woe; the children, gaunt
In grief, knew not the name of Him who said,
"Suffer the little ones to come to Me"—
The loving Lord, whose holy hands divine
Scorned not to touch men's lonesome castaways.

Huddled for warmth, and faint for want of food,
In rags, diseased, they lay, the little child
Scarce aught but bones and hungry-looking eyes;
The mother wan and wasted, and the girl,
Infant in years, but with the face of one
O'erburdened with a load of grief; the men—
Men with the strength of babes, weakened by want—
Looking with love upon the wife, the child,
They could not save from lingering death.

These are the poor the loving Saviour said
We should have with us always! Yea, Lord, see,
Our beasts are better cared for than thy poor!

At evening, as the darkness sadly fell,
We turned, with heavy hearts, unto the West.
A myriad bells were calling unto prayer,
The glittering gin-shops gaped for prey, the crowds [sweet
Surged through the streets, and life seemed very
To those who had no load upon their hearts,
And pain and death a poet's dream
Of that which is not and which cannot be,
Though in the East the human suffering seethed
As do the waters of a restless sea,
And unto God went up the cry, "How long,
How long, O Lord, how long?"

Upon my step
I found sad Lazarus with his many sores,
Without the background of the lurid East,
Aflame with fever. There he lay. No need
To go afar to find him or his like!
So common are they that we pass them by
And turn away to talk of "want of thrift,"
Of "surplus population," or "the East,"
Unthinking that the surging sullen sea,
Which,—ebbing not beneath the golden moon
Of all our nation's wealth, the gift of God,—
Casts these unsightly waifs unto our doors,
May one day overleap its feeble bounds,
And deluge all the land in tears and blood.

Mission Coffee Houses.

DEAR SIR,—May I ask your readers for their kind sympathy and benevolence at this time of desperate need? "Outcast London" is crying out as it has never cried before, and respectable, hard-working people entreating to us to save them from these terrible depths. May I ask earnestly, as their mouthpiece, to be allowed to start some Mission Coffee Houses, in different parts of London, where I have found openings; buildings, customers by the thousand, workers ready to help, and managers to conduct the work, are ready to my hand. We only want the money, and we will then go forward. We could begin at once on a smaller or larger scale in several different places if we only had the funds. The first outlay is all that is wanted. We can make these Mission coffee houses pay their own way, by God's help, as we go on; and should any one of them fail, either the more successful ones will help it, or it will be shut up. We will not work in debt.

Earnestly hoping and feeling sure that your readers will respond to my entreaty,—I am, yours faithfully, E. W. Hope.

[Communications may be addressed to Lady Hope (Authoress of "Our Coffee-room," &c.), 12, Great Cumberland-place, W.]

A Note from Dr. Cuyler.

DEAR FRIEND,—In one of your brief editorials (January 24) you, quite too generously, attribute to me the pithy sentence that ministers had better spend their time in "pointing men to the Cross," rather than in "propping it." In my address here, before some public assembly, I only quoted that crisp sentence from that prince of sermon-builders, Rev. Alexander Maclaren, of Manchester. I sometimes see some of my own waifs picked up and fathered by other people—but I should feel very like a culprit if I were to be caught stealing one of the bright "bairns" of my brother McLaren. Honour only to whom honour is due.

I rejoice to read in your teeming columns each week the good tidings from brothers Moody and Sankey; I only wish that I could send you equally cheering intelligence. But this has been in every sense, a cold winter in America. The spiritual thermometer has ran almost as low as "Fahrenheit." I do not remember a season in which there have been so few revivals, and such a lack of conversions. My neighbour Dr. Pentecost expresses the same opinion.

Perhaps, in return for our worldliness and weakness of faith, God is throwing us all down on our backs, so that his people may be humbled and compelled to look upward. Oh, for Nehemiah's eyes to see "the distress," and Nehemiah's praying heart and busy hand to build up the walls. God save us, too, from the untempered mortar of a theology that blinks sin, and belittles retribution! These are sifting times: but for the Lord's own wheat there are glorious harvests yet coming.

Yours for the old Gospel,
Theodore L. Cuyler.

Brooklyn, U.S.A., Feb. 8.

DOCK LABOURERS' MISSION.—It was my happy privilege to spend an evening recently among the poor dock labourers with our toiling friend, Mr. Coleman. During the tea service the heat was very oppressive, but when the ladies commenced cheering the poor men by their solos, and when Mr. Miles proclaimed the Gospel message, we entirely forgot all that was unpleasant. Our worthy friend, Mr. Coleman, greatly needs our prayerful sympathy, so that he may have grace to continue this work among such a poor and needy class. J. Rothe.

Our Railway Men.

A MEETING of the supporters of the Railway Mission, the head-quarters of which are at the Y.M.C.A., Aldersgate-street, was held on Feb. 21st, at the residence of Mr. Arthur Hill, in Lansdowne-road, Notting-hill. Speeches were given detailing the progress made by the Mission. Mr. George Clark, the hon. secretary, referred with satisfaction to the fact that the work had grown tremendously both in London and the suburbs, and in many country towns, Birmingham, Derby, Ipswich, and several other large centres being alluded to. The Mission owed its origin to the need which had been realised by its promoters for a special effort with a view to reaching railway men, who as a rule were prevented by their duties from attending a church or Mission-hall on Sundays. The London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company had within the last two years opened three halls, to be specially devoted to temperance and religious services for their men. The official organ of the Mission, the Railway Signal, a penny paper published monthly, had a circulation of 17,000, and the men largely contributed to the funds, it being found best to make the different branches of the Mission as nearly self-supporting as possible. Each of these branches properly worked would cost about £30 a year beyond what was contributed by the men themselves.

Lady Hope, who afterwards spoke, pointed out the importance of the body of men among whom the Mission was conducted. There were about 400,000 of them in Great Britain, or more men than there are in the army, navy, and police combined. As special Missions to the army and navy were in fashion, it seemed reasonable that an attempt should be made to reach the larger class in whose hands when travelling we daily place our lives.

Several of the men themselves afterwards delivered brief addresses, and gave their testimony to the value of the work done by the Railway Mission. These speakers were — Guard Pearce (Westbourne-park Branch), Foreman Porter Attwood (South London Branch), Guard Pain (Walthamstow Branch), Inspector Roberts (West Brompton Branch), and Inspector Fox (Great Western Railway).

In the absence of the Hon Treasurer, Mr. S. Gurney Sheppard, Mr. Clarke made an earnest appeal for more liberal support from the travelling public generally. The cost of this large Mission last year had only been about £1,200, and so far the public had this year only guaranteed an income in annual subscriptions to the extent of about £100. We certainly hope that so good a work will meet with the support which it deserves.

CANTERBURY-ROAD MISSION, KILBURN.—The eighth annual report of this Mission, under the direction of Mr. H. D. McMasters and Mr. T. Luff, gives an encouraging account of Gospel and Temperance work among old and young in a needy neighbourhood.

OUR POLICEMEN.—In our brief notice last week of the work of the Christian Policemen's Association, we ought to have stated that On and Off Duty, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 1d., at 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C. All orders for copies should be sent to that address.

ITALIANS IN LONDON.—Having read that service for the Church of England Mission to the poor Italian Protestants in London would be held in their own tongue in St. John's Church, Clerkenwell, in lieu of St. Thomas', Liberty of the Rolls, which is about to be pulled down, I went there on Sunday, the 10th inst. The church was already occupied by a considerable number of Italians with their wives and children, and many others came in later. The service was hearty and bright; really good congregational singing, in addition to the choir of school-children of the Italian Mission Schools. A most impressive sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Passalenti, Chaplain to the Mission, to a very attentive congregation, from Rom. i. 16. The church of St. John's, Clerkenwell, has been kindly lent by the Rector, the Rev. W. Dawson, to Dr. Pascalenti for Sunday afternoons, at 4.30, and it is to be hoped that all the Protestant Italians will avail themselves of the privilege thus afforded them. A Well-wisher.

Christian Workers in New York.

A HASTY breakfast in a crowded restaurant is followed by a trip by elevated road to the Brooklyn Bridge, over which the large commodious cars hurry us to the city of churches. Passing the headquarters of the Salvation Army in America, a stop of a few minutes is made. Soon we are in the cosy office of an earnest Christian dentist, Dr. P——, whose New Year's testimony is that he is saved—saved, he says from rum, tobacco, and Sunday papers; and when we add, "Satan generally," he willingly gives his assent. A brief rest here, and we start for the home of George C. Stebbins, whose sweet singing we trust will long move Christian hearts. Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins welcome us, and afford us the pleasure of hearing one of their songs, and generously give for the benefit of Christian work in New Haven copies of all of Mr. Stebbins' latest hymns, with permission to print any others we choose.

Then across Brooklyn again, and over the great bridge to New York. A short stop at the Bible House, and a call on Dr. Barrows, one of the secretaries of the American Home Missionary Society, whom we find full of life and energy, planning and writing, pushing on the work of the Kingdom with hand and brain. A few minutes here, and we step down the hall and are shaking hands with that zealous opponent of the Pope, Father O'Connor. He has piles of his new magazine, "The Converted Catholic," lying about him; he tells us that his arm is lame from continued letter-writing and use of the pen in furthering his work. Then to Mr. Main, of the well-known firm of Bigtow and Main, from whom we obtain much music of one sort or another, and in whose establishment we catch a brief sight of the famous Jerry McAuley, whose work in New York is well known.

In the evening our guide pilots us into a narrow street with towering structures on either side, and an occasional low rookery. We enter a building bearing the sign of "Gospel Meetings," and located in what appears the worst part of this street. The meeting has not commenced, and as time is limited, after a look over the room, we go to a room above, where a class of Italian labourers are being taught to read and speak English; then to a little room adjoining, in which we find Brother Hadley, a fine-looking man of about thirty-five years of age, and a convert, a year or more since, of Jerry McAuley's Mission. Mr. Hadley is giving out keys through a small aperture in the door to rough-looking men, whose faces are seen from time to time at the opening. He tells us that he has a cheap lodging-room above, which we visit, and find to be a large room with a blazing fire, and fifty or more clean beds arranged something after the manner of cots, which are disposed of at the rate of ten and fifteen cents each to poor or homeless men sent from the Missions or Castle Garden. Thence we hasten through Chatham-street, with its old clo' men (who make ineffectual efforts to induce us to invest in their wares), to the Bowery Mission, in which are gathered two or three hundred men of an apparently neglected class. We remain while short and pointed testimonies are given by various speakers, some from the audience. One man tells the story of his conversion, and recalls the words of the preacher by which he was led to accept Christ, and he is recognised by our companion as a convert in one of his meetings in Brooklyn a year ago. The speaker continues his testimony without a thought that the human instrument who brought him to the Saviour's feet is sitting within sound of his voice, and rejoicing that he is still faithful.

Thence to Annex Hall, near Cooper Union, where a meeting is in progress in connection with the Gospel work of C. B. Sawyer. A large company is assembled, and the same order of speaking is observed as in the Bowery Mission. A young man says that he has been converted for some months. "Have you joined a church?" asks the leader. "Yes," is the reply. We think that this is as it should be. The Mission is the vestibule of the church, and, if not, its use is materially impaired. It is nine o'clock, and we enter the Florence Mission for Fallen Women, No. 29, Bleecker-street, passing, as we wend our way thither, many of the wretched ones for whom the Mission works. Some accost us, but step back, with an exclamation of surprise and recognition, when our guide replies, "God bless you." The meeting soon commences, Mr. Irons leading, and assisted by Messrs. Allen and Gibbud, in charge of the Mission. In front, on one side, are a number of young women who have been reclaimed; on the other side, separated only by a narrow aisle, and yet by a great gulf, are a company of others—lost ones to whom this Mission is as a light shining in the midst of great darkness. In the rear of the room are a number of men, idlers and loungers. All are attentive, and listen respectfully to the testimonies and appeals.

It is 10.30, and bidding our Mission friends good-bye and God-speed, we take a car for the boat, which is soon steaming through the waters bearing us back to New Haven.—Gospel Union News.

FRANCE AND MONTE CARLO.

By CHAS. COOK.

WE had not intended visiting any prisons until reaching Italy, but having time to spare in Paris, and having a number of French Gospels, we determined to go to the Maison de la Sante, which contains 1303 prisoners. We passed on through work-room after work-room, and from cell to cell, till at last we reached the hospital, but, alas! all the portions were gone. A number of tracts, however, which were simply a selection of texts, were given to the poor invalids.

To avoid any mistake I asked, "Have you any Bibles in this prison?" "No!" "Have you none in the library?" "I will ask." Then, after some little searching, the librarian found one large French Bible, but that was the only copy they had. Would that I had had a thousand testaments or portions, for they could all have been given away without let or hindrance; but not having intended visiting the French prisons I had made no provision, and only had procured a few dozen for general distribution.

At the Depôt Central we attended a meeting, at which several pastors were present, including M. Theodore Monod; we were glad to hear that a good work is being done amongst the Protestant prisoners by the French pastors and lady visitors, much liberty being allowed them. In the evening we went to the house of Pastor Appia, where a meeting was held to commend to the Lord two of their brethren who were leaving as missionaries, one going to Tahiti and the other to Basutoland.

On reaching Cannes, and hearing that there were a number of Arab prisoners of war upon the Isle of St. Marguerite, which is situated a little distance in the Mediterranean Sea. We thought it our duty to visit them and take them the Scriptures, and started in the little steamer which goes over to the island several times a day. It is noted as containing the prison of the man with the iron mask, and also as being the place where Marshal Bazaine was imprisoned, and from which he eventually escaped. Sad was the story some of these Arab prisoners had to tell. One fine man among them had nine children, and he was longing to get back to his home in Oran, in Algiers, to see them again. They have been there about three years, but no one can tell them when there is any likelihood of their being set free. They are allowed to walk about the island, and are well fed and cared for. Most of them can read French. They eagerly accepted the Word of God, of which we had procured a fresh supply in Paris. They are a fine race of men, some of them being of the tribe of Marabout, the chief of which accompanied us over different parts of the fortress.

The Italian papers are writing about "The Monte Carlo Scandal." The average number of suicides lately has been four a week, and sometimes a murder in addition. A few weeks ago a young fellow, a stranger, who had won very heavily, was followed, and whilst walking in the gardens of the Cassino was killed and robbed of every penny. A petition against legalised gambling at Monte Carlo has been signed by the mayor and chief notabilities of the city of Marseilles, and will be shortly sent up to the Chamber of Deputies; whilst a delegate of the International Committee for suppressing the gambling here, was received in private audience of the Pope a week or so ago. The Pope said, "While deeply deploring the lamentable effects of the gaming tables there, and in presence of so many fatal consequences, he could not do less than express his disapproval of the impunity granted to a system of gambling, which was the cause of so many suicides, of the ruin of so many families, and the loss of so many souls."

Many cases of suicide and robbery are hushed up, besides which there are nightly scenes and disturbances which only those know of who frequent the place. Four years ago I visited Monte Carlo to see it, and, with discretion, was enabled to give some small books away, for which I was warmly thanked.

This evening I again visited the place, leaving on the seats in each room a number of the Gospel of Luke, which were taken up by those who were sitting round the saloons, and apparently read attentively. A dreadful disturbance occurred just as I was leaving, the noise and confusion being such as to cause the gambling to cease for the time, whilst all eyes were attracted to a dark, wild-looking man, and a woman, with whom he appeared to be in angry dispute. The servants of the place were trying to silence the man, who was shouting and raving, whilst nearly a thousand persons were swaying to and fro in the wildest excitement. After some time they managed to get the man out of the place, and the next moment might be heard the roll of the ball, the click of five-franc gold pieces, and the voice of the croupier calling out the winning number. Very few young people are seen gambling, a few here and there in a small way, but the bulk of those who play regularly are middle-aged and old people—a sight truly appalling.

Having given away every portion I had, not forgetting the servants in livery, I came away particularly struck with this one fact, that no one drank anything but water. Cannot England help in the pulling down of this stronghold of sin and Satan?

London Waifs in Canada.

IN a recent letter from Mr. J. Merry, dated Boys' Home, Stratford, Ontario, he says:—

"I am glad to tell you that we are getting on nicely in the new home. We have been making some necessary alterations to provide schoolroom accommodation and extra dormitories for the parties when they arrive in the spring. I have just received a letter from our solicitor in Galt to say that the purchase-money for the Galt home is deposited in his hands, so that we shall be able to settle up for this place and have enough to cover all the expenses.

"The children and workers have had excellent health since we have been here."

CHRISTIAN CIVILISATION.—A meeting was held at the Mansion House on Friday last, to draw special attention to the work of the South American Missionary Society at Terra del Fuego. The Lord Mayor presided, and a number of influential gentlemen were present. It is greatly desired to provide the Mission with a suitable steamer for the purpose of giving succour to the shipwrecked, as well as providing the missionaries with a better vessel on which to prosecute their labours. About £2000 is required for this purpose. Rev. R. J. Simpson, South American Missionary Society, Serjeant's-inn, Fleet-street, E.C., is the secretary.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey.

THE WORK AT NEW CROSS.

MANY and many a time during the past week the Tabernacle in New Cross-road has shown what Mr. Spurgeon, jun., one day called "the grandest sight that mortal man can look upon." We have frequently remarked that no spectacle could well be more impressive or awe-inspiring, than that which presents itself to the eye when the hall is packed from end to end and side to side with serried ranks of immortal beings, listening, as for dear life, to the thrilling notes of the one evangelist, or the impassioned appeals of the other. This feeling is heightened beyond all capacity of expression, when, at the second meeting, there is an unusually ready response to Mr. Moody's call that those who desire to become Christians should rise in their places. Sometimes, as was the case last Sunday afternoon at the women's meeting, the movement is so large and so spontaneous that all counting is baffled. At other times, when more deliberation is shown, the process of counting, amid the deep stillness, awakens a very strange and almost oppressive feeling of solemnity. On Sunday evening, at the men's meeting, this was most marked. At the close of Mr. Moody's powerful address on "Son, remember," 350 men, or thereabout, rose for prayer. It was a memorable close to a day of very manifest blessing. Mr. Moody was constrained to say that the Spirit of God seemed to have been moving on the hearts of the people in a marvellous way.

The inquiry-meeting on Sunday evening was more wonderful still. The room was closely packed with men and youths, and as few workers were present, nearly everyone was either under conviction or ready to step over the line. Mr. Moody spoke to them in a body, and when the time came to ask all to stand who were really decided to trust the Lord and serve Him henceforth, the audience rose almost en masse, and as if a common impulse had moved them. It was a truly wonderful, and, in our experience, well-nigh unique spectacle.

The meeting on Sunday forenoon for "non-churchgoers" was the largest of its kind yet held during the present Mission. So great was the pressure that Mr. Moody requested the choir to vacate their places and go to the tent, in order to make room for those outside clamouring for admission. The same thing was repeated in the evening, when not only the great hall was full, but there were three crowded overflows. We heard from a credible source that four men walked on Sunday all the way from Sevenoaks—a distance of over twenty miles—in order to attend the services.

On Monday week the Bishop of Rochester was present, and seemed deeply interested by what he saw and heard. It would be a good thing if some of the clergy in his diocese would take the advice he recently gave, and see the work for themselves before condemning it. One of the Greenwich clergy preached a sermon against the Mission the other Sunday evening, having never, we believe, up to that time been present at any of the meetings. We understand that many of his district helpers remonstrated, and, as a consequence, the reverend gentleman attended an afternoon meeting last week. Some of the local friends who at first seemed suspicious, are now entering with great heartiness into the work.

Mr. Sankey, we are happy to say, has now almost recovered from his indisposition, and has been delighting the large audiences as before with his Gospel songs. Several new pieces from the Gospel Choir have met with great acceptance, among them, "The Good Shepherd," and "Along the river of time we glide." The latter as sung on Sunday evening, by Mr. Sankey, Misses Beauchamp, and Mr. Soltau, was something to be long remembered.

Mr. Kennedy, of the Children's Special Service Mission, conducted the children's service on Saturday afternoon, and had an audience of about 4500. From 1200 to 1500 young people stayed to the after-meeting, at which Mr. Kennedy gave a second short, but very earnest address. On Saturday evening a meeting for drinking men, conducted by Mr. Robert Simpson, of Glasgow, was held in the tent. Another will be held next Saturday evening. The New Cross Mission closes on Sunday next. After an interval of two days, during which Mr. Moody proceeds to Edinburgh to be at the opening of the New Carrubber's-close Mission Hall, the Evangelists will break ground in the central and densely-peopled district of St. Pancras. They have now been at work in London four months; of a truth, their earnest and disinterested labours have not been in vain.

In the Inquiry-room.

No effort is spared by Mr. Moody to increase the interest and practical utility of the inquiry meetings. Nothing could be less formal than the way in which they are conducted. Everything is made to converge on the one point of leading the inquirers to step "over the line"—to make a definite, deliberate decision. Sometimes Mr. Moody himself will, in a few sentences, supplement his address in the large hall and indicate the line of action the anxious ones ought to pursue. In doing so he will appeal to some of his experienced brethren within the range of his vision. "Mr. ———, am I making this too easy?" Of course there comes a negative response. Then he appeals to one or two others, and when their answers are given, he adds that these three friends belong to different sections of the Church: one, perhaps, is a Wesleyan, another an Episcopalian, the third a Presbyterian. All are agreed, and so in the mouth of three witnesses the thing is established. In this way the sensitive and willing listeners are virtually shut up to the acceptance of the Saviour. The sights that are often seen in the inquiry-room, when the convicted seekers, "not as single spies but in battalions," rise to their feet, and proclaim their determination to be the Lord's, are such as to make the Christian heart swell with joy and gratitude.

MR. SPURGEON, JUN., IN THE WITNESS-BOX.

One evening last week the Evangelist requested Mr. Charles Spurgeon, jun. (who has been a steady attendant and helper at the New Cross meetings), to say something to those gathered in the inquiry-room. Mounting a chair, with Bible in hand, the young pastor said he was not so experienced as some of his brethren, yet a small finger-post might point the way to heaven.

The best way to do that, he continued, is to tell how one has been led into it himself. It was just seventeen years ago that the Lord led me into it. Brought up by the very best of fathers and the godliest of mothers, I knew the letter of the Word, but did not believe it in my heart. It did not seem to have any personal reference to me as a sinner; Christ did not seem to be my Saviour. It was our wont to go down in the summer-time to a country village and for my father to preach there. I used to attend the service, but I was generally very glad when the Doxology was sung that I might get away; I thought I knew all about it. One day, when I had gone to have a ride on a blind pony, I saw an evangelist coming across the field. I knew who he was, and dreaded meeting him alone, for I felt sure he would button-hole me and begin to talk to me about my soul's salvation. However, there was no way of getting out of it; so I had to let the pony go, and listen to him. He got down on his knees beside the hedge and offered a few words of prayer; then he began to tell me the story of the Cross—how Christ came into the world to save sinners, and to save me. It was not the first time I had heard that, you may be sure, though I had not believed it for myself. But now the message seemed to come home to me with power, as the good man pressed it upon me. After he had spoken with me he prayed again, and in his prayer he said, "O, Lord, let Thy young servant see Christ upon the cross as his Saviour! May he just look and live, and Thine shall be the glory!" There and then the thing was done. I looked and lived. I am living to-day, friends, "looking unto Jesus."

After this simple narration, Mr. Spurgeon proceeded briefly to apply the truth, after which Mr. Moody called for decisions; and he did not call in vain.

TESTIMONIES IN THE TENT.

A men's meeting from 9 to 10 was begun in the large tent early last week. Resigning for the time his post at the door of the inquiry-room, Mr. Studd has been in charge of this tent meeting. Many striking testimonies have been volunteered evening by evening, to the power of God's grace in saving the lost and restoring those who had forsaken their first love. The very first to lift his voice in testimony was a mere youth, who not only thanked God for his own salvation, but said God had heard prayer in the salvation of a brother far away from home. He had another brother who was yet unsaved, but he believed God would lead him also into the fold.

Another told of the bitter experiences he had passed through during a period of backsliding, when he had known something of the taste of the swine's food. He had been carefully trained by a pious mother; had been taught, and in due time had become a teacher in the Sunday-school; had joined the church and confessed Christ; had even led others to the Saviour. But, alas! he began to have great ideas of his own goodness, and forgot the Lord that bought him: the house of cards he had been building up fell down one day, and he thought he had committed the unpardonable sin. He tried infidelity, Romanism, and all sorts of false refuges, in order to get peace, but in vain. Many a time he stood on Waterloo-bridge at midnight thinking to throw himself over and thus put an end to his misery; but he was too great a coward, and thus God held him back. Then he went on to tell how one night he was drawn into a Gospel service by the voice of song. The voice that prompted him to go in seemed so real that he replied aloud, "It is no use; you will only become worse than you are now." Nevertheless, he yielded to the heavenly influence, and the words of the preacher that night seemed pointed straight at him. He could not now remember the sermon, but the text would dwell in his heart and his memory as long as he lived. It was Ezek. xxxiii. 11: "As I live, saith the Lord, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live. Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways, for why will ye die?" God gave him grace to turn that night, and for twenty years past had kept him treading the heavenly road.

Another most interesting testimony given the same evening was by a tall handsome young Irishman who, after much sowing of wild oats and much trying to be better, was finally pulled up by hearing Mr. Moody speak at the Dublin meetings of one who was "near the kingdom of heaven, but would not go in." That thought haunted him till next night, when he went to the meeting, and stood up to say "I will!" Then the light broke in upon his soul, and he found peace. He declared from his own experience that if a young convert will but take a decided stand at once, he will have no trouble from his old companions; they will quickly drop off, and leave him to the companionship of the "One who sticketh closer than a brother."

Following up at Stratford.

The series of meetings arranged by Mr. Moody, and superintended by Mr. Henry Thorne, at Stratford, came to an end on Saturday. Since the close of the meetings in West Ham Hall, open-air services have been held each night by Mr. Stevenson and a band of workers from the East-end Training Institute. These have closed shortly before eight, and all present have been invited to adjourn to the Wesleyan Chapel in the Grove, where Mr. Thorne has told "the old, old story" for twelve consecutive nights. On the first Saturday evening Mr. Sankey's choir gave a Gospel Service of Song. The singing was interspersed by incidents concerning the hymns, and brief words of exhortation. On most of the evenings the Gospel Service was followed by meetings for men, in which the time was occupied by testimony and praise.

Mrs. Grattan Guinness gave four afternoon addresses to women. The attendances were most encouraging, and the Word was with power.

The last meeting—a service of praise—was held on the 23rd inst. After the singing of several hymns of thanksgiving and prayer, a number of passages of Scripture were read by Mr. Stevenson and commented upon by Mr. Thorne. All who had found the Saviour since Mr. Moody's mission began, were then asked to rise. A large number of men and women responded, and all joined in singing "Ring the bells of heaven." Those who had risen were then asked to testify as to what the Lord had done for them. The response was a remarkable testimony to the reality of the great work that has been done. The testimonies were brief, but of a deeply interesting character. A youth of 19 thanked God that he had been a Christian for three weeks. Another said he had been a selfish Christian, but the Mission had stirred him up, and then said, "This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him." Another had been drawn to the meetings out of curiosity, and had found the Lord. A man who had lived for sixty-five years without God, had found Jesus three weeks ago. Mr. Moody's sermon on "Excuses" having been referred to by one man as having been the means of his conversion, quite a number rose in succession to tell the same story. The last of these said, "My friends, I'm glad to say I had a bit of that supper." Another had found the blessing through hearing the hymn, "Christ for me!" A master baker, who was detained in his shop, sent a friend to testify for him. "Tell Mr. Thorne," he said, "I found the Lord last Wednesday night." For an hour and a half this meeting went on, and the deepest interest was manifest to the end.

The services, as a whole, have been a great blessing. Many have been won for Christ, young converts have been strengthened, many of the Lord's people have been drawn more closely to Him. The newly-formed Young Men's Christian Association has received a considerable impetus. Mr. Thorne has conducted two Bible classes for young men in connection with the association.

Y.W.C.A.—A list of the secretaries, institutes, meetings, homes, &c., in connection with the work among young women has been published by Messrs. Rose & Harris, Bristol. It is particularly suitable for Y.W.C.A. workers.

LONDON MEDICAL MISSION.—The twelfth report of this excellent Mission in St. Giles' is full of facts of the immense good being wrought by the labours of Dr. Saunders and his fellow co-workers. The spiritual as well as temporal aspect of the work is more cheering. Readers of the report who have health will be thankful, and we hope stirred to sympaathy with this and other medical Missions.

Elias Power In the Prayer Meeting.*

ELIAS had long felt that the prayer-meeting was a weak spot in the church life of Ease-in-Zion. It was his habit to attend regularly, yet he often came away grieved to the heart that a season which might have been invaluable to the vital health of the church, a feeder of its strength and energy, was little better than a lost privilege. The attendance rarely exceeded ten or a dozen persons, and these were generally the same individuals.

But what troubled Elias most was that those who were accustomed to engage in public prayer seemed so little to understand the direct way of access to God. The prayers were so stereotyped, so sermonising, so set and formal, and withal so intolerably long, that to Elias, who believed true prayer to consist in its simplicity, there was little or nothing that heaven could listen to. He was convinced that this form of prayer-meeting must be a pitiable spectacle to the throne of grace. It was not only unprofitable in itself, but it was bad training-ground for the young people who might incline to this kind of service.

There were not many young people in the church of Ease-in-Zion, but if any of them did pray, it was after the fashion of the old ones. They caught their phrases, quoted their passages, strained themselves to occupy as much time, and thus bade fair to perpetuate a stale, dry prayer-meeting in Ease-in-Zion.

On one occasion Elias struck a powerful blow at the formality of this meeting. A young man had availed himself of a long pause in the weekly meeting to engage in prayer, but his petition had so caught the set language of the Church that Elias cried out: "Lord, knock that lad's crutches from under him!"

It was a severe lesson to the young man. His lofty aspirations collapsed as suddenly as a bird tumbles to the earth when shot in the wing. His crutches were knocked from under him, and a poor limp he made of it when they were gone; but it saved him, at the outset, from a snare wherein the devil traps many of the prayers of the Church before they can touch the promises of God. "My lad," said Elias to the youth afterwards, "when thou prayest, thy heavenly Father does not want thee to spend thy time in telling Him that giving don't impoverish Him, or withholding enrich him. He knows all that better than thou canst tell Him. Never thee mind about making up a prayer with bits of sermons and grand speeches. Naught chokes prayer sooner than that. Remember that when the Lord Jesus taught us to call God 'Our Father,' it wasn't for the sake of just giving Him a name, but to make us feel that He has a Father's nature; and if God listens at the throne as our Father, we must pray to Him as his children; then we shall not ask in vain. Do thee go to the throne of grace, my lad, simple and humble as a little child, and then shall thee go as one of the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. Thee shall no more be clavering in the Royal presence with idle words; but the heart of divine love will open to thee like an ocean of glory."

But Elias was not a man to deal with the weak and pass by the strong. It was upon his heart to open his mind on the whole subject in the prayer-meeting itself; and at length he found a fitting opportunity of doing so.

* From Elias Power, of Ease-in-Zion. By John M. Bamford. 2s. 6d. T. Woolmer, Castle-street, E.C. A charming allegory, from a facile and gifted pen. We hope to make a further extract in a succeeding issue.

Street Children at Edinboro' Castle.

AN enthusiastic crowd of 1500 boys and girls were present on the 21st inst. at Dr. Barnardo's supper for street children. They were collected by means of the distribution of tickets by persons well acquainted with the places of resort for boy waifs and strays. It is estimated that there are about 2300 houses, registered and unregistered, as common lodging-houses; these contain a population of near 30,000 persons, the children forming a good proportion of the same.

The mass of children who attended the meeting was a sight not soon to be forgotten. There were only between two or three hundred girls present; the rest were boys ranging from eight to sixteen. Many were without shirts, and had the appearance of direst poverty and neglect. Although the tickets had been carefully distributed to the homeless and destitute, they had in some cases changed hands to less needy ones not of the class invited.

Each boy and girl was supplied with a large bag of bread and butter and cake, with mugs of tea, which they appeared immensely to enjoy. The repast ended, Dr. Barnardo gave an account of two boys he had previously rescued; one was now doing well in Canada and the other in England. These stories prepared the way for announcing to the boys and girls that he was anxious to give shelter to any desiring help to live an honest life, and become useful members of society. He stated distinctly that he never sent boys to Canada unless they wished to go, and invited all who wished to be received into the homes to tell him so as he came round among them. On his calling upon those to stand who got their living in the streets, fully one-third of the audience rose. Very few were found to be living with their fathers, a larger number with their mothers; and alas! not a few lived—"nowhere."

In connection with this meeting an All-night Refuge for destitute children has been opened, and is situated at No. 10, Stepney-causeway. This Refuge will be open all night all the year round, for homeless and destitute waifs and strays, who will be given, under certain restrictions, a shelter for one night, and a meal night and morning. Then their cases will be investigated with a view to their permanent removal from the streets.

In the Girls' Home, at Ilford, there are 100 vacancies, of whom a large number were drawn out for examination at the close of the meeting.

A hymn was sung and a few words said by the doctor and another gentleman present, on the importance of knowing Jesus as a Saviour, but the noise was so great that but little could be heard. The crowd gave vent to their feelings by incessant clapping, &c., showing that they quite understood the kindness that had brought them there. After the distribution of oranges and new sixpences, kindly given by a friend, the motley crowd dispersed.

STOCK EXCHANGE CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—A well-attended meeting of this Association was held on February 21 at the Devonshire House Hotel, Bishopsgate-street. After prayer by Mr. Billett and Mr. Samuel Gurney Sheppard, Mr. John Marnham gave an inaugural address as president for the year. His address was full of Gospel truth, and was listened to with great attention.

Notes and Comments.

IT is stated in The Times that the freedom of the City of London is to be conferred on the Earl of Shaftesbury, as a recognition of his lifelong services as a philanthropist. The City roll contains no name more worthy of its highest honours than that of this truly noble peer, who has always counted it his highest privilege to be in the foremost rank of whatever is most calculated to promote the glory of God, and the good of man.

The sudden death of Mr. J. D. Freeman, of Upper Holloway, while engaged in evangelistic work at Salisbury the other day, has removed from the Church militant a man of special mark in the service of Christ. In the West of England, where he was well known as one of the principals in the firm of Freeman & Sons, granite merchants, employing large numbers of men, his influence was always vigorously exerted on the side of Christ. Among the quarrymen he often engaged in the service of the Master, while few men had so powerful a hold on young men, for whom he always cherished special concern. Deeply spiritual in tone, kind and loving in spirit, full of genuine Christian catholicity, and strong in faith, our brother may be truly said to have "left this testimony behind him, that he pleased God." He could not have been called away under circumstances more fully in accord with the spirit of his life, than while engaged in an inquiry-room, directing souls to Christ.

Rev. A. Mearns divides so-called "Outcast London" into four classes: those who live in single rooms which they furnish for themselves; next, those who live in rooms furnished for them; the third, living in lodging-houses; the last, and worst off of all, those who sleep on the stairs of tenements, as many have to do. Vice necessarily is born and bred in all these conditions, as in the first cases the rooms are generally those at the back, the front ones being let at higher rent, and occupied by those whose immorality furnishes the larger means, so that a premium is put on vice in the eyes of the children and young people who see the facts of the case. In the lodging-houses 30 or 40 men and women herd together, washing, dressing, and mending, all being done in one room, the honest and dishonest being thrown into close connection. Among the last class scenes of immorality and vice too terrible to mention are commonly and unblushingly beheld. These are dark blots which every Christian should vigorously labour to remove from our national escutcheon.

Our readers may have observed, in our report last week of a meeting at the Mansion House, the remark made by Lord Shaftesbury, that "there was no such thing as 'outcast London.' The poor of London had been sought out from one end of the town to the other; there were people doing Christian work who knew every hole and corner, and it was not from ignorance, but from want of support in their efforts, that the metropolis was now in the state of which they heard." This is, perhaps, the most lamentable aspect of the question. Response to such appeals as have been made of late comes from the few rather than the many; moreover, what is needed is not so much money as prayerful, personal, persistent effort. These things must be far more common in the rank and file of the churches before the needs of our city are adequately met.

Professor Candlish, of Glasgow, has begun a course of the Cunningham Lectures in Edinburgh. His subject is "The Kingdom of God, Biblically and Historically considered." No subject is of more importance. We shall read these lectures with the greatest interest.

The Lancet waxes warm at the announcement that the new Surrey County Asylum is to be "worked on Temperance principles." Medicine, it argues, has nothing to do with principles outside its own domain. But surely Dr. Richardson and many other eminent physiologists and physicians have shown that abstinence from alcohol is a principle which medical science includes in its laws for the wise government of the human constitution, so that Temperance principles are fairly within the medical domain. The Lancet may deem it a discredit to the profession to endorse the abstinence programme, and may brand the principles of Temperance as "vagaries," but none the less some of the most learned and trustworthy members of the profession it represents publicly advocate them as essential articles of a sound medical creed.

Mr. Broadhurst, M.P., has given a strong personal testimony in favour of total abstinence, although not himself a teetotaler. At the opening of a workmen's club at New Southgate the other day, he said that when he worked as a journeyman stonemason, he found he could get through a hard day's work far better without alcohol than with it. Since his occupation had been changed, he could honestly say that he believed it would be impossible to get through the usual hard day's work of a Member of Parliament if he were not almost a total abstainer. He also expressed his conviction that drink was the one great obstacle to the advancement of the working classes, who, but for its influence, might soon become masters of the destinies of this great country. Such a testimony ought to have great weight with the class that Mr. Broadhurst specially represents.

The Friend's Review for the current month publishes an appeal written by a Christian Corean on behalf of the spiritual needs of his country. In it he gives glory to God for his own salvation, and states that he is busy translating the Bible into the Corean language, praying day and night for success in his work. The Government is much more favourably disposed than formerly to foreign intercourse, and so is more lenient towards Christianity. Rijutei, who styles himself "a servant of Jesus Christ," thinks the present a golden opportunity for propagating the Gospel in his land.

This zealous convert relates that a Chinese Christian, named Wan Sok Chak, recently presented a copy of the New Testament to the King of Corea, but the Government interfered, and prevented its acceptance. This has given rise to much discussion, the king being greatly displeased, so that the fact will really help the cause of religious liberty, by arousing popular feeling on the subject. Among other reasons alleged why speedy efforts should be put forth for evangelising his country, Rijutei urges that if America (to the churches of which land his appeal is addressed) does not send the Gospel, other nations will hasten to send their emissaries, with teachings not in accordance with the will of the Lord. Surely the Lord's voice is heard through such an appeal.

Will any readers of The Christian kindly inform me if they have ever seen the tincture of "Cinchona rubero" tried in cases of habitual drunkards, if it has been successful, and how it was administered? H. J. M.

"Sir,—If the schoolmasters and classical scholars are to have almost a monopoly of those high places in the Church which originally—that is, in the times of the Apostles—were occupied by working men, who had special power, not of worldly wisdom, but of preaching the Gospel, might it not be just and kind to announce this arrangement? Bishoprics might be attached to the masterships (after a few years' service) of such schools as Winchester, Eton, and Harrow; deaneries and canonries to schools of a lower grade. Young men taking Holy Orders would then distinctly understand that no amount of devotion to their work, no attempts, however successful, to convert unbelievers, to teach the ignorant, to alleviate sorrow, to comfort the sick, to do the work of their Divine Master, would be recognised as a claim to promotion: but that a knowledge of Greek and Latin, with the art of teaching these dead languages to boys (supplemented, if practicable, by some connection, through marriage or otherwise, with persons of supreme authority), would alone justify their hope of honourable recognition. It will prevent disappointment if it is known that the mitre is only for heads which can give felicitous translations of Aristophanes and Juvenal, and that the hand which would hold the pastoral staff must first learn to swish.—I am, Sir, your perturbed admirer, "Justice."

The "Monthly Notes" of the Y.M.C.A. have been incorporated with The Monthly Review and Young Men's Christian Journal. Among other valuable papers is a series on Lay Service, by Mr. J. Van Sommer. In Part III. of these papers the observance of family prayer is treated both as to its direct objects within the home circle, and in its incidental result as a means of training for exterior service. In days of increasing Christian labour by private persons, we think the observations made in order to nurture scriptural study and divine worship at home may be very helpful and seasonable. These papers may be also obtained in a separate form, free of cost, for private use and for circulation, on application by post to J. V. S., Cuffnells, Wimbledon-common, S.W.

The Executive of the Irish Branch of the Evangelical Alliance have, as usual, set apart March 17 as a day of united prayer for Ireland; they have addressed an invitation to Christians in all lands to join in its observance. Mention is made of hopeful and encouraging signs in the present aspect of the country, and a tone of hearty thankfulness pervades the appeal; the remarkable blessing attending the recent visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey specially calls for fervent praise to God. Many obstacles, however, still stand in the way of the full evangelisation of the land. We trust that a widespread and hearty response will be given to the invitation which the Alliance has issued.

The Earl of Shaftesbury has promised to open on Thursday, March 6, the new Lecture Hall and Class-rooms at the back of the Talbot Tabernacle, of which our much esteemed friend and brother Frank H. White is the pastor. Meetings at 3 and 7. Subjects for very brief addresses—Christian Sonship, Saintship, Servantship, Soldiership, Stewardship. We hope our brother will be encouraged by a large attendance of sympathising friends. Tea and coffee will be provided.

In the same hall, Powis Hall, Powis-gardens, Cornwall-road, Westbourne-park, a Foreign Missionary Conference is to be held for three days, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, March 18—20, of which we trust our readers will make a careful note. Particulars of subjects and speakers in our list of forthcoming meetings.

Rev. Joseph Cook resumed his Monday Lectures on Feb. 4 in the Tremont Temple, Boston, U.S., before a great audience. After an eloquent prelude on the life of Wendell Phillips, he briefly answered a number of topical questions, and then gave his lecture, which purported to answer the question: "Do we need a new theology?" We hope to find space for some extracts next week.

It is proposed to found a Luther Memorial Home for the benefit of gentlewomen past the vigour of youth, who have been suddenly reduced from affluence to poverty, by some of the failures, losses, &c., which we all know are but too common. There are many very needy candidates for such relief, and it is a most worthy object to endeavour to provide for their want. Miss Corke, 83, Talbot-road, Bayswater, W., is actively engaged with others in promoting the scheme.

Prince Bismarck has played so prominent a part in European affairs for many years past that the following extract from Dr. Moritz Busch's new book, relative to his religious notions, will be interesting to many readers:—

"In contrast with Goethe, the Chancellor has seldom uttered any confessions of religious faith at variance with other utterances of his on the same subject, and never any thoughts on divine things directly opposed to formerly pronounced views. Nevertheless, he passed through a rationalistic period—then an unbelieving time, a time at least in which religion was no felt want—then a period in which, as he decidedly affirmed, he took up a Christian and confessional standpoint. Lastly, he has arrived at a time in which he may simply be defined as a deeply religious man who believes firmly in God, in a divine dispensation, and in a personal continuance after death, who derives his sense of duty from his faith, but lays little stress on dogma, will hear nothing of intolerance, and has no strong desire for priestly edification."

Mr. Spurgeon remarked on Sunday week that the condition of many ministers in rural districts is getting more and more sad; they become poorer and poorer every year. The Rev. Chas. Hargreaves, of Leeds, writes to The Nonconformist and Independent, alleging that one great cause for this is the denominational rivalry which exists. He is assuredly right in this. Cases are not at all infrequent where in one small village chapels belonging to Baptists, Congregationalists, and various branches of Methodists are standing within a stone's throw of each other. Thus, as Mr. Hargreaves says, the same fields are ploughed over and over again, and evangelisation in such places is quite overdone.

The chief cause for this lamentable state of affairs is that some people think no town or village can be truly blessed unless their own sect is represented, and has a hand in the work. Ministers thus stand in one another's way, some of them being kept at starvation point, and a spirit of rivalry and jealousy created all round. Surely there should be grace enough in the churches of Christ to alter such a state of things, and to remedy so grievous a waste of time, money, talent, and energy. There is better work to be done than the building up of mere denominationalism.

It does not seem to be generally known that under the auspices of the Evangelical Alliance a parents' prayer-meeting is held in Exeter Hall at 11.30 a.m. on the first Tuesday in every month. The object is to unite in earnest supplication for the children of Christian parents. It is proposed also to hold quarterly meetings in Steinway Hall for the same purpose, and on the 7th March at 11.30 a.m. the first meeting will be held, under the presidency of the Rev. Nevile Sherbrooke. All who desire the spiritual welfare of their children are invited to attend.

"A Perplexed Believer" asks whether it is consistent with the position of a Christian minister, pastor of a portion of Christ's flock, for him to be seen drinking gin and water, and smoking at a refreshment bar in the town where he labours? We should have thought that it could scarcely be possible for anyone calling himself a servant of Christ to pursue such a course. No one so acting can be said to obey the injunction, "Be thou an example in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." Alas! that those who ought to be foremost in the way of righteousness are so often found to be stumbling-blocks, and decoys for the enemy's net.

Professor Geymonat, of Florence, has published a pamphlet urging the increased unity of Protestant churches in Italy. He proposes the adoption by them all of a general title, such as "Italian Evangelical Church," and the acceptance of a consensus of six articles of faith, as embracing a true evangelical creed. The spectacle of such a union would indeed be refreshing to look upon, although scarcely likely, we fear, to be realised, simple and practicable as the plan would appear to be to an unprejudiced mind. Happy would it be for the true welfare, both of the Church and the world, if in every land the followers of Christ could be thus enrolled under one banner.

Special Missions to public-houses form an excellent branch of Christian service, and we are glad to observe that they are increasing in the provinces as well as in London. Eighteen missionaries devote themselves solely to this work in the metropolis. One has just been appointed for Bath, where he is being well received by the landlords, a large number of whom have hitherto been without Christian visitation of any kind. Miss Skinner, the authoress of the Friendly Letters, has this new effort under her care, as treasurer of its funds. To try to bring Christian influence to bear upon all who are engaged in the public-houses of our towns and cities is an object calling for warm sympathy and support all over the land.

Rev. Edward White is the Merchants' Lecturer for this month, and has been discoursing on the evidential value of the Jewish festivals. He argues that the fact of three feasts like the Passover, Pentecost, and the Feast of Tabernacles, being from time immemorial observed by the Jews as commemorative of events in their own history, is proof positive that such events occurred. The miracles of the Exodus find full confirmation by this line of argument. The impossibility of inducing a nation to divide their year into three portions and celebrate three festivals like these for ever, simply on the ground of fabrication, is clear to any impartial mind. The investigation of such lines of thought is of great utility in the service of truth.

Apropos of a note in our issue of the 14th instant on religious etiquette, a lady writes:—"I believe an honest-minded worldly man will often be most grateful for a word about his soul from a lady, if that lady carefully asks wisdom from above." Referring to one case among others in her own experience the writer says, "I was earnestly praying for a young doctor who was a thorough worldling as far as I could judge; my soul longed for his soul, and I prayed for direction whether I should dare to send him a suitable little book on the subject. His answer was one which greatly encouraged me." It is this spirit of prayerful looking to the Lord for guidance which makes all work done for Christ acceptable, and which is sure to prepare the way for a successful issue.

The same correspondent refers to Mr. Dowsett's protest, mentioned in a recent number of THE CHRISTIAN, against children being entrusted with collecting-boxes and cards, for religious objects. As manager for many years of a juvenile missionary association, she strongly condemns the practice, except where the full knowledge and consent of the parents are obtained. It is simply putting temptation in children's way. It is likely also to give children a wrong idea as to how means for carrying on the Lord's work should be obtained. Indiscriminate begging for Christian objects is by no means the principle which believers in God's care for his own cause would most desire to inculcate.

We have before referred to the Agra Missionary Training Institution as specially worthy of commendation and support. Rev. C. Valentine, LL.D., who is its principal, forwards to us details of the steps which are being taken to induce the various missionary societies to avail themselves more extensively of its advantages. It is suggested that each Mission now at work in Upper India should select annually a few suitable men and send them, at their own cost, to this institution. The course of study extends over five years, and includes thorough medical and theological training. The local committee is composed of men belonging to all the Protestant churches in Agra, and is said to have the confidence of all the Missions. The value and importance of such work as it aims to accomplish are unquestionable.

A society has been formed in the Scotch capital to be known as the Edinburgh White Cross Union, having for its object the promotion of a higher, manlier, and more Christian standard of public opinion on the subject of Social Purity and the Prevention of the Degradation of Women and Children. The Council comprises a host of well-known names, those of Drs. H. Bonar, N. McLeod, Andrew Thomson, and others, being on the list. The Executive propose to enrol as members all who approve of their object and are willing to join in a vigorous crusade against social evils of every kind. It really will be a vigilance association, having its eye on all matters calling for public concern, and quickening the public conscience on subjects upon which it has too long slumbered. Such action is urgently called for; we trust it will be heartily sustained, and extended throughout the whole land.

LITERATURE FOR SOLDIERS.—Mr. J. Bridges, Army Schoolmaster, 1st Battalion Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, Singapore, will be glad to receive tracts, periodicals, and books for distribution among the men of his regiment. Those sent him have been most thankfully accepted.

MORE RECRUITS FOR CHINA.

A VALEDICTORY AT WESTBOURNE GROVE.

IT has been our good fortune, first and last, to attend many of the meetings that are held for the purpose of saying "God-speed" to brethren and sisters about to depart for the Far East, there to labour in the Gospel, under the banner of the China Inland Mission. These farewells are always very enjoyable and stimulating occasions. Few if any of them have been of profounder or more affecting interest than that held in Westbourne Grove Chapel, last Thursday evening. This outgoing party numbers six—four ladies and two gentlemen; with the exception of Mrs. Cheney, who has been a worker at Clapton, all were present. A lively interest is evidently felt in Missions to China, by the congregation to which Rev. J. Tuckwell ministers; the attendance was good, and a feeling of deep sympathy manifestly pervaded the audience. The pastor himself presided, and in the course of the evening gave utterance to many appreciative and hearty sentiments.

The interest of these meetings mainly centres in the personal testimonies that are given by the departing friends. Before these began, however, Mr. Broomhall, the Secretary, alluded to the last time a similar gathering was held in the chapel; that meeting, we well recollect, was one of special interest also. Mr. Broomhall reminded us that the youthful Mr. McGregor was one of the party then on the eve of going out. Though his missionary career, so full of promise, was soon cut short by death, he left behind him many blessed memories of a bright and beautiful example. Miss Hayward, who then went out from Westbourne-grove Chapel, is now Mrs. Parrott, and Mr. Broomhall asked that prayer should be made to God for her restoration to health. Another member of that little band was Miss Evans, whose Welsh fervour and zeal have been turned to good account in China. Since then, said Mr. Broomhall, between thirty and forty others have left their English homes to reinforce the workers in the field; six more are about to follow their example.

The first to present themselves before the audience were Mr. Windsor, of Winchmore-hill, and Mr. Hughesdon, of Plumstead. These two brothers, in succession, told how they had first been brought to the Saviour for their own salvation, and then had been led to devote themselves to his service in the high places of the field. They are both young and, of course, inexperienced in Christian work; but it was good to hear them tell of their simple and restful confidence in God, and to see that they are filled with a yearning desire to be used in scattering Gospel light among the benighted millions of China.

Then it came to be the ladies' turn to speak. We could scarce repress an inward smile as we heard Mr. Tuckwell bespeak for them a considerate indulgence as they addressed such a large gathering. We could not but remember that at former farewells the ladies, as a rule, had borne away the palm of effective and touching utterance. And so it proved to be this time also. Miss Fowles, who hails from Devonshire, spoke very briefly. Her heart, she said, was too full to allow of the free use of her tongue. Waiving any recital of her personal experience, which might be told another time, she read the passage in Acts xiii. which describes the setting apart of Saul and Barnabas for work in a new field. In choice and measured phrase, she spoke of the need of Holy Ghost power, and of true separation from the world, in order to success in the service of Christ, whether at home or abroad. "I do praise God," she said, "that on the very night he saved me it was my joy to lead one of my schoolfellows to Him. We are to begin at home, but we are not to stop there." In closing her earnest exhortation, she asked, as the brethren had done before her, that they should be remembered before God in prayer, that He in his great love and mercy would bestow on them all the grace and strength and patience needed to carry out his will.

We wish we could afford the space to give without abbreviation the address that followed from Miss Whitchurch, whose country home has been in Wiltshire. Such a touching narrative of Divine guidance, told with such unction and womanly grace, is not often heard on a public platform; small wonder that it deeply moved those who listened. We can only repeat it in the briefest outline:—

It was some time last year that I felt especially doubtful whether I was in my right place—whether the Lord meant me to remain at home with my mother and my three sisters. I felt as though I were not doing as much for my Lord as I might do in another sphere. Yet I was afraid to stir without being sure that the Lord was guiding me. I knew his promise was there to all his children, "I will guide thee with mine eye." So I prayed daily, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Make my way plain before my face." Weeks passed on and I had no sign. In September last a friend in Salisbury wrote and told me that Dr. Barnardo and Mr. Hudson Taylor, among others, were going to speak at the Conference convened there by Mr. Thwaites, and she invited me to be her guest during the conference. I was delighted to accept of the invitation. At one of the meetings I heard from Mr. Taylor, for the first time, of the work of the China Inland Mission. He told, as I had never heard it told before, of the great need of China, how there was but one missionary to a million of the people in that land. He put it very solemnly to each one of us as to whether we could not be easily spared. As I sat and listened a voice seemed to say to me, "Why cannot you go? You can be spared. Your mother has your three sisters with her, and your place can easily be filled up. The thought came with terrible power that it was the Lord calling me. I must own that no one can be more astonished than myself that I am standing here, expecting to go to China. I had been to many missionary meetings and heard about foreign lands, but I never thought of being a missionary myself. I used to think and say, very lightly I fear, that I was too selfish and too timid to be a missionary. I have a great natural dread of the sea; I should never think of going on it for pleasure. You may understand how terrible at first was the thought that God meant me to go to China. But I do thank Him that He enabled me from the first to say, "If Thou art calling me to go, I know Thou wilt give me strength, and I am willing to go." I was enabled also to go home and talk calmly to my mother about it, and she said she did not dare to hinder me—she might be fighting against God. I feel I can go forth joyfully—"anywhere with Jesus." He has been so good and so loving, and has revealed Himself so sweetly to me since I have been willing to go. However, the Lord tested me, and before Christmas it almost seemed as if I could not go after all. I came up to London hoping to be accepted, but the Council did not think I was strong enough, and I went home disappointed. I looked to the Lord to be my healer as well as my guide. He has restored me so that I was able to do more work for Him last January than I had done for some time. He has also given me great joy in working and speaking for Him. Some of my friends think I am going beyond all bounds of propriety in standing up here to-night; but I cannot trouble about that. The Lord has helped me all along, and I cannnot but put my trust in Him. Some of my friends say they do not quite approve of the China Inland Mission, because there is too much faith in it! The idea of anyone trusting our dear heavenly Father too much! It is very wonderful to me how even those who are good Christians seem to think we can trust God too much!

And so for a considerable space this devoted young lady spoke out of the fulness of her heart, quoting passages that had been to her a source of strength, and affectionately exhorting her hearers to give themselves up wholly to the service of the Master she so much delighted to serve.

More striking still, perhaps, was the story narrated by Miss Minchin, who, although well on in middle life, seems as enthusiastic and youthful in spirit as if she were still in her teens. She told how she had been privileged to labour for God and her fellows these many years past; how her coffee-room work at Moreton Hampstead had to be dropped because the brewer who owned the coffee-room caused it to revert to the degradation of a tap-room; how she had been laid aside by severe illness, and given up as a hopeless, incurable invalid by two doctors; how through the prayer of faith she had been marvellously raised up so that she could now hold five services on the Lord's Day, and be quite fresh at the end of them; how she had heard Mr. Hudson Taylor at the same Salisbury Conference as that referred to by Miss Whitchurch; and how she had been led, notwithstanding her mature age, to give herself to work among her sisters in China.

To complete the interest of the evening's proceedings, Mr. Hudson Taylor recounted some of the Lord's wonderful dealings with the Mission, especially during the past few years, in answering their prayers as to the supply of workers and of means to support them. His remarkable recital must have been strengthening to the faith of the friends who are going out, as well as stimulating to all the Christian hearts in the audience. We need hardly bespeak for this band of departing missionaries the hearty and continuous prayers of our readers.

Mr. Catlin In Clerkenwell.

A TEA-MEETING was held on February 20, at Gloucester Hall, Clerkenwell, at which about 200 persons assembled to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wilson, who have held a series of successful services in connection with Mr. Catlin's work in that neighbourhood. Mr. Wilson gave a very practical and helpful address to those who had been led to Christ during the Mission, urging them at all costs to take a firm stand for their Lord and Master. Mrs. Wilson sang several hymns, which appeared to have a good effect upon the audience, many of whom, we are assured, were living a life of semi-starvation.

Miss Watt, who labours among the masses in Bermondsey, spoke well on the need of making "Jesus only" the object of trust both for salvation and preservation. This young lady, who is connected with the Metropolitan Tabernacle, is both simple and earnest in setting forth the Gospel.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wilson's address is 24, Henry-street Buildings, Pentonville, N.

Port Said as a Gospel Centre.

THIS might be a most important missionary centre. From Port Said the great steamship traffic is constantly on the increase, and will be far greater still when the Suez Canal is widened. Port Said is a useful centre for all the ports of the Mediterranean in Europe, Asia, and Africa.

A valuable worker, Mr. P. Whytock, left it some twelve months ago or more, and since then no one has come to replace him. We learn with satisfaction that Mr. Eöll, formerly labouring among the seamen in the port of Bristol, is on his way there with his wife and family. Those who know Port Said and its many temptations, will welcome the day when he arrives. A large hall, in a commanding position, was about to be opened as a billiard-room and tavern, but some friends there have rescued it from the hands of the enemy. It has been secured at a high price it is true, £12 per month, so as to convert it into a Missionary Hall and for a Sailors' Rest, or whatever best it may suit. Help is needed for the rental of £144 per annum, seats and gas, say £60, in all, £200. Wealthy shipowners who see this notice will, we trust, help in the effort to keep their crews from strong drink and other allurements. Subscriptions will be gladly received for this work by the writer,

Messrs. Fullerton & Smith in Leicester.

FOR seven weeks these devoted men have been holding services in this busy and populous town. Though they were comparatively unknown, and commenced their work in a small chapel, they have succeeded in filling night after night some of the largest audience-rooms in the town. They were invited to Leicester by four ministers, and at first the services were confined to the several districts in which their places of worship were situate; thus the work has gradually converged towards the centre of the town, where it will culminate in large united services in the great Skating Rink, specially seated for the purpose.

The evangelists are eminently fitted for their work. Mr. Smith's strong and flexible voice, with his clear enunciation of Gospel melodies, proves very attractive to the masses of the people. His silver cornet is admirably managed, whether he accompanies the trained voices of the choir or leads the hearty singing of the crowded congregation. His share in the services is so different to that taken by his brother evangelist that there can be no comparison between the two, but with his genial manner and bright smile and touching incidents, he contributes appreciably to the success of the services. Mr. Fullerton's addresses have been most telling. Their grand power is in their frequent and apt quotation of Scripture, but they are lit up by fresh illustrations drawn from wide reading and experience, and abound in those appeals to men which compel them to consider their ways.

On successive Sunday afternoons great audiences of men have gathered to hear them in the Rink, standing patiently to listen; and catching up the choruses of the Gospel songs. The effect of these services has been to send a fresh stream of hearers into the evening meetings. Perhaps the most popular of all the services have been the song services given each Saturday evening in the capacious Temperance Hall, which has been crowded by many who might otherwise have been spending their time amid scenes of dissipation and sin. The more cultured of our Christian people have richly enjoyed the consecration services held in the early quiet of the Sabbath morning, and the Bible-readings, which have opened up new constellations in the firmament of Scripture, and have taught the new converts fresh methods of Bible study.

Speaking more especially for Melbourne Hall, I can say that we have never had a Mission so eminently fruitful in spiritual results as this promises to be. Scores who had been listening to the Gospel for years have been led to decision. In some cases whole families have been brought to the Lord. Backsliders have come back, and Christians have been stirred up to speak for Christ. There has also been a great work among the elder lads of the Sunday-school, and among the young men who have had special meetings, in which the new converts have told their experiences in very touching words; in one of these meetings thirteen rose to testify their recent acceptance of Christ.

The evangelists leave us next week for Edinburgh; we affectionately commend them to the Lord's people there, and wherever they may come. F. B. Meyer.

POLICEMEN IN LEEDS.—Sir,—A fact came to my knowledge, when in Leeds a few weeks since, that if made known would, I believe, do much good. I was invited to attend a policeman's prayer-meeting at the Town Hall, and found quite a happy party assembled. I ascertained that some seventy of the police of the town have banded together for Temperance and Christian work, and are encouraged by the magistrates. I also found that in connection with the police is a night shelter for stray young women, which is managed by a Christian policeman and his wife; thus every policeman is, day and night, a missionary to the outcast. I sincerely wish that this beneficent way of tempering mercy with justice was adopted by the magistrates of other large towns. Hundreds of young women might be rescued from a life of sin and misery if stopped in time.

Stock-Exchange Gambling.

THE events of the past three years should read those who "dabble in Stocks" a terrible lesson. The frauds which have come to light in the course of the last few months throw an alarming light on the extent to which the habit of Stock gambling has spread. Men possessed of comfortable incomes and assured positions have yielded to temptation, and have ended by becoming criminals. They thought to make gigantic fortunes at a stroke, and so to escape from the drudgery of work. What they have in fact done is to secure for themselves a prisoner's cell or a pauper's grave.

And who can say what has been the misery of the thousands all over the country who were drawn into the vortex beyond their depth? They were attracted to the Stock by the rapid rise, and the bulk of them have been, if not ruined, crippled for the rest of their lives, and saddled with debts they cannot hope to pay. What has come to light in the case of this slippery Security enables us to judge of what we cannot see, and the enevitable conclusion is that the habit of Stock Exchange speculation has honeycombed large classes of society, doing more mischief to those who are within the range of its influence than all other forms of gambling put together. It is all very well to condemn Monte-Carlo, but more fortunes are lost in Capel-court in a week than are handed over to the croupiers of Prince Charles in a year.—Standard.

Convalescent Training Home for Young Girls, Effington, Bournemouth.

THERE is space in this long and airy house to receive ten more children. Hitherto the number has been limited to seventeen at a time, who have been prepared for domestic servants. A brief sketch of the success of this work is given, in the hope that friends interested in rescuing children from the haunts of poverty and crime may at once send them to a place of security and loving care, with sea air and good food. The plan adopted is that of simple "family life," the youngest taking a share daily in the household duties, cooking, scrubbing, washing, while elementary education is carefully given.

It will be thought incredible that in these days some girls of thirteen and fourteen could neither read, write, nor sew; and some have declared they never heard of the Saviour, and asked, "Who Jesus Christ was they had been reading about?" To such untaught, uncared-for, sickly children, such a life as they then entered upon was a revelation. They have themselves given the place the name of the "Home of Love." Few rules are laid down for guidance, but an excellent matron, who is a skilful nurse and cook, with a lady superintendent, has managed to win them to obedience, a difficult lesson for all. After four years experience and unlooked-for success in a small house, a larger one was secured, that more children might be benefited, and with a hope for greater co-operation in such a labour of love. Children from any part of England are admitted, and references to those who have placed girls in the Home will be given by the matron on application. The charge is 5s. a week, which includes medicine and medical attendance, and, in extreme cases of poverty, clothing. It is desirable they should remain twelve months, as they have much to unlearn and forget of sights and sounds which some of the earlier inmates declare "it makes them shudder to recall."

SOUTH LONDON MISSION.—A week of special services have been recently held at the Victoria Hall, Lancaster-street, Blackfriars-road, in connection with the Mission founded by Mr. W. Carter twenty-two years ago. The work has somewhat declined since that time, but there is now an earnest band of workers engaged in conducting Bible-classes, Temperance, and other meetings among the poor of the district. Free teas were given during the Mission, and the Gospel preached to those who attended. Over 200 persons signed the pledge, and about 120 professed to accept Christ as their Saviour. The secretary is Mr. R. E. Ashton, 122, Loughborough-park, Brixton, S.

Memorial Fund for German Missions.

THREE pioneers of Continental Mission work have within the last two years been called home. Pastor Lehmann, of the Berlin church, entered into rest in January, 1882, and Pastor Oncken in January last. Pastor Köbner, who preached the funeral sermon of the latter, returned to his church in Berlin, and was shortly after called to join his brethren gone before. He was formerly a dramatic writer, but was converted in 1840 through the instrumentality of Pastor Oncken, with whom he thenceforth laboured in Hamburg, Berlin, and other large cities.

There are now sixteen hundred preaching stations on the Continent which owe their existence to the labours of these good men, and it is proposed to raise £1,000, to be called "The Oncken Memorial Fund," for the permanent carrying on of this noble work. Contributions may be sent to the treasurer, Martin H. Wilkin, Esq., Hampstead, N.W., or to the secretary, Rev. F. Horace Newton, 59, Bagby-road, Leeds.

Deacon Abraham at Home.

AN interesting letter from the Deacon, dated Oroomiah, Persia, Jan. 4, has bee received by Miss A. Heath, of the Mildmay Deaconness Institution, giving details of the present state of the Mission. Our brother has now almost completely recovered from the accident which last summer caused a serious fracture in one arm. But for that unfortunate mishap he would probably by this time have paid another visit to Great Britain, to reawaken an interest in the evangelisation of the Nestorian people. He hopes before long to carry out this design.

Speaking of the work under his care, the Deacon says that in addition to the orphanage for boys, he has now to provide for twenty orphan girls, who were formerly in charge of Miss Good. This is a serious increase of responsibility, which he earnestly hopes will be shared by his many friends in this country. He is much encouraged by tokens of a real work of grace among the boys; some of them with good voices are being trained to "sing for Jesus" among their own people.

A postscript to the letter tells of a happy watch-night meeting held among the orphans by Deacon Abraham. Much prayer was offered for a blessing on the various departments of the work, and for his proposed visit to this country.

The New Queen of Madagascar.

A CORRESPONDENT sends from Antananarivo, the capital of Madagascar, to The Nonconformist and Independent, a lengthy account of the coronation, or first public appearance of the new queen. He says:—

Soon after the Queen was seated, those of royal blood, and many of the chief officers, ascended the platform, to which also all the European and American residents were invited. The canopy over the Queen was the same as that used on the occasion of the coronation of her predecessor. On its four sides were written in golden letters, "Glory to God in the Highest," "Peace on earth, "Goodwill toward men," "God be with us." On a table by her right was a large and handsome Bible. In her speech the Queen quoted two passages of Scripture, "Righteousness exalteth a nation," and "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." She also reminded her people of the treaties concluded with foreign Powers, and urged them to the strict observance of them. The Prime Minister gave a stirring speech, part of which related to the present difficulty with France. He stated, in the most emphatic manner, that they would give no territory to the French, not even the "size of a grain of rice." The ceremony being concluded, Her Majesty returned to the palace, and the immense gathering of people dispersed to their various homes. The day will ever be remembered in the annals of Malagasy history.

THE MALE CHOIR.

THIS is the latest innovation in modern methods of bringing the Gospel home to the ears and hearts of the people through the medium of song. For it, as for the "Sacred Solo," we have to thank our wide-awake American friends. It has now become acclimatised in Glasgow, in connection with the singing section of "The Mizpah Band." There it has abundantly justified itself. Our venerable, yet youthful friend, Mr. Robert Simpson, of that city (who may be termed the foster parent of the Mizpah Band), tells us that the good results that have sprung from its formation are incalculable. Not only to the lowest parts of Glasgow itself, but to the towns, villages, and country places round about, these singing brethren willingly go, and sound forth from warm hearts and well-trained lips the message of salvation. They accomplish a double purpose: the people are attracted by the novelty of the method to hear the Gospel; when they come the truth is presented to them in this fresh and pleasing channel, with the happiest effects, as we are assured.

Since Mr. McGranahan came to London a few weeks since, the Male Choir has taken root among us; it bids fair, we trust, at least to emulate if not to outstrip, its northern predecessor. In giving to our male musical readers (on the last page of this issue) a specimen piece from Mr. McGranahan's newly-published "Gospel Male Chorus Book," we thought it would be interesting, at the same time, to furnish some brief account of the origin and growth of the Male Choir. With a view to this, one of our staff sought occasion to interrogate Mr. McGranahan on the subject. Our singing brother is an excessively modest man, but we were happily able to extract from him some most interesting particulars.

"How long have you been making use of a male choir in your meetings, and how did it all come about?"

"As I look back," said Mr. McGranahan, 'it seems the result of a mere accident. Some six years ago, in conjunction with Major Whittle (with whom my wife and myself have been associated in Gospel work since the decease of our dear friend P. P. Bliss), we were having a series of meetings at Worcester, Mass., U.S. They were held in Mechanics' Hall—a fine commodious place, with a seating capacity for 2000 people, besides a terraced platform for over 300 singers. At our first meeting the choir was full, but in consequence of a draught that swept the rear part of the platform, many were obliged to abandon their places. After a fruitless attempt to prevent the draught, a few of the ladies and most of the men, with extra wraps for the emergency, determined to "hold the fort." Finding ourselves with a great preponderance of bass and tenor voices, the thought occurred, "Why not make the most of the situation, and utilise the forces to the best advantage by forming the men into a male choir, with its first and second tenor, first and second bass?" We had no thought of doing away with the mixed choir, but simply desired to supplement it by this auxiliary agency, which could sing one or two special pieces at each meeting—exactly as solos would be sung.

"This we did, and with such gratifying results that the Male Choir soon came to be regarded as an important factor in carrying on the work. Recognising the fact that God had owned and blest their singing, the Worcester choir became a permanent organisation for the purpose of aiding in united meetings, or, as was sometimes the case, going out to neighbouring towns and holding meetings themselves. The last time I heard from them (about two years ago) they were still enthusiastically engaged in singing for the Master. Since then in all the places where we have laboured, in our own country, in Scotland, in the north of Ireland (three years ago), and on the Pacific Coast, we have rarely been without this auxiliary. In America there are many places which, like Worcester, have an organised male choir connected with Mission work, Church work, and Young Men's Christian Associations, and the number of them is steadily increasing.

"Why has this power not been utilised before?"

"I think it is mainly owing to the want of appropriate music. The music, of course, must be specially arranged for male voices in order to be effective."

"How did you manage in respect to that with your first choir?"

"After a fruitless search in the music shops, I arranged some of the most interesting hymns I could gather, as a nucleus; then, alive to this special need, I secured what assistance I could from those who could compose music suited for men's voices. Thus the number of pieces has been increasing, until now, I am thankful to say, we have quite a fair supply."

"Do you find that our English people readily take hold of it?"

"In the few weeks we have been here I have been greatly encouraged at finding such a hearty response. Our male choir at Clapham and Wandsworth has rendered good service in the meetings."

The writer can say from personal experience that the same remark applies to the Stratford band; high hopes are cherished as to its future usefulness. It may not be amiss to add, in a closing sentence, that if these male choirs are to gain the ear of the people, and through the ear to reach the heart, those gentlemen who join them must not only possess a willing mind, but a reasonable store of musical capacity and skill. Furthermore, there must be adequate preparation, and a clear enunciation of the words; in a word, the song must be "with the heart and with the understanding also." On the other hand—though we trust it is scarcely needful to say this—any attempt at musical display would be fatal. The moment that the singing of any choir degenerates into an entertainment or performance, that moment its doom is written as a Gospel agency on which the Lord of the harvest is likely to smile.

Mr. Henry Varley at Sidmouth.

THIS honoured servant of God visited Sidmouth by invitation from Feb. 15 to 22; and the one regret is that, owing to press of work, his visit could not be indefinitely prolonged. From the very outset the assembly room was well filled; but after the first two days a building of double the capacity would scarcely have been too large for the multitudes who came, and who literally hung upon the plain, earnest, and heart-searching words of the preacher. Truly Christ was lifted up in all his fulness; and not one of those who thronged the building could say that the way of salvation was not made plain. Mr. Varley is terribly in earnest, and few could fail to see that his one desire is to make each one of his hearers feel "I have a message from God unto thee."

The large proportion of men who were present at these services was one of the most striking features of the Mission, and on two evenings the room was densely crowded, by men only. On one of these occasions Mr. Varley delivered his "Lecture to Men," which has already been so blessed elsewhere. Bible-readings were given on five afternoons, and many can testify to the wonderful interest awakened thereby in the study of God's Word. Rich results are earnestly looked for from this Mission; and short though his visit was, Mr. Varley had the joy of seeing numbers respond to the invitation to boldly confess Christ. Will your readers remember Sidmouth in their prayers, and so strengthen the hands of those who seek to extend the Gospel of Christ? M.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE IN SOUTH ESSEX.—There is great need in Southend, Essex, with a population of 5000, for a hall in which Gospel and Temperance work may be carried on. An excellent freehold site has been secured and conveyed to trustees. Funds are needed, and will be gratefully received by Bishop Gregg, D.D., Southend, Essex.

Richard Weaver in East London.

AS notified in our last, Mr. Weaver had a large audience at the People's Mission Church, Edinbro' Castle, on Sunday night, the 17th inst. He has preached every night since to equally interesting audiences. The meetings last week were attended by at least 2000 persons every night, the majority being men from the district in which the Mission Church is situated. The inquiry-rooms have been filled with men anxious to break away from the terrible bondage of sin, and many have gone home professing conversion.

Persons who were converted fifteen and twenty years ago, under Mr. Weaver's preaching, have come forward to cheer the heart of the evangelist in his good work. Mr. Weaver has spoken with his old fire, and has put Christ in the forefront, warning sinners against trusting in anything or anybody but Jesus for salvation.

Sunday last was a day never to be forgotten by scores who attended to hear Mr. Weaver preach the Gospel at the Mission Church. In the evening many were unable to gain admission. Mr. Weaver, though far from well, was marvellously helped to preach a stirring discourse from John iii. 16. At the close the vestries were crowded with anxious souls, many of whom went away rejoicing in Christ. We are told by one who knows the neighbourhood that not a few working men, who a few days since were among the most ungodly, are now seen at the meetings night after night with bright and happy faces.

Whitecross-street Christian Mission.

AN interesting meeting was lately held in connection with this Mission. Mr. M. H. Hodder presided, and the meeting was addressed by Messrs. Patey, Whitfield, Curtis, and Dr. Lathbury.

Miss HASTINGS, Hon. Superintendent, gave a description of the work carried on during the last few years. One of its most important features is the Medical Mission, which is held two afternoons weekly. Last year over 9000 patients attended, and the numbers are increasing. Advice and medicine are given free. Dr. Lathbury is always at his post, and his labours have been much blessed. In bad cases he visits the poor people in their homes. The neighbourhood is a very poor and degraded one, and cases of great poverty, and even starvation, are frequently met with. The doors are closed half an hour before the doctor's arrival, and a simple Gospel address is given by some Christian worker. By this means many are reached who never attend any church or chapel. God has blessed this branch of the work very greatly.

Mrs. COATES, the resident Superintendent, gave some most interesting cases of poor people who have been brought to Christ through these Gospel addresses. There is a British Workman connected with the Mission, which is not only self-supporting, but contributes to the funds of the Mission. Mr. and Mrs. Coates have been encouraged by seeing the fruit of their labours in the changed behaviour of men who take their meals there. Not a few have been converted to God. Other agencies are at work for helping the poor. There is a day nursery, a mothers' meeting, evangelistic services, children's meetings, and night classes.

It is a pity that this excellent work is not better known. Funds are greatly needed for the Medical Mission and other branches.

WORKERS NEEDED.—A good opportunity offered to Christian friends to assist in forming a Sunday-school in St. Giles'. It is begun, but will have to be closed if help does not come. Rev. S. A. Griffiths, Christ Church, Endell-street, W.C.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for the ensuing week:—Mar. 2, John vi. 15—27; Mar. 3, John vi. 28—40; Mar. 4, John vi. 41—58; Mar. 5, John vi. 59—71; Mar. 6, John vii. 1—13; Mar. 7, John vii. 14—27; Mar. 8, John vii 28—39.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

A PROJECT is on foot for the offering of a prize or prizes for a cheap and palatable non-intoxicating beverage, under the auspices of an influential committee. It is hoped that funds will be provided sufficient to offer two handsome prizes, of £700 and £300 respectively.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY has been conducting Gospel Temperance meetings in Boston, U.S.

MR. W. FORBES has held large meetings in the Concert Hall, Maidstone. He goes to Yorkshire this week.

IN the Hygienic Society of Geneva, it has been proposed that the free sale of alcohol should be prohibited in the same way as that of every other poison.

CENTRAL HALL, SHOREDITCH. — The annual meeting of the Central Temperance Association was held last week, Mr. A. M. Sullivan presiding. It was stated that during the past year 469 Band of Hope and other meetings had been held, and 2000 pledges taken.

IN the Chamber of Deputies, Saxony, a discussion recently took place on the abuse of strong drink, when it was maintained that the over-full condition of the prisons and lunatic asylums was mainly the result of drunkenness. Some were in favour of treating drunkenness as a disease; others as a crime, considered greater severity of punishment the remedy.

THE CITY OF LONDON TOTAL ABSTAINERS UNION held a meeting at Messrs. Hitchcock & Williams, 72, St. Paul's Churchyard, at which Mr. Caine, M.P., spoke of the advantages of business men, as well as others, abstaining from intoxicating drinks. There was a good attendance of employés and considerable interest shown in the proceedings. Sunday meetings are being held at various houses of business.

AUCHTERARDER.—A series of meetings was held here from Feb. 3—8. They were conducted by Ex-Bailie Ross, of the Highland Temperance League. The audiences were large; a deep impression was made, and much good done amongst those who had been victims of strong drink. Prayer-meetings were held daily. Last Spring the Gospel Temperance Union was formed in connection with the British Women's Temperance Association. The Union, including the Women's Branch, now numbers about 500 members.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—A seven days' Mission has recently been held in the Central Hall, by Mrs. Bradley. The meetings throughout were well attended, the audiences much appreciating Mrs. Bradley's earnest and useful addresses on "Doctor's Orders," "The Women's Crusade," "How the Money goes," &c. The history of the blue ribbon movement, and the service of women in the sphere of Temperance work, were successively dwelt upon, and a society was formed, to be called "The Women's Auxiliary of the Blue Ribbon Army," with Mrs. Freeman as president. Between forty and fifty new pledges were taken during the Mission.

LICENSING REFORM.—Last week a deputation from Liverpool had a private interview with the Home Secretary, at the House of Commons, and presented an influentially signed memorial, urging the early introduction of a measure of licensing reform. The memorialists propose that the granting and entire control of licences should be put into the hands of the people, through boards elected by the ratepayers; and they consider that the transfer and the control of licences from magistrates to town councils and county boards would not meet the necessities of the case. The Home Secretary received the representations of the deputation favourably, and promised to give them due consideration.

PROHIBITION has been in operation in Kansas for twenty months. The Kansas City Journal gives an abstract of full reports received from sixty-six out of the eighty-one counties in the state, from letters received from the county attorneys, county superintendents, and police judges. In these counties the number of saloons has been reduced from 708 to 313, of which more than half are in Leavenworth. In forty-one counties there is not one saloon. In the district courts there have been 351 convictions. In justice courts there were 378 convictions. The fines have amounted to 95,000 dollars; and eighty-one saloon keepers have been imprisoned. In fifty-one counties prohibition is reported as growing in favour, in seven as growing weaker, and in eight as at a standstill. The progress of prohibition is the phenomenon of our age.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES,

CHICHESTER.—Mr. Israel Sida has been holding successful meetings at this place under the auspices of the rector; he is now at Littlehampton.

HARROW-ROAD, W.—Mr. T. Rawlinson has been holding a seven days' Mission at College-park Methodist Chapel. Some remarkable cases of conversion took place. Mr. Rawlinson went thence to Kilburn.

ALDERSHOT.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wiggan, with others, have held a fourteen days' series of successful services amongst the soldiers and civilians of Aldershot. A local paper says: "These evangelists are well known in Aldershot, as they have conducted several series of interesting Missions here before, but perhaps their work never stood better with the people than it does now."

BLANDFORD, DORSET.—Mr. Oscar Owers held special services in the Corn Exchange from February 3—17. Many who attended have testified to the help and profit gained, some, it is believed, were converted. Thrice a week afternoon "Bible talks" were held. These were instructive and edifying to the Christians of all denominations, who attended in sufficient numbers to fill the lecture-room at the coffee house.

ABERGAVENNY.—A grand revival of God's work is taking place in this town. A good many souls have made a confession of Christ. God's believing people are deepening in spiritual things, and are banding themselves together to reach those who never go anywhere where God's love is expounded. In our visitations we stand greatly in need of tracts, far more than our limited income will allow. W. H. LLEWELLYN.

Box Cottage, Chapel-road, Abergavenny.

PRESTON.—In this large manufacturing town of nearly 100,000 people, a general Church Mission has been held, which terminated last week. Six of the churches have been provided with missioners by the Church Parochial Mission Society. In Emmanuel Church, where the population is entirely of the poorer classes, the church, holding 1200, was full every night but one, and generally crowded; 306 remained after the Wednesday evening service for the communion at St. James's. More than 400 came into the chancel as anxious inquirers, besides large numbers who were spoken with in the body of the church.

WEST-END YOUNG WOMEN.—A six days' Mission has been conducted by Mr. W. Spencer Walton, at the Central Institute, 17, Old Cavendish-street. The Lord has crowned the meetings with his blessing. The Lord has given marked and decided blessing, both at the afternoon and evening meetings. Many girls were completely broken down at the after-meetings, and a great many decided for the Lord, and went home rejoicing. It has been a time never to be forgotten, and the workers are thankful to God for sending Mr. Spencer Walton to labour at the Institute. Earnest prayer is asked that the efforts of the Young Women's Christian Association may be the means of bringing souls to Jesus.

GLASGOW.—At the Glasgow noon meeting on Monday week, Mr. Oatts said that the week of meetings held from Feb. 9 to 16, on behalf of the young women of the city, had been a great blessing to many who had attended the meetings. He regretted that the membership of the Y.W.C.A. was so small as compared with the Y.M.C.A. There was room for many more workers. A worker in the east-end of the city said that a good work was being done there. After the new year they gathered fifty men and women who had been hard drinkers and made them a subject of special prayer, and they had also arranged that a Christian worker should visit each one in their homes. The result had been very gratifying, as a number of them had received a blessing.

EVANGELISTIC MISSION.—On the occasion of Bignold Hall (Forest Gate) Anniversary, on the 20th inst., the afternoon and evening meetings were well atteneed. Pastor Charles Spurgeon expounded Ps. ciii., and preached from John xv. 11. In the evening, Mr. C. R. Hurditch said they "thanked God and took courage," in a review of past work in the district. Mr. Abraham Wallis referred with gratitude to progress in the work, as evidenced by the present full meetings at the Hall. Ground for needful enlargement had been secured, and funds were required to build thereon. Mr. F. C. Spurr said one hundred believers were now in church fellowship. Entire families had been brought to God. Successful efforts had been made to reclaim drunkards, 57 persons having one Sunday evening been induced to leave neighbouring public-houses to hear the word of God. Dr. Laseron, Dr. McKilliam, and others spoke.

EDINBURGH.—A week of special evangelistic services was brought to a close on the 17th inst., in St. Thomas' Chapel, Canongate. The Mission preacher, Rev. J. E. Linnett, vicar of Pavenham Park, Bedford, conducted these services with great energy and power, and laid hold upon the consciences of the people mightily. Every evening, a band of workers from St. Thomas' Church and Carrubbers' Close Mission, gathered round a lamp-post opposite the entrance where the Chapel is situated, and sang a hymn; a crowd quickly rushed together to listen, and were invited within the open doors. A certain number responded, and interesting cases occurred of careless passers-by being arrested, and subsequently found in the inquiry-room. The interest was sustained and increased throughout the week. The after-meetings were very solemn. A practical outcome in the life of the people is confidently expected.

St. Brides' Youths' Institute.

THE second annual meeting of the friends and supporters of this branch of the Working Lads' Institutes was held in the Lecture-hall, Shoe-lane, E.C., on January 19. Mr. Alderman SAVORY presided. The report, read by the honorary secretary, Mr. C. M. Chapman, stated that since the opening, two years ago, 859 lads had passed through the institute. During last year 390 attended, and at present there were 178 paying members, the average attendance during the day being from 30 to 40, and in the evening from 60 to 70. The Institute had been the means of drawing many lads from the streets, improving and forming their characters, and imparting spiritual good. Evening classes are held for reading, writing, arithmetic, grammar, shorthand, singing, drawing, &c. The fees from the lads amounted to £110, but the accounts showed a deficiency of £184, of which, however, £20 only arose last year, the greater part having been incurred in the furnishing of the institute. An appeal was made especially to men of business to contribute to the removal of the deficiency and the general support of the Institute.

The CHAIRMAN expressed the pleasure it gave him to be present. The necessity of such an institution was demonstrated by experience. He was glad to find that this particular institution was approaching the position of being self-supporting, and gave the lads as a motto the words of the Apostle Paul, "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit; serving the Lord;" he urged the importance of beginning life well, and beginning every day well. Mr. Arrowsmith preached the Gospel to the lads, and Mr. Judd, Mr. Henry Hill, jun., and others also advocated the claims of the work and hoped for practical and permanent assistance.

Workers at the Home of Industry.

THE friends and workers among Home and Foreign Missions spent another profitable evening last week in Miss Macpherson's "upper room." Mr. H. A. Maude presided. After having their hearts opened for prayer and stirred to cry to God on behalf of the millions of India who have never yet heard of the Lord Jesus, they heard the record of twenty-three years of labour from the Lord's servant, Rev. Colin S. Valentine, of the Agra Medical Missionary Training Institution for Native Christian Missionaries.

Cases of the need of prayer were told to us by Miss Lowe, whose deep devotion to India's millions is beyond all praise.

The closing half hour was occupied by Mr. George Soltau in a solemn and practical exposition of 2 Kings ii. Sixty children were examined in Scripture; they will sail (boys only) in April. Two hundred woollen shirts are still required for the outfits, and many other things needed. Mr. and Mrs. Mercy report from Canada that all the family are well.

MR. S. G. PROUT leaves England this day (Thursday) for Egypt, for ambulance and Mission work; he asks prayer on his behalf. Letters sent to him, care of Mr. R. Gillespie, 11, Leyland-road, Lee, S.E., will be forwarded.

ORPHAN HOMES OF SCOTLAND.

AT present we have 540 children under our care gathered from all parts of the country, and each with his or her own sad history of suffering and want. Notwithstanding our efforts to keep pace with the demand we are now really straitened for room, and the need is only too apparent from the numbers who apply for admission every day. In January alone we added 47 new members to our large family, and still many are seeking our help, not only in Glasgow but throughout the country. Within the past few days we have taken in, among others, the following: A brother and sister of nine and six from the West Coast. The father went to sea 18 months ago, and has not been heard of since; the mother died a day or two ago, leaving the children without a friend to care for them. A girl of seven, whose father was lost at sea. The mother died previously, and the grandmother, who was trying to keep her, was paralysed. A young woman, found sleeping out, and with such scanty clothing that the neighbour who brought her had to lend her a shawl to come with. A boy of ten, whose mother, a poor widow, is lying very ill in a miserable hovel, and is to go into the town's hospital, being too far gone for the infirmary. With such as these coming before us we cannot refuse to help as long as we have a bed to spare; but as we are almost full now something must be done to provide more accommodation.

We have received notice to quit the homes on the Govan-road at May term, and we are looking to the Lord for £12,000 to replace these with new cottages and to provide extra school accommodation at Bridge of Weir, that we may be able to cope with the suffering on every hand. The future promises to be more full of work than ever, and we are hoping, if the Lord spare us for other 20 years, to rescue and permanently help 10,000 more children. If we are to accomplish this we shall require more houses to enable us to deal with a larger number of children year by year than we have hitherto done. We believe there are many Christian friends throughout the country who, if they knew from personal contact the need that exists for rescuing the poor children, would give the £12,000 for the work which the Lord has laid upon our hearts to carry out.

Of the fifteen houses of the group already built, Glasgow has only given five; the other ten are gifts of friends in the East, West, North, and South of Scotland. There is room and need for Glasgow to build four or five houses more for the reception of her own destitute little ones, and we trust she will speedily do so. Edinburgh and Dundee should also share the privilege, as we have children under our care from both of these places, and as yet they have not given a house. Some of their wealthy citizens might give the £1500 necessary for one of the cottages of the group, which would be a house of blessing to many a homeless orphan. As we have already said, the children gathered in are from different parts of the country, and the money for maintenance also comes from all quarters, so that the homes are essentially national in their character, and claim the sympathy and help of all who are interested in the welfare of their own land.

We purpose sending 200 children to Canada this year, and as it takes £10 for each child's passage and outfit, we will require £2000 for this piece of work alone. The first party, consisting of over 100 boys, will probably sail about the end of March; and the second, of about the same number of girls, in May. £560 are already in hand, leaving £1440 to be provided before the children can sail. £10 will pay for one, £50 for five, and £100 for ten. The sending of these will relieve the pressure and give us more room, but it will only be for a short time; as the applications are so numerous the vacant places will soon be filled with newcomers. We shall require at least £12,000 for the extra house and school accommodation we are in want of at Bridge-of-Weir. £1500 will build one cottage.

Are there not some wealthy stewards of the Lord who could give this to Him for his little ones and be none the poorer? Might we not say they would be the richer, for "He that hath pity on the poor lendeth to the Lord, and that which he hath given will He pay him again." At present it takes £30 a day or £900 a month for the maintenance of the work, but as it increases we shall need much more.

We know of no better way of preventing pauperism and crime than by lifting the children from their moral degradation and placing them in a healthier and happier sphere than it has been their lot to be born into. If the havoc which strong drink, pauperism, and crime are making in our land is to be materially lessened, there must be more self-sacrificing efforts put forth by God's children for the rescuing of the innocent victims whose cry is going up to the ears of the Lord of the harvest.

CONTINENTAL AND FOREIGN NOTES.

ITALY.

THE Italian religious papers are deepening in interest, and this month's exceed any yet seen, in a prevailing spirit of love and longings for union.

GERMANY.

With the New Year a great change began in Germany as regards the colportage or hawking of books. The sale of all immoral novels, writings, or pictures is forbidden.

We are glad to see from a report in a German paper that Dr. Ziemann is again at work in that land. Great crowds flock to hear him preach the Gospel, and the Word is with evident power.

ONTARIO, CANADA.

Hon. G. W. Ross, who has recently been appointed Minister of Education, has notified the Legislative Committee of the Teachers' Association of Ontario that it is his intention to take immediate action to introduce Bible reading in schools. It is proposed to select passages from the Scriptures, one for each day in the year, and a circular containing these will be sent to each teacher in the Province.

EVANGELISATION IN FRANCE.

A report by M. Bertin, Pastor at Lisieux, Calvados, gives some interesting information on the evangelisation of the working-class in this town, which contains many factories. Thanks to the generosity of an English friend, an old factory has been hired, and is used as a place of meeting, where, for four months, every evening, more than 400 persons have come to hear the preaching of the Gospel. As the audience often changes, some thousands have heard of Jesus Christ, and many conversions have taken place. The work has not been without persecution; noise, howlings, threats, &c., but the superior authority has intervened, causing liberty of conscience to be respected, and the work continues, to the praise and glory of God.

SOUTH FRANCE.

A remarkable awakening has recently taken place at Cadogan-Beauvoisin, in the South of France. It commenced with the Week of Prayer. There was an intense desire on the part of a few to continue the meetings already begun, the result being that the Free Church could not contain the hundreds who assembled to hear the Word of God. The people could hardly be persuaded to leave. Every day there were conversions. The last meeting was attended by 1000 persons. On that evening only fifteen persons were found in the public-houses. Another result of the awakening has been that Christians have been drawn closer together, and the National and Free Church ministers have exchanged pulpits.

Young Men's Christian Association.

LEWES.

THE Mayor of this ancient town, Mr. Caleb R. Kemp, invited the members of the Y.M.C.A., with their friends, to a social gathering in the County Hall, on Wednesday, 14th inst., when addresses were delivered by Mr. Hind Smith and others to a most enthusiastic audience.

ALDERSGATE STREET, E.C.

In view of the number of young men engaged in business in this great city, it is arranged to hold a Gospel meeting every Friday, at 8 p.m., commencing March 7. It is desired to make the meetings additionally attractive by sacred songs and solos; Christian friends are invited to render help in this department of service, also by inviting their friends and companions to attend, and by earnest prayer for God's blessing.

BRIGHTON.

At a meeting held in the Assembly-room of the newly purchased premises, 55, Old Steine, on Wednesday, the 13th inst., plans for adapting the building for the Y.M.C.A. were submitted and approved. The private appeal for funds has resulted in contributions of nearly £4000 towards the £6000 required. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Marriage Wallis, and addresses were delivered by Messrs. D. Hack, R. A. Bevan, Hind Smith, and others. The Earl of Shaftesbury has consented to open the institution on Friday, April 2.

BOURNEMOUTH.

A second meeting for the furtherance of the work of the Y.M.C.A. was held in the Town Hall, on Friday, 15th inst., presided over by the Earl Cairns. The large hall was well filled with distinguished representatives of the institution, and visitors. After an introductory speech by the noble Chairman, an address was delivered by Mr. Hind Smith on "The Purpose and Work of the Y.M.C.A." He was followed by Mr. Mark Knowles on "Improving opportunities." We are glad to report that there is every probability of a call being given to a general secretary, and of steps being taken towards acquiring new and larger premises.

NEW YORK Y.M.C.A.

The Y.M.C.A. of this city lately held its thirty-first anniversary in Association Hall. The report of Mr. R. R. McBurney, secretary, was an encouraging exhibit of the various agencies connected with the Association for its legitimate work of developing and improving the physical, social, material, and spiritual condition of the young men of the city, especially of those who come here as strangers to find or make home and business for themselves. The total membership is 3,356. Its helpful aid is evident from the fact that 58 per cent. of the employers who applied for help were provided, and 38 per cent. of the young men who sought situations obtained them.

The addresses of the evening were made by Chief-Justice Noah Davis of the Supreme Court, and Rev. Dr. John Hall. Judge Davis spoke earnestly of the terrible exposures to young men from the dens of vice and iniquity that beset the city; he vigorously assailed the evil of intemperance and the strength and power of the liquor dealers. Dr. Hall confirmed his severe arraignment, and encouraged his hearers in their efforts to save the young men. He believed that the Association deserves sympathy because it is for the benefit of the young men, because of its social elements, and because of the instrument it mainly wields, for it is the Young Men's Christian Association.

POOR CHILDREN'S DINNERS.—The report of the Board School Children's Free Dinner Fund is a deeply interesting account of the way in which a few ladies and gentlemen have been enabled to give some of the destitute children of the metropolis dinners two or three times a week. Help for this work may be sent to Mr. H. E. Allen, 44, Marlborough-hill, N.W.

Letters to the Editor.

A QUESTION.

ARE the sins of believers to be remembered by them through eternity, to keep them humble and grateful? Or are sins, when confessed and forgiven, not only blotted out by the Blood, but annulled as though they had never been committed?

MISSION TO SOLDIERS.

DEAR SIR,—We are in very great need of Gospel books and tracts for distribution among the soldiers in London. Through the goodness of God in prospering my business and the liberality of Christian friends I have been enabled to engage the services of Sergeant Pullinger (late Grenadier Guards) as missionary. He has been a Christian over twenty years, and has been much used of the Lord.—Yours faithfully, ROBERT J. MASTERS.

CHRISTIAN EMPLOYERS AND VACANCIES.

DEAR SIR,—As a constant reader of your valuable paper, I have, from time to time, noticed brethren taking an interest in the above subject. I therefore should esteem it a favour if any of the Lord's children know of any vacancies for earnest Christian men, as clerks, correspondents, managers, &c. (about the age of 30), if they would kindly send me word at any time; I would undertake to forward details and addresses for their consideration. In my humble judgment this matter is much lost sight of, and young men who trust in Jesus are often entirely overlooked.

Y.M.C.A., Bristol. J. A. S.

KEEP CLOSE TO SCRIPTURE.

DEAR SIR,—In a recent number of THE CHRISTIAN I was asked to reconsider my remarks in your paper of Jan 10. This I have done. Other communications have introduced co-ordinate topics; but I restrict these further remarks to the three subjects referred to in my previous letter, except an incidental one as to the inclusion of judgment in the preaching of the Gospel.

(1) It had been asserted "the martyred dead and all departed saints will have part in the first resurrection; but the rest of the dead, who are they? The lost ones; the wicked dead."

Such assertion is of vaster importance than might at first sight appear; and I called attention to Rev. xx. 12, showing therefrom that after the first resurrection another Book was opened, which is of Life. And if any was not found written in the Book of Life, he was cast into the lake of fire.

It is replied, "The Book of Life is opened, indeed; but what proof is there that one single name of that multitude of dead is found therein? May not this Book be opened (v. 15) expressly to supply this damning negative evidence?"

Is not this suggestion adding ideas to God's revelation instead of seeking to extract from his Word what He has revealed? Books are opened; then another Book of Life is opened; and that for the purpose of ascertaining (so to speak, this is the mode of presenting the truth for our perception), whose names among those then present are written therein. We have no right to add the idea, that perhaps none of their names are there, or that it is opened for a condemning purpose. The Word of God says, "If any was not found written in the Book of Life he was cast into the lake of fire." "If any" was not found. So far from its being revealed that there were no names found, the contrary is involved, and that, to my mind, to a very, very great extent. But if any were not written there, then the awful result follows.

Let us rather rejoice to know of the happiness of some more of the human race—our fellow-men, women, and children, perhaps some of ourselves—though not "accounted worthy to attain to that age, and the resurrection from among the dead." These have not had part in the first resurrection; nevertheless, at the great climax of history, there are yet two classes, and not a lost class only. Praise be to God!

Many persons reflect upon the destiny of the entire race, and imaginary ideas may soon arise. Here is a revealed truth. Let us be content! Let us be thankful! Let us not spoil it!

(2) It has been affirmed that "at the tribunal of Christ all accounts will be settled, cleared, and gone for ever, and we shall leave the tribunal clear." Also that "nothing awaits us at his tribunal but joy."

I call these statements in question, and have pointed out that 2 Cor. v. 10 is directly to the contrary. A correspondent has written, that the words as they stand in our version might furnish room for my conclusion. And he has supplied another translation, which he thinks should alter it. It may be helpful if I place the two translations in juxtaposition, when the difference will be exactly apparent, and its value can be easily weighed

Authorised Version.	Suggested Amendment.
For we	For we must all appear before	must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ	the tribunal of Christ
that every one	that each
may receive the things	may receive the things done in his body	in body
according to that he hath done	according to that he hath done
whether it be	whether good or bad.	good or bad.

Another correspondent says: "The things done through the body" would be better. Another: For "appear," read "made manifest."

Accepting all these amendments as improvements, do they establish any great difference, or any substantial difference whatever? I fail to see it. Do they not in common speak thus: "For we (not our service only, but we ourselves) must all appear (be made manifest—made to appear to be what we really are) before the judgment-seat (tribunal) of Christ, that every one may receive the things (done) by means of the body, according to that he hath done, whether good or bad?"

The meaning seems to me quite plain. Salvation is one thing, but it is not the only truth in the Bible. Recompense, whether for good or ill, is an initiatory principle of religion.

Righteous retribution for wrong is not set aside because of the forgiveness of the same offence. Though when, and how, it shall be brought about, is in the Lord's hands. The Lord put away David's sin (2 Sam. xii. 13); nevertheless, his child was smitten with mortal illness; also, "the sword shall never depart from thine house, because thou hast despised me." "Never," and yet David could sing, "as far as the east is from the west so far hath he removed our transgressions from us."

Indeed, as to forgiveness, see Matthew xviii. 23—35: the servant who was forgiven his loan, but who would not forgive another, had his debt replaced to his account; "and, so shall my heavenly Father do unto you, if ye forgive not every one his brother from your hearts."

Col. iii. 25: "He that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong that he hath done: and there is no respect of persons." The atonement of Christ does not alter this position.

And again, Eph. vi. 8: "Whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive again from the Lord." Righteous recompense embraces both aspects.

If we inquire for particulars then, as members of churches, the 2nd and 3rd of Revelations will supply the principles of the Lord's dealings, whether for seven or for seventy times seven of his Churches.

The Apostle Paul was influenced by such considerations. He says, 2 Cor. v. 9, we make it our aim to be well pleasing unto Him; for we must all appear and receive. And, ver. 11, he sought to persuade men by this reason for fear, knowing it himself. He was not in dread, but a reverential awe was produced in him by such truths. He himself knowing the fear of the Lord, persuaded men. I must confess I am amazed that there should exist any difficulty as to the meaning of such very simple words. To my mind interpretation is unnecessary. What is needed by us is simply to let God's Word speak for itself, without our additions, and then to live, and to exhort one another to live, accordingly.

Let us, indeed, give place to all the truths in the Word of God, and if our Saviour will recompense the good, and cannot ignore the ill, though able to allow for ignorance (Acts xvii. 30), and for some actions done ignorantly in unbelief (1 Tim. i. 13), surely the true-hearted, though erring, can think: Even so, most faithful, forbearing, holy, righteous, considerate, loving Lord; let the righteous smite me, it shall be a kindness; and let him reprove me; his very reproof shall become as ointment to the head, and not be injurious to me. In short, is there not need, I will not say for creating a conscience—that we cannot do—but for quickening it by the Word; for bringing into greater activity the conscience of us all. And are not the truths of an account, and of a corresponding recompense, part of God's ordained means for this purpose?

Should there be a lurking thought, I cannot accept this, for I do not see how or when it can be accomplished; then, let us remind one another from Matthew xxiii. 29, that to avoid erring we must receive the Scriptures, and then trust the power of God to accomplish all his holy will.

Tribunal or judgment seat: I scarcely need to repeat that the Greek word used in 2 Cor. v. 10, and Rom xiv. 10, is the same word as is used for Cæsar's Court at Rome, the highest tribunal in the world, and for the Court of Pilate, the representative at Jerusalem of the Roman majesty.

"We;" I differ from your correspondents who confine the application of this word to Believers! By "we," and "shall all," and "that each one," I understand the Apostle Paul is making a general statement concerning every human being. In corroboration of this interpretation observe the next verse: Knowing the fear of the Lord we persuade "men," men generally. The intense solemnity of the hitherto hidden self becoming unmistakably apparent, what it really is, and that, with the view to a corresponding award, is a ground for fear calculated to awaken the conscience of anyone who is in a slumbering condition. See also Romans xiv. 10—12, which express exactly the same general truth.

Dear Christian readers, this subject of a personal account and righteous retribution accordingly, may drop out of view; and if so, the conscience of believers will be lulled into deep slumber. Do I go beyond the fact when I also say, that it does not obtain sufficient place in modern addresses and tracts for the unconverted? The Gospel in its essential truth is, and can only be, Jesus Christ and Him crucified, his blessed person and his blessed work. But it is not only necessary to teach what the Gospel is, but to attend to the truths appropriate to its proclamation. The Apostle Paul expressly includes this truth of "judgment" in his proclamation, for he says (Rom. ii. 16), "in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men, according to my Gospel by Jesus Christ."

(3) Respecting the point as to deciding on final destiny, I do not understand judgment when in the hands of man to include decision on destiny. Rather in the sense of ruling, administering the affairs of God's kingdom, having jurisdiction. Indeed, I only advert further to such a subject on account of its having been linked in with a statement which contains an element of danger. If it were so (though I do not accept it as a description of the entire body), that the church in Corinth was constituted of "naughty, perverse, quarrelling, carnal, puffed up, wrong-doing, heretical believers," then with the general truth of the saints judging must be taken this other truth, that the promise of sitting on Christ's throne is not indiscriminate; but in the solemn, searching, stimulating, encouraging words of the Lord Jesus it is, "to him that overcometh." Will that, reader, be you? J. VAN SOMMER.

Requests for Prayer.

FOR blessing on meetings at Methodist Free Church, Wolverhampton, by Miss Brryman.——That suitable men may be raised up for officers in the Church Army.——For a clergyman and his helper entering upon a new parish, that they may have abundant blessing in the conversion of souls.——For special services by Mr. Opie Rodway at Congregational Chapel, Pontypool, Mon., from March 1 to 5.——That the English Sunday Closing Bill may become law. It is down for second reading in the House of Commons on April 2.——That an evangelist may be sent to Cannes.

THE GOSPEL DIALOGUES at Wandsworth and Clapham between Mr. Moody and Rev. Marcus Rainsford and Lord Radstock, reported in these columns, have each been issued in separate form, suitable for enclosing in letters. As clear and simple expositions of the way of salvation, we think they are eminently deserving of circulation among the careless, the doubting, and the anxious.

THE WORKING BOYS' AND GIRLS' SOCIETY of Edinburgh reports favourably of their efforts during the past year. The record says: "The first year (1870) began with one Service, and at its close embraced eight, with a total attendance of 757 children. During the years which have elapsed the number of those Services has increased nearly sevenfold. There are now fifty-four Special Children's Services connected with the Society, with a total membership of 8322, whereof 4030 are boys, and 4292 are girls. The average attendance of children during the past year has been 5478; and the staff of workers engaged as superintendents and monitors numbers 733." The Secretary is Mr. George A. Touch, Inverleithfield, Edinburgh.

Notices of Books, &c.

A "portable edition" of The Congregational Psalmist, with the latest additions, has just been issued by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton. Six hundred and fifty choice congregational tunes for three shillings!

The Christian Traveller's Continental Handbook. Edited by Rev. R. S. Ashton. 6d. Elliot Stock. This handbook is a compendium of the principal places of worship, missionary societies, and other institutions in the capitals and chief towns on the Continent, as well as many less important places.

Mildmay Illustrated Series of Gospel Books and Coloured Series of Tracts. It is well to have variety in the form and colour of tracts for distribution, and these seem admirably adapted for the purpose. While pleasing to the eye, they are none the less pointed in the application of the various striking anecdotes which they contain.

Two Saxon Maidens. By Eliza Kerr. Illustrated by W. Gunston. 3s. 6d. Wesleyan Sunday-School Union. These historical tales give vivid glimpses of the social and religious aspects of England ten centuries ago. While they have the special fascination that attaches to any well-written account of the play and interplay of human interests and passions, they also furnish the reader with a good idea of the struggles attendant on the rise and progress of the Christian faith in these isles. The "pen-and-ink photo" illustrations though having the charm of novelty, can hardly be deemed an improvement, artistically speaking, on the work of the engraver.

Over the Holy Land. By Rev. J. A. Wylie, LL.D. Nisbet. The able and eloquent author of the "History of Protestantism," is a traveller well qualified to discern and to describe the past history and present condition of the Holy Land. Before his visit he was well prepared not only by familiarity with the sacred and inspired history, but also through reading all that has been written by explorers since the dawn of Palestinian travel in modern times. The book testifies on every page that the writer is a lover of the desolated land and the expatriated people. Those who are about to visit Palestine will do well to study it before they start, and to take it with them for reference on their route. No guide-book supplies the sacred reminiscences which are here gathered and grouped together, and which supply the chief interest of a tour through Palestine. And those who, like Moses, may never have the privilege of looking upon the Holy Land until they have passed away from earth, may in spirit often visit it in imaginary travel, but with real enjoyment, as they read at home these graphic descriptions, these scriptural recollections and meditations concerning the past, present, and future of Abraham's seed and Abraham's land.

The Gospel of Grace. By A. D. Lindesie. Cassell & Co. The author says in his preface that "a denial of truth is less to be feared than a misrepresentation of truth." We have no wish to write harshly, but we are bound to say that in our judgment, while a great many true things are said in this book, its special teaching is a misrepresentation of the truth, and also, to a large extent, a misrepresentation of what is generally understood as evangelical doctrine. These are some of his statements: "Atonement, then, meant only a ceremonial purification, an outward purifying of the flesh—the remission of a nation's sins by their humiliation and confession, symbolised by the blood of one he-goat, and the sending of another into the wilderness. All the ceremony could do was to keep up a remembrance of sin, and their need of the mercy and forgiveness of God." "Substitution inverts, perverts, and subverts the whole economy of grace. . . . . Substitution cannot be traced to the God of all grace, but can be traced back to the father of lies." The author thinks that his version of the Gospel "will, in the future, be the Gospel that shall enlighten all nations, and reveal to them the glory of the Lord." We think it is "another Gospel, which is not another."

HARLEY-STREET CHAPEL, BOW-ROAD, E.—At the annual Tea and Social Meeting of Harley-street Congregational Church, Bow, held on the 12th inst., it was reported that during the past year 138 members had been admitted. The Sunday-schools have 1000 scholars, with a staff of seventy teachers: 110 visitors and two missionaries call upon some 4500 families weekly. The services for the people in the Hall of the Bow and Bromley Institute on Sunday nights, at 8.15, continue to be crowded.

Dr. Barnardo's Homes—Z. T. (Bromley), 5s.; Miriam, 5s. Mission to Kabyles—Reader of The Christian, £1.

An Urgent Appeal.

DEAR FRIENDS,—

In the midst of much happy and interesting work my health has suddenly failed me, and I have had to seek perfect repose away from this busy scene. It has been a great grief to me to thus give up my regular duties and cancel my other engagements, but I hope through doing so I may soon be fit again for active service.

May I very earnestly commend our Homes, &c., to your Christian sympathy? It has been a struggle all this winter to find daily food for our 230 Boys.

Our usual receipts at Christmas would have enabled us to close the year free of debt, but we actually received less than for many years previously (I suppose through the mildness of the season), and some claims still standing over are a great weight upon my mind.

These anxieties harass me more when thus laid aside than when busy in the work. About £500 will settle every liability, leave my helpers free to give ther undivided attention to the internal efficiency of the Homes, &c., in my enforced absence, and relieve me from every burden of care as to ways and means while in this shattered state.

Will you at this pinch kindly help to sustain the work which, by the liberality of so many dear friends, I have been enabled to build up bit by bit these last twelve years ?

Any token of loving interest in our Homes will be most thankfully acknowledged, and will cheer our hearts and strengthen our hands in this time of need.

Yours very faithfully,

J. W. O'Hagan

P.S.—Please address all letters to me as usual,

ENGLISH VERSIONS OF THE BIBLE.

A HANDBOOK.—With Copious Examples Illustrating the Ancestry and Relationship of the several Versions, and Comparative Tables. 508 pp. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

By the Rev. J. I. MOMBERT, D.D.

This volume, on which the Author has spent years of laborious research and study, presents an exhaustive view of the English Versions from Anglo-Saxon times to the Revision of 1881, brings together information not contained in any single work extant, and is an indispensable work of reference to all readers of the Bible.

PUBLISHED MONTHLY. ONE HALFPENNY.

The Herald of Mercy:

AN ILLUSTRATED MESSENGER FOR HUMBLE HOMES.

ORIGINATED BY THE LATE DUNCAN MATHESON.

"It is a true 'messenger' for all homes, whether humble or high. The pictures will make the children's eyes sparkle with delight; the pretty stories, short papers, poetry, and telling illustrations of life, will help many a weary heart; and, indeed, no one can read without both pleasure and profit." Irish Congregational Magazine.

The Life of GEORGE WHITEFIELD.

By J. R. ANDREWS,

Author of "The Life of Oliver Cromwell to the Death of Charles I."

In cloth (with Portrait), 1s.

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 5s.

"Whitefield was not a framer of discipline, not a leader of a sect, not a founder of societies, not a ruler of men, but pre-eminently a winner of souls. Would that such preachers were multiplied in the present day! We thank Mr. Andrews for this seasonable addition to our religious biography. No young preacher or student should be without it. But it possesses an interest far beyond any special class, and deserves a wide and general circulation."—Methodist Recorder.

Rev. C. H. SPURGEON in the Sword and Trowel for September, 1883, says:—

"Here we have gold dust, 'and the gold of that land is good.' We hardly know a man more noteworthy for abounding grace and deep piety than ROBERT C. CHAPMAN. His name has never been sounded abroad, but those who know him value him beyond expression. Some of these brief 'Sayings' contain whole sermons. Personally, we expect to gather many discourses while studying this little book. A dew from heaven rests upon MR. CHAPMAN'S expositions."

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

SEVERE BRONCHIAL ASTHMA.

CASE of MRS. EMILY HAYTER, of SOUTH WALES.

It was in December, 1882, that this patient first applied to me. Illness commenced four years before that time with tightness of breathing, aggravated by every fresh cold. The cough became gradually worse. At the time she wrote the cough was violent, expectoration green, the breathing had become constantly affected, the flesh was wasting, the strength failing, the spirits sadly depressed. Seeing the notice of my treatment in the Christian Herald, her hopes were raised. Letters of advice followed in December, January, February. In March there was wonderful improvement, which progressed to July, when she was able to discontinue medicine.

In a letter dated November 16 she says: "I am so happy to tell you I have been as well this three months as ever I was in my life.—E. HAYTER, COITYBEHENE POST OFFICE, near BRIDGEND, Glamorganshire."

ASSURANCE OF SALVATION.
BACKSLIDING.

"'The Way to God' is a series of Addresses by D. L. Moody, full of the point and pathos, wit and sense, the fire and force, of this great evangelist. He has the gift of putting the Gospel in a signally clear, fresh, and telling fashion. We do not require to recommend this volume. Its author's name will do that to multitudes. We simply help to make it known."

THE OUTLOOK.

"The Addresses are practical earnest, and affectionate."

EDINBURGH DAILY REVIEW.

"They are intensely Biblical, and direct in appeal."

CHRISTIAN CHRONICLE.

"Full of pathos, point, and power, and cannot fail to be the means of quickening and blessing wherever read."

PRIMITIVE METHODIST.

"Another earnest book from the successful evangelist and preacher, full of all his racy freshness and power, and calculated to be most useful both to readers and preachers. No one can fail, if honestly seeking it, to find the Way of Life who reads with open mind and prayerful heart these winning words. We can imagine no better way of helping the cause of Christ than the wide circulation of these sermons."

This book, from which we take the above as a specimen piece, is designed for use by Christian Male Singers a vangelistic Meetings. In a prefatory note, Mr. MCGRANAHAN says: "Organise a Quartett, a Double Quartett, or etter still, a Chorus of Male Voices; and prove, by the singing of one or more appropriate selections at the opening closing of the services, the power for good in the harmony of Male Voices when consecrated to the glory and servic our divine Lord and Master." For some interesting particulars as to the origin and growth of the Male Choir, se age 16. (For prices see Advertisement).

NATURE'S METHOD OF INVIGORATING THE SYSTEM.

A few moments' consideration will serve to show that, with so delicate and intricate an organism as that of the human frame, in which the healthy condition of each organ is affected by and is dependent on that of every other, it is worse than useless—it is mischievous—to bestow all our attention on any one part, and to attempt specific treatment without constitutional invigoration. Medicine mitigates the severity of recurrent attacks, helps safely through a crisis, and for a time removes any impediment to the healthy condition of the individual; but unless a more natural order of the system is induced by harmonious action of the functional powers —i.e., a new impetus given to the life-force in its relation to the entire organism—such treatment does not lessen the tendency to a return of a chronic ailment, but rather increases it, only weakening the system, and not the disease. Medical practitioners, well aware of this, order their patients a sea voyage, or residence in a more genial climate, so that the ozone of the sea or bracing mountain air may arouse their recuperative powers, and if there is sufficient of this impalpable force left in the constitution to respond to these energising influences, the patient recovers. If we can add to the salutary influences of rest pure air, sea breezes, and agreeable occupation, that most energising of all life-inspiring forces, Magneto-Electricity (which is only so little used because so little understood), we give the invalid the best earthly chance of regaining health and energy. Its action on the circulatory process secures pure food for all organs by keeping the blood in a healthy condition, and aiding the excretory organs to throw off the used-up and poisonous particles, the retention of which in the system is the cause of all chronic and many acute ailments. This fact, which is admitted by eminent scientists as well as conclusively proved in practice, is of itself sufficient evidence that Magnetism occupies the foremost position as a remedy for chronic disease. The constitutionally invigorating effects of Magnetic treatment are so well known that it seems almost needless to refer to them; but it can never be too strongly urged that, in order to obtain aid when disease has made inroads on the frame, or to gather the needful stamina to resist infection, recourse must be had to such natural means as will energise the whole organism simultaneously, add to the vitality of the patient, and regulate functional action. By such means only can we hope to achieve success in battling with diseases of an insidious character.

From Mr. G. FREEMANTLE, The Grange School, Alresford.

Feb. 21, '84.—"It is with very great pleasure that I bear grateful testimony to the efficacy of your Magnetic treatment. For nearly 5 years I had been a great sufferer from bronchitis and liver complaint, and after trying all sorts of remedies without deriving any benefit, I applied to you. By a careful use of remedies as prescribed, I am thankful to say I am now—after eight months' treatment—through God's blessing, well nigh restored to my normal condition of health. For the past six months, September to February, I have been enabled to take exercise every day. During that time I have taken cold two or three times, but there has been no difficulty of breathing, and very little cough; and in a few days I have been as well as ever."

On receipt of particulars of any case in which advice is sought, the fullest information will be forwarded, and the required treatment suggested by Mr. B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

POWER OF THE GOSPEL.

By Rev. GEO. F. PENTECOST.

IT is without doubt an unspeakable privilege to proclaim the Gospel. The coldest heart must grow warm and soften with tender pathos while the lips utter the precious truths of God's mercy in Christ to a lost world. To make this Gospel, with its fullness of life and blessing, effective in the hearts of those to whom it is preached is a gift which an angel might covet and which the fewest number of ministers of the Gospel at this present day possess to any considerable degree. As we are writing, it seems to us that the characteristic word of the New Testament is "power." It enters into the very fundamental announcement of God's mercy to man. In order that we may get well back to the source of this power, let us consider Jesus as the first great minister of God's mercy to man; and his relation to and dependence upon Divine power for his ministry.

We first note that the ministry of salvation was a human one. It was Jesus, the Son of Man, who announced this salvation and preached it to sinners. If we are to do his work we must at least have the same qualifications, if not in degree at least in kind. And yet He has told us that we should do greater works than He did. What, then, is true of Jesus as the first minister of the Gospel under the New Covenant? Certain it was that He was endowed with the power of the Holy Ghost for his work. That we may get at this matter and persuade those of our readers who are hungering for more power with which to do the Master's work, we venture to direct their attention to certain Scriptures.

In inaugurating the ministry of mercy to man we find that the first great minister, Jesus, was the child of power. The angel said unto Mary: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee" (Luke i. 35). Thus we see that the Son of Man was ushered into this world by the power of the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of power. Everything subsequent in his life and ministry, and everything done in his name by those servants to whom he committed his work, might reasonably be expected to be done under the presidency and by the energy of the same Spirit. Let us follow this history of power through his life and ministry. Before He was publicly announced to the world, God had raised up and sent forth a man to be his herald who was "filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb;" and who "went forth in the spirit and power of Elias, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord" (Luke i. 16, 17).

We further note that, when the time came for his formal entrance upon his ministry, and He was baptized of John, his forerunner, He was at once filled with the Spirit, "the Holy Ghost descending in bodily shape, like a dove upon Him;" "and Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordon, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness" (Luke iii. 22; iv. 1). And, again, "Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit to Galilee." And He came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up, and He went into the synagogue, as his custom had been heretofore, and stood up to teach. And when He opened the book which had been put into his hand, he read a prophecy concerning himself: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the Gospel to the poor." Then closing the book he sat down and began to teach. His first words were: "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears. And all bare him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth" (Luke iv. 14—22). Many times had Jesus before that memorable day taught in the village synagogue; but never until now had he taught in the power of the Holy Ghost. That day there was power in his words. It was the power of the Holy Ghost accompanying the word of God for life to them who believed, and death to them who rejected the word. Escaping from the hands of his townsmen, who sought to kill him, he came to Capernaum and taught in their synagogues on the Sabbath days. "And they were astonished at his doctrine; for his word was with power" (iv. 32).

Next we find him casting out devils. "And they were all amazed and spake among themselves, saying, What a word is this! For with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out" (iv. 36). We know well what the power was which enabled him to cast out devils. It was "by the Spirit of God" (Matt. xii. 28). Not as the Son of God, but the Son of Man, by the power of the Spirit of God, he had power. The same was true of his power to heal the sick; for we read that on a certain occasion, when a great multitude was gathered and many Pharisees and doctors of the law were sitting by, "the power of the Lord was present to heal them" (Luke vii. 17). It was on this occasion that the palsied man, brought by his four friends and let down through the roof of the house, was both forgiven and healed. Here we find the power of Christ rising higher than in casting out devils and healing the sick; he forgives the sins of the man whose body he after healed. It is true that the forgiveness of sins was by authority, ἐξουσία, rather than by power, δύναμις, though the English word power is used in both cases.

This much will enable us to get a conception of the fact that the Gospel is a message that is to be accompanied with power, and that not natural power, but the supernatural energy of the Holy Ghost working in and with the minister of the Gospel. Again we suggest if this is found to be true of Jesus' ministry, how much more must it be essential for us who are his servants. When on trial before the Sanhedrim, and in answer to their question as to his divine worship, he answered that he was the Son of God, and added: "Hereafter ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power" (Matt. xxvi. 64). It would appear from this that his ministry of power on earth was not to cease with his departure from the earth; but from his mediatorial throne he would still dispense power in connection with the Gospel.

We are ready now to take another step in this inquiry. Not only is the ministry of Jesus characterised by the presence and power of the Holy Ghost, but it is the purpose of God that all the ministers of the Gospel, who beseech men as though God did beseech by them, should be similarly endowed with power. Therefore we find Jesus during his ministry training his disciples in the way of ministry and power, by sending them forth to preach the Gospel and giving them power over devils and disease (Luke x. 19). It does not appear that power over the spirits and consciences of men was given in connection with the preaching of the Gospel till Pentecost. But just before our Lord's departure to be with the Father this power was promised. The disciples were sent to Jerusalem, and bidden to tarry there until they were "endued with power from on high" (Luke xxiv. 49). It is too familiar a story to need rehearsing, but we know full well that there was no preaching until after this enduement of power came; and if there had been, it is evident that there would have been no conversions to God from among men.

That the ministry of the Gospel was, in those primitive days, ever prosecuted in connection with this divine enduement is too well known to need reiterating. The whole book of the Acts of the Apostles is but the story of how weak and sinful men, who were themselves converted to God by the Gospel, were enabled to bring others to Christ and salvation through the preaching of the Word with the Holy Ghost sent down from Heaven. It was the hand of the Lord that was with them; it was the Lord who opened a door of faith to the Gentiles; it was the Lord who opened Lydia's heart, that she attended to the word spoken by Paul. Everywhere the story is the same. A wonderful and blessed fellowship between the disciples and the Holy Spirit, not for communion only, but especially for service. Those disciples would have as soon thought of going without the message, as without the Holy Ghost to give power to the message. Their "Gospel came not in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance" (1 Thess. i. 5). Then it was that the Gentiles "turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from Heaven."

And we may be assured that this law has never been repealed or modified. The Gospel itself, no matter how ably or eloquently preached, is powerless to save men except it be accompanied with the Holy Ghost to give it power. Nor will it do for us to say: "It is our business to preach the Gospel; but it is God's business to give the power." This is but half the truth. It is our business and responsibility to seek and secure this enduement of power. Nor have we warrant or commission to preach without it.—New York Independent.

Ragged School Union.

THE annual report shows that the various agencies of the Union have been well sustained and productive of good results during the past year. The known evidences of the blessing of such an agency among the many thousands of the poorest and most degraded of the metropolis fully compensate for the labour; but, as in all good works, much is unseen, and therefore unknown. There are 3211 voluntary teachers, 62 morning schools, 104 afternoon, and 88 evening, with nearly 40,000 children under religious instruction.

The Children's Services, Bands of Hope, and Ragged Church services, &c., number many thousands in average attendance. Nearly 6000 names are on the day-school books, and 7500 on the night-school roll. Many of the present teachers were formerly scholars, while others have gone to be with Jesus.

Earl Shaftesbury says: "Having known and watched the Ragged Schools from their very beginning, I conscientiously assert that I believe their existence in full vigour to be, in the strongest sense of the words, absolutely essential to the saving from sin and misery of tens of thousands of children at present in the most degraded and unhappy condition." The secretary is Mr. J. Kirk, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C

WHAT IS THE GOSPEL?—2.

By Mr. GEORGE F. TRENCH.

IN Philippians?—The sublime revelation that our Lord, in view of man's salvation, descended from his divine supremacy, through incarnation and humiliation, down to death, even the death of the Cross, at which depth alone he can meet the sinner; who, on his part, in like manner, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus the Lord, surrenders as loathsome all claims to worldly or religious position, repudiates self, and takes his place at the Cross, being conformed to Christ's death; whence now he looks to share with Him resurrection and the heavenly citizenship.

Lowliness, love, joy, strength, purity, peace, and the hope of our Lord's return are the present fruits of righteousness resulting. Fellowship in Gospel work is the privilege and joy of all saints.

In Colossians?—The glad tidings sent to men dead in sins, and enemies of God, that Christ, who is his image, and the Creator and Preserver of all things, having in his Cross "blotted out the bond," and overthrown the powers of evil that were against us, has thereby established a basis of reconciliation for us, and for all creation, and in resurrection assumed the headship of the body composed of all believers. Consequently, that we, being forgiven all trespasses, are quickened in Him, and now stand accepted and complete in his perfection before God; responsible also, as his body the Church, to hold Him pre-eminent, the Head in whom all fulness dwells, and in all our relationships to walk worthy of our new standing, by thankfulness, holiness, love, and loyalty.

In 1 Thessalonians?—That having turned to God from idols, and being delivered from the wrath to come, believers may take comfort in the promise of our Lord's return, when all who sleep in Him shall be caught up together with us "who remain," to meet him in the air, and in heaven be rewarded according to the measure of sanctification, service, love, and faithfulness under persecution, in which they had lived on earth. The character of the evangelist, his purity of motive, many afflictions and spiritual and manual labours, are presented as incentives to stedfastness.

In 2 Thessalonians?—The everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, that when vengeance, terrible and destructive, shall be visited on that Wicked One who shall be manifested, and on all who obey not the Gospel, we who believe the truth, and whom they now persecute, shall obtain salvation, rest, and glory. So that we may wait for Christ and our gathering together unto Him, undisturbed in mind, and each pursuing in patience his daily industry.

HULL.—Mr. W. Forbes gave addresses at Hull on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday last. The circus, which holds 3,000 people, was crowded, and hundreds were unable to gain admission. Rev. C. M. Pym also spoke. Large numbers signed the pledge and put on the blue ribbon.

ANTI-NARCOTIC LEAGUE.—Ten branches of this confederation were established last year and 1330 pledges taken. Much literature has been circulated far and wide, and the Committee appeal to societies and Temperance advocates to adopt its use. The Secretary may be addressed Y.M.C.A., Peter-street, Manchester.

JEWS IN GALILEE.—The London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews have just completed their arrangements for commencing a Mission among the Jews in Galilee. At Safet there are 7000 Jews, and at Tiberias 3,400. The Committee have secured the services of an experienced medical man in Dr. Franklin. They are sanguine concerning the future of this Mission.

"WITHOUT THE CAMP."

SPEAKING recently at the Glasgow noon-meeting, on work among the Jews, Dr. Andrew Bonar related the following incident which he said had not been published before:—

In a German city a Christian lady and gentleman had for their neighbour a Jew, whose little boy found their company very inviting, and often visited them. He accompanied them to church, and his parents hearing of this severely reprimanded him; but this did not deter the boy from again accompanying his Christian friends to church, with the result that he was banished from his father's house. The boy, however, found that a friend in need was a friend indeed; the lady and gentleman sent him to reside with a friend in another part of the town.

He had not, however, remained long with them when he was arrested at the instance of his father and brother, charged with stealing, of which he was innocent, and sent to prison for three months. While in his cell he found a German New Testament, and read it with pleasure, having before made its acquaintance in his friend's house. The reading of the Word was blest to his soul, and the youthful Jew of fifteen years was rejoicing in Christ.

On his liberation bribes and other inducements were offered him if he would reject the Christian faith, but these were of no avail. He was removed to a distant part of the country and left destitute. A German pastor found him seated by the wayside one day; and although often deceived, he could not but put some faith in the boy's statement, and on communication with his Christian friends he was cared for, educated, and sent to college at their expense. Now he is working as a missionary in a large German town, where he has been the means of the conversion of another of God's chosen race.

Ten Days' Mission at Norwich.

WE have just concluded a remarkable series of evangelistic services in Norwich. All the clergy of the Church of England have combined in a ten days' Mission, Feb. 16 to 26 inclusive. The Bishop and Dean have joined in the holy enterprise. The inaugural sermon was preached in the Cathedral by the Bishop, and the concluding sermon (in the same place) was delivered by Canon Venables, vicar of Yarmouth. Several Church dignitaries have taken part in the work, while in many parishes addresses to women have been given by ladies who have accompanied the Mission preachers for that purpose. Many eminent men of God, whose names would be familiar to readers of THE CHRISTIAN have been amongst us. It has undoubtedly been a time of great and special blessing.

The Nonconformist ministers are intending to hold an evangelistic Mission in June, in anticipation of which, as well as in recollection of "The Church Mission," surely the language of our hearts and lips should be, "Bless the Lord, oh my soul, and all that is within me bless his holy Name." ROBERT ADCOCK.

Brundall, Norwich, Feb. 29.

DUNDEE GOSPEL TEMPERANCE UNION.—The report states that "The work of this society may be described as a well-sustained and aggressive effort. Many new and able workers have co-operated with the executive. Old and well-tried methods have been continued and improved; new departures have been made, and in both cases not a little real success has resulted." The public meetings have been well attended, and the results have been beyond all expectations. Mr. Francis Murphy's visit gave stimulus to the Temperance cause in Dundee, and was the means of banding many workers together in the good cause.

Foreign Servant Girls in London.

AN excellent and helpful work is carried on among young women from the Continent engaged in service in London by various ladies connected with the French Church, Bayswater. Social gatherings are periodically held at the reading-rooms, Oxford Mansions, Oxford-street, where there is also a registry. Mdme. Du Pontet de la Harpe, who is an active worker in this Mission, furnishes the following facts, which show how necessary it is to care for foreign girls. It cannot be said that her stories are sensationally told:—

"Our missionary, passing through a back street near the Strand, saw a large crowd, and in the middle of it a very young and pretty girl in a foreign dress, clinging to the hand of a policeman. She was crying bitterly and talking fast, but no one could understand her. She was Flemish. Our missionary, who had been in Belgium, knew this language pretty well, and anyone can fancy the joy of the poor girl when she was addressed in her own tongue. Then came her story—one often told. She had been attracted by some advertisement, and came to London, where she found herself in a house of bad fame. After many attempts she escaped, and ran through the streets crying till stopped by the police. Our missionary took charge of the girl, and, as it was late, he first of all left her with some respectable people connected with our Mission; the next morning he took her to the Consul, who sent her home immediately.

"Quite lately a Swedish young woman in service in Hamburg thought she could do better in London. She only knew a little German. When she started from Hamburg, the person who accompanied her to the steamer wrote the address on her travelling ticket where she could be received in London. The girl, without thinking about it, gave up the ticket on leaving the docks, and from memory gave a direction to the cabman. Of course the address was not right, and after going about for a long time the cabman was quite in a fix. Providentially he met with a friend of his, a German, also a cab-driver. This man happened to live near our Governesses' Home, and was often employed to take German ladies to the station. He spoke to the young girl, and could make himself enough understood, and though it was rather inconvenient to him at the time, brought the girl to our Directress. From that hour the girl was under the care of good friends, and provided with a situation in the house of a Swedish lady.

"Not so fortunate was a girl coming from France with a very doubtful address in her pocket. A lady talked to her in the train, and hearing where she was going, communicated immediately with the Pasteur Du Pontet de la Harpe. He went and inquired for the girl, but she was not to be heard of any more.

"During the past year 295 girls entered their names in the books, and 485 English families applied for servants. The lady secretary receives every morning from ten till one o'clock, except Saturday, in the vestry of the French Church, Monmouth-road, Westbourne-grove, W. We shall be glad to hear of any Christian ladies able to speak French and willing to act as corresponding members in large towns."

LINCOLN FAIR.—Mr. H. Johnson, of the Y.M.C.A., Lincoln, will be glad of parcels of tracts and books for distribution at the Spring fair. Last year he, with others, gave away 20,000.

ITALIAN EVANGELICAL SCHOOLS.—The thirteenth annual report of the Free Italian Schools states that there has been good progress during the past year. In Rome there are 153 pupils, and the work is carried on against much opposition. At Leghorn there are 175 pupils. At Turin the school has made remarkable progress. For want of teachers and room, fifty-seven scholars had to be refused at Naples. A constant revival has taken place at Bassignana for more than a year past, and the church needs enlarging. The promoters are in need of monetary help for the maintenance of the present and opening of more schools. Help may be sent to Rev. W. Paterson, Free Church Manse, Fraserburgh.

DO WE NEED A NEW THEOLOGY?

By Rev. JOSEPH COOK.

ONLY a saving theology is worth saving. The final theology of the world will be written by the iron finger of the law of the survival of the fittest. Perhaps this stern instrument has traced many legible syllables already. In the wide field of the Christian contest with unbelief, what are the positions that have seen battle but not defeat? In the struggle for existence, what theological propositions have approved themselves age after age in the presence of self-evident truth? What forms of faith and practice, generation after generation, have satisfied the depths of the human conscience, when it is the most thoroughly enlightened and aroused?

I. On what facts may legitimate demands for a New Theology be founded?

Do not be startled if I admit that there are facts justifying a call for a readjustment of several theological doctrines. I shall ask in a moment what are the fancies on which illegitimate demands for a New Theology have been based. Allow me first to name the circumstances, which, at the present hour of history, so near the opening of the twentieth century, appear to me to call for a theology in some particulars new, not perhaps in its central positions, but in many of the forms of its expression.

1. The providential necessity of choosing now a religion not for one sect or nation only, but for the whole world.
2. The advance of the study of comparative religion.
3. The progress of Biblical criticism.
4. The appearance of a Revised Version of the Old and New Testament in the most important language now spoken.
5. The growth of self-government in the Church, and of the free exercise of the right of private judgment among the masses of Christian and non-Christian populations.
6. The universal demand for the application of the scientific method of definition and induction, to all topics, however sacred.
7. The progress of the physical sciences.
8. The advance of psychological and ethical science.
9. The alleged existence of modern evidence of the supernatural.
10. The recent triumphs of Christian scholarship in the field of research as to the proofs of the historic reality of miracles recorded in the New Testament Scriptures.
11. A growing demand for the application to theology of those tests of truth which are supplied by the spiritual and intuitive faculties and the regenerated conscience, in distinction from the logical powers.
12. The necessity of making theology a balanced system, not fractional but integral, in both its methods of research and its inculcations.
13. The aggressiveness of materialistic and agnostic philosophies.
14. The decadence of strife within the Church as to many points on which sectarian divisions have existed.
15. The growing tendency among evangelical bodies to unite their forces in aggressive religious work and to emphasize the hidden half of Christian unity.
16. The certainty that Christian faith and practice have not yet been lifted into entire harmony with the tone of the Christian Scriptures, and that the work most needed in the Church at large to-day is the Christianisation of Christianity.

II. For what purpose have illegitimate demands for a New Theology been made?

If I mistake not, I shall offend many by reading this list of fancies; for it contains a description of some of the most mischievous portions of religious agitation in our day. A New Theology has been and is, but ought never to be demanded—

1. To make religion easy and fashionable, and lessen the breadth of the distinction between the Church and the world.
2. To satisfy the demands of State churches nominally including the whole population to which they minister, whether Christian or non-Christian.
3. To affect a multitudinist union of believers and unbelievers.
4. To advance merely denominational and sectarian ideas.
5. To gratify the idiosyncracies of one-sided and narrow minds, whether devout or undevout.
6. To satisfy the literary or scientific or political or social spirit of the hour.
7. To satisfy semi-Universalists and Universalists.
8. To satisfy Annihilationists.
9. To satisfy Unitarians.
10. To satisfy mere Theists.
11. To harmonise Theology with raw speculations in Biblical criticism.
12. To avoid asserting the supernatural in any sense.
13. To avoid asserting the supernatural in any but a Neo-Platonic and mystic sense.
14. To gratify the love of change.

God deliver us from being so caught by the spirit of restlessness as to allow the fangs of these fancies to seize and poison our souls!

III. What tests must any New Theology meet in order to deserve acceptance?

1. It must effect deliverance of individuals and of communities from the love of sin and the guilt of sin.
2. It must have Biblical authority and the Biblical tone.
3. It must be in harmony with all self-evident truth.
4. It must awaken evangelical zeal.
5. It must be in an attitude of mental hospitality to all severe truths as well as to all tender truths, to science as well as to revelation, to the Holy Spirit in the conscience as well as to the intellectual laws of the logical faculties, and to the beautiful as well as to the good.

IV. What will be the leading traits of any New Theology that we can adopt in consistency with the demands of these tests and of the wants of the age?

Truth, Comprehensiveness, Balance, Fruitfulness.

I am approaching the difficult question as to what are the true signs of progress in Theology; but here and now I only open my case and state what I hope to prove.

It is the business of both philosophy and theology, as of all life in the Spirit, to echo God. An echo is not divisive of the voice it represents. It has no selective, self-assertive power. And so the Church ought to utter and embody not a fractional but an integral orthodoxy. It should tell the truth and the whole truth and nothing but the truth concerning religion. My central thought is that orthodoxy is not worthy of the name unless it is an echo of God; not merely the truth, and nothing but the truth, but the whole of the truth as apprehended by both the rational and the spiritual faculties.

Can we find in our time a theology meeting these tests? If we cannot find one, can we invent one? Let no passing fashion mislead you. Let God be your guide in the building of the vessel in which you expect to cross the ocean of life, and enter eternity without wreck. Use no timber that will not bear storm. Never sleep while you skirt the reefs.

A Prayerless Prayer-meeting.

DEAR SIR,—That there is need for earnest prayer for the dead or dying churches, as well as for the dead souls living in open sin, or forgetfulness of God, was painfully illustrated a few Sundays ago.

A young evangelist preparing for the ministry had preached an earnest and most faithful Gospel sermon to a congregation composed mainly of church members, a sprinking of visitors and ordinary listeners.

There appeared to be a general desire for an after-meeting. A prayer-meeting was commenced, and it was estimated that about 150 remained. The hymn ended, and the preacher, being a personal stranger, asked "two friends to lead in prayer." A dead silence. After patient waiting, the preacher gave out a second hymn, and added a few words of exhortation for united supplication. The singing completed, another request for two leaders to pray. No response. The preacher laid his own request before the throne of Grace, and pronounced the Benediction. He afterwards remarked, "This is a new experience, never before even heard of—a 'Prayer-meeting,' and out of so many present, not one to pray."—I am, Sir, faithfully yours,

A. A. M.

THE LICENCE OF CHARITY.

THE following verses are from a Poem in Truth. Though it is primarily aimed at fashionable fancy fairs, it has its lesson for some of the modern devices for the carrying on of religious work:—

When women of wealth and of rank and repute
Forget what to woman's position is due,
Apologists, eager to censors refute,
Whilst owning the charge is undoubtedly true,
Go on to declare, though such women are fast
And flippant, and childish, and silly, and bold;
And though each Fancy Fête quite out-brazens the last
With doings more daring and still less controlled—
We yet for such faults full allowance should make,
Because they're committed for Charity's sake.

. . . . . .

Yes, Charity covers, as every one knows,
Of sins and offences a multitude great;
But since to such lengths bazaar enterprise goes,
No more can it hide all the faults of a fête.
And vain will it be for those ladies who ape
The tricks and the manners they ought to despise,
In Charity's cloak their excesses to drape,—
'Twill furnish no longer sufficient disguise.
No! Decency, now, is aroused and awake
To the outrages sanctioned for Charity's sake.

Too long has Society, parlously kind,
Let Folly and Nonsense do just as they've pleased,
If only they aided "The Indigent Blind,"
Or, maybe, the pangs of paralysis eased.
Too long has it winked at extravagant scenes,
Where women, forgetting their sex and their sense,
Have eagerly tried the employment of means
To name even which might be fraught with offence.
Too long has it shared in the common mistake
That all is permitted—for Charity's sake.

. . . . . .

For those in a Charity fête who may mix
May rest well assured that success they would gain,
Although they resorted to no senseless tricks,
And no giddy pretexts to money obtain.
They would not at home to such actions descend:
No; there they would be far too modest and proud;
Then how can they try foolish acts to defend
By pleading they're better if done in a crowd.
Or seek what is wrong in itself right to make
By urging they do it for Charity's sake?

Major and Mrs. Poole at Stroud.

ALMOST successful Ten Days' Blue Ribbon Gospel Temperance Mission has just been held in Stroud, by Major and Mrs. Evered Poole. The Mission had been anticipated by a series of prayer-meetings. A choir of 150 voices had been trained, and many workers enlisted. From the first the meetings were very full, hundreds were obliged to leave, there not being even standing room. Not only were multitudes won over to sign the pledge and don the blue ribbon, but many were led into anxiety about their souls. Major Poole conducted a meeting for men only, in connection with the "Purity Crusade." On this occasion the hall was densely packed with persons over eighteen years of age. His address to these men was singularly impressive, the entire audience being held spell-bound for something like two hours. Two hundred pledges were taken at the close of this meeting.

The addresses by Mrs. Evered Poole made a very deep impression on the people. Meetings were held for women only, for upper class children, and for Bands of Hope, and in connection with the Army Scripture Readers' Association, all of which were largely attended. A good collection was taken for this work among the soldiers, at one of the meetings. None could have pleaded the brave soldiers' cause with more effect than did Major and Mrs. Poole. There is no arithmetic by which can be reckoned up the enthusiasm, earnestness, and power manifested. Such gatherings have never been known in our town before in the interest of the Temperance cause.

During the Mission no less than 1200 have signed the pledge of abstinence from all intoxicants, 1700 have donned the ribbon, and between 200 and 300 men have taken the "Purity Crusade" pledge. Major and Mrs. Evered Poole have consented to visit Stroud again in July, when we hope and pray for yet greater blessing.

BANFFSHIRE GOSPEL VAN.—The work of this Mission has been successful during the past year. Many farm servants and others in rural districts have been visited with the Gospel with good results. Help for the work is needed, and may be sent to Rev. G. S. Muir, Whitehall Manse, Grange, Keith, N.B.

The Southwark Boys' Home.

THE friends and supporters of The Boys' Home, Southwark-street, will all be greatly grieved to hear of Mr. Fegan's sudden illness, which was brought on by overwork and worry, caused by the falling-off of funds this past winter for the support of this important and blessed work.

I know of no work more deserving of help from the Lord's stewards than this, where 230 boys are personally taught and trained by such a whole-hearted servant of God, whose one object in life is to seek to teach these young souls the truth as it is in Jesus, and to learn each boy some trade to fit him to earn an honest livelihood when he leaves.

When visiting the Home a short time ago, I noticed two nice, gentlemanly-looking lads, and asked their history. I was told they were the sons of a magistrate, who by misfortune had lost all his property in Ireland. These boys were rescued off the streets in London. The eldest of them, I fully believe, was converted soon after admission, and is now a consistent young Christian. These are just sample cases of many I have seen in the Homes.

I do hope the Lord's stewards will speedily send in help for this work, and thus relieve and remove the burden off Mr. Fegan's shoulders; also that special prayer be made for this faithful servant, that he may soon be restored to health.

English Governesses in Paris.

MANY of the readers of your paper may be pleased to have some account of Miss Pryde's Home for Governesses in Paris. It was started about three years ago on a very limited scale, but it has increased so rapidly that it has outgrown its present quarters. Miss Pryde is now about to move into more commodious apartments, situated in one of the healthiest and pleasantest parts of Paris, the Avenue de Bois de Bologne, in the immediate neighbourhood of which there are trams and omnibuses to every part of the city.

The Home is essentially French, and instruction in the language is given to those resident in it; nothing but French is spoken. Miss Pryde's wish is to enable those in the Home to support themselves by finding pupils for them. This is done as far as possible, but owing to the great number of English ladies in search of employment, it is somewhat difficult to accomplish, notwithstanding her untiring efforts on their behalf.

Having been myself resident in this Home for some time, I can cordially recommend it to any English girl who is coming abroad, either with a view of perfecting herself in the French language, or as a temporary home. Anyone wishing for further particulars should address to Miss Pryde, 16, Rue de Tilsitt, Paris.

The expenses attending the change of residence will be very great, and it is to be earnestly hoped that your readers will render assistance in this good work.

A Clergyman's Daughter.

SAILORS' "REST," CONSTANTINOPLE.—I wish to acknowledge, with many thanks, the valuable grants of books, text-cards, magazines, &c., by various friends made to the Constantinople "Rest" during the year. The valuable French periodicals edited by Miss Blundell, in Paris, are a great attraction, and regularly visit several of the native schools through one of their teachers in that language. Parcels of all these papers, &c., have been sent to other seaports and to interior towns of the empire. Allow me to add that God is working at the rest as never before. The last two weeks so much interest has been manifested by the Greeks, that we have held a daily meeting in the coffee-room; the moment singing is heard our seats are quickly filled, and after the Bible exposition a goodly number retire to the upper room for prayer and personal conversation. On Sunday last the place was filled with mostly new men, who were attentive and serious. A Scotch lady has just joined me for work amongst British seamen.

Demoralising and Unjust Laws.

THE large and enthusiastic assemblage which gathered at St. James's Hall on the evening of Thursday last to demand the total and immediate repeal of the laws which are a dishonour to God and a disgrace to a nation professing Christianity, fully justified the expectations of its promoters. It was, in truth, "a great meeting of the people," and, as one of the speakers aptly put it, "a meeting of the people to demand the abolition of unjust laws from the Legislature, and not a meeting by which members of Parliament sought to create public opinion." Not a single member of Parliament was present, but the platform was occupied by a band of earnest men and women whose qualification for such a position was their long and earnest devotion to the cause of moral purity.

Mr. Stevenson A. Blackwood presided. He said they had met, not so much to argue and protest, as to demand. Commenting on the large number of women who had signed and collected signatures to petitions since these Acts first became law, he justly remarked that the women's opinion reflected the heart opinion of the country; and although it was well that statistics as to health and disease should be examined and dealt with, yet the objections to this legislation rest on higher grounds; no statistics could prove that it is not in the highest degree demoralising, unconstitutional, and unjust.

Rev. T. J. Lawrence thought these laws a strange satire on our profession of faith. Hypocrisy had been defined as the homage paid by vice to virtue: was there ever a more patent example of this than the provision in these Acts of Parliament to provide chaplains for the hospitals, whose sole raison d'être was to cure the women that they might sin again?

Mrs. Ormiston Chant condemned these laws because they tended to drive the unhappy women who came under their operation to deeper depths of degradation, and reminded her hearers of Whittier's words—

> "The ceaseless laws of justice bind
> Oppressor with oppressed:
> And, close as sin and suffering joined,
> We march to fate abreast."

Rev. W. H. Wood, late Assistant Chaplain to the Harrow-road Lock Hospital, said he was first led to see the demoralising character of these laws by the hardened demeanour of the women in the Government ward of that hospital, which contrasted most unfavourably with those in the other wards, where the inmates had not been under the influence of the Acts.

Madame Andersson spoke in a touching manner of the work she had been permitted to do for the cause of purity in Scandinavia, and of the confusion of right and wrong in the minds of the people who have been long under the influence of licensed and regulated vice.

After a telling speech by Mr. J. H. Raper, Mrs. Josephine E. Butler expressed her confidence that God was working for the overthrow of this iniquity, and added her conviction that if the soldiers for whom this legislation was ostensibly enacted were polled, a large majority would be found against it, as it placed their sisters and sweethearts under suspicion. Professor Stuart and the Rev. H. R. Baker, of Woolwich, also spoke.

The meeting was of a very hearty character throughout, and the resolutions were carried with acclamation, albeit a good deal of noisy interruption proceeded from a handful of youths at the back of the hall, but this slight opposition only served to put the speakers on their mettle, and added to the enthusiasm of the proceedings.

HYDE PARK HALL MISSION.—In Mr. Charles Cook's absence in the East, the work at the Hyde Park Hall Mission is continued with encouraging results. The hall is crowded each Sunday afternoon, and the Metropolitan Music Hall well-filled in the evening. The services have been taken by Lady Hope, Mr. G. Kirkham, and others. A dancing academy in Stourcliffe-street, Edgware-road, has just fallen into Mr. Cook's hands, and will shortly be opened as a reading and refreshment-room. The rent has been guaranteed for twelve months, and the cost of fitting-up only is required. Contributions may be sent to Mr. G. Kirkham, 15, Beresford-road, Highbury-new-park, N.

Mother Moody's Birthday.

(From a Correspondent.)

A PLEASANT company, consisting of the teachers from the Ladies' Seminary, and the Mount Hermon Boys' School, Northfield, with a few other friends, surprised "Mother Moody" on the 6th inst. at her quiet home in Northfield.

The friends were invited by Miss Gertrude, a grand-daughter of Mrs. Moody, in honour of the seventy-ninth birthday of this mother, known so widely through her beloved son, the evangelist, whose birthday was also celebrated this 6th of February.

"Grandma" was thoroughly surprised, and almost refused to be coaxed out of her favourite seat in her favourite room—that in which her son D. L. Moody was born. And I do not wonder, I am sure, for she was deep in the interest of one of his sermons recently preached in London, published in an English paper sent by him; and could anyone for a moment think that even the cordial congratulations of these warm-hearted friends could beguile her into forgetfulness that her son's sermon was waiting to be finished? However, no one would have thought of all this had they looked into the peaceful face of the dear old lady, for she welcomed all so cordially and kept them so interested that the few minutes' intended call was lengthened into hours.

Mrs. Moody is well-preserved for her years, and her keen black eyes hold enough of lustre to last years more; every thread of her hair is golden grey, but even that does not make her look old. On the wall of this large, pleasant front room in which we gathered, hangs a memorable picture. A frame arranged for six photographs holds those of six generations: the grandmother and mother of Mrs. Moody, her own picture, that of one of her daughters, grand-daughters, and great-grand-daughters. The grandmother, who lived to the age of ninety-seven, sat for her picture since photographs were invented.

We felt honoured with the privilege we enjoyed as one of this party, and shall long remember the pleasure it gave us.

During the past summer Mrs. Moody welcomed home all her sons and daughters, save one, and the mother-light that beamed from her face again after these years of separation, will warm their hearts for years to come.

As we thought of all these patient, painstaking years of widowhood, struggling alone for her children, loving them over all the hard places, pointing them to good and honoured man and womanhood, we could but think that for her those words of Boaz to Ruth, "The Lord recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust," were a sort of prophecy fulfilled. And to-day that other sweet benediction belongs to her: "The Lord bless thee, and keep thee: the Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace."

Christian Work at Port Said.

IN addition to the Mission Hall, or "Rest," notified in our last, Mrs. Prinsep writes that it is intended to build a church, a hospital, and a sailors' home at Port Said, at a cost of £5000, £1400 of which is in hand, though not a stone is yet laid. Drunkenness abounds, and the police are kept out nearly all night to keep Englishmen in order. The workers at the hall named are making strenuous efforts to get necessary furniture for use, and to rally the Christian and Temperance men both among civilians and military. Mrs. Munro is diligently assisting in pressing forward the work; and Mr. Eoll, who has probably reached his destination by this time, will take charge of the hall.

Mr. Donald Munro is leaving England this month for Port Said, and will be glad to take anything friends may wish to send, if sent to him, care of Mr. J. Grant, 63, Cornhill, E.C. Funds are urgently needed as well as good books. Mr. Eoll and Mrs. Munro will be thankful for a call from Christians on their way to China.

YOUNG MEN IN ISLINGTON.

THE annual meeting of the Islington Branch of the London Y.M.C. Associations was held at Myddleton Hall on Monday week—the first of the season. Our esteemed friend, Mr. Atkinson, the Secretary, may well congratulate himself on the gathering. There was a splendid platform, and a full, appreciative, enthusiastic audience. The chair was most worthily filled by Mr. Clarence Smith, one of the City Sheriffs, who was clad in all the gorgeous panoply of office. Besides a live Sheriff, there were on the platform, as one friend observed, an English Canon, a Scotch Doctor of Divinity, and a Welsh bard.

Mr. Atkinson's reports are always pleasant to listen to; they are full of heart, and tinged with a poetic glow that removes them far from the cut-and-dried statistical statement. This report was replete with deeply gratifying facts in connection with the work of the year. We extract the following passages, which, though not of greater interest perhaps than others we could quote, have a special value at the present time. A lusty cheer greeted the Secretary as he read them:—

"Special mention must be made of those honoured servants of God, Messrs. Moody and Sankey, who opened up in London their great commission in the Priory grounds. A tabernacle capable of holding 5600 was erected, and overflow meetings were held in the Priory Hall and the neighbouring churches. The fourteen days can never be forgotten by those who had the privilege to watch the workings, or take part in the ministrations. For weeks beforehand the members of the Priory branch had with heart and voice wrestled with God in prayer, that showers of blessings might fall upon the great assembly, who in crowds would congregate on the grounds, made memorable to hundreds of young men, now scattered to all parts of the world. Not only were workers diligent in the inquiry-room, but in every nook of the Priory grounds, earnest men and women, whose faces told that the burden of souls was resting upon them, might be seen rescuing outsiders, and pointing them to the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world.

"Mr. Henry Thorne not only conducted overflow meetings during Mr. Moody's Mission, but commenced a special Mission to young men only in the Priory Hall for twelve days; these meetings were greatly owned of God in the conversion of young men. One interesting fact we will note: on the first night of the Mission a gentleman from Wales came expecting to hear Mr. Moody, but finding he had left, went into our hall. God met him; he yielded his heart to Christ, and went back to his home rejoicing.

"A young convert writes: 'I was brought to the feet of Christ, November 22nd, 1883, during one of Mr. Thorne's meetings. I was asked in passing the gates to come in and hear him; I accepted the invitation, and the service made such an impression upon me that I stayed behind, when you came up to me, and putting your hand upon my shoulder you led me to the inquiry room, conversed and prayed with me, and when I rose from my knees I felt a different being altogether. I cannot say all I should like, because I cannot pourtray my feelings, but I am happy in the love of Jesus Christ.'"

After the Secretary came the representative of the Treasurer, who reported a balance in hand of half a crown. It leaked out, however, that this encouraging state of affairs was due to the fact that Mr. Austin, the treasurer, had given a special donation of £32, to wipe out what would have been a deficit.

The Chairman's address, which came next, was a novel one in all respects—brief, terse, and practical. A really good work, he said, is being done by this Association; and it is our clear duty and privilege to do it to the very utmost of our ability. Those who have homes of their own can hardly realise the sense of blank and loneliness which comes over a young man from the country, "alone in London." Some of them, it may be, take to hard, intelligent, thoughtful, profitable study. But there are many, wishful to do right—wishful, at all events, not to go wrong—but having no sufficient force of character to mark out a plan for themselves. Without any criminal intention whatever, but simply because they are not kindly and properly looked after, they too often drift into a course where they ought not to be found, and which means probable if not actual ruin, pain, and loss for the whole of their lives. Against such a fate an institution like this is the best of remedies. One feature of the work at the Priory is worth special notice. Every Wednesday evening young men have an opportunity of privately meeting Mr. Atkinson, consulting him about their difficulties, asking his advice about their studies, and no doubt in some cases telling him of their slips and falls. I can think of no more likely means of bringing back a young man who has gone wrong—not far, it may be, but beginning to go wrong; getting out of the straight path and into crooked ways—than half an hour's conversation with such a friend, the advice he would give and the prayer he would offer up by the young man's side.

As the "application" of his little discourse, Mr. Sheriff Smith made an earnest appeal for continued pecuniary help to the work of the Association.

The speeches that followed from Canon Fleming, Rev. Ossian Davies, and Dr. Thain Davidson, were all excellent in matter and tone, and were received with much cordiality. The Canon, referring to the unpretending balance in hand, said the Association seemed to be very much like that good, brave, noble fellow, Gordon—(great applause)—who has gone forth with faith in his heart and the Bible in his hand, endeavouring, as God shall help him, to solve a great problem. One of the great characteristics of the General is said to be that he despises money. He had been known to refuse £30,000 from the Chinese Government, when he was perfectly entitled to it. The Canon went on to impress upon the minds of his young hearers the necessity of diligence, contentment, honesty, reverence for the Sabbath, temperance, and, most of all, a saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. He told of a young fellow who had come up to London from a country home, and who, in writing to a friend, said he had promised his mother that when he came to London he would never touch a card or drink a glass of strong drink. "I think he is a brave fellow who can write that." The Canon must needs perorate with a poetical quotation: he invariably does. So indeed did all the set speakers at this meeting; it almost seemed like an evening with the poets. The Canon's double stanza ended thus:—

> "Whate'er may die and be forgot
> Work done for God, it dieth not."

Mr. Ossian Davies, "the Welsh bard," gave us three verses of Norman Macleod's well-known

> "Trust in God, and do the right."

Dr. Davidson quoted from a still more famous Scottish poet, poor Robbie Burns, who in some of his more sober moments wrote a New Year's poem, closing thus—

> "Let us the important hour employ,
> And live as those who never die."

The address of Mr. Ossian Davies was packed full of good and weighty sayings. Space would fail us if we were to quote them all; here are a few:—The greatness of a young man's nature lends a greatness to his life. We are mortal and immortal; let not our mortality discourage us, but let our immortality inspire us to fill every moment of life with noble work done for God and humanity. Let us not rest satisfied with existing or vegetating; let us strive to live. "Jesus of Nazareth went about doing good"—the shortest and best biography the world has ever known. To be a young man in London involves great responsibility. If he would make the most of it he must take special care of his physical constitution. There is a Gospel of exercise. It is not unchristian to turn a somersault or use the dumb-bells. Pure oxygen is worth all the bottles in the dispensary. Do not waste your leisure hours. Napoleon studied his watch as carefully as he studied the maps of the battlefield. "No readers" are not the men for this age. Read a good book through; do not be swallows skimming over the surface. Give the Bible the first place; it is the Book of God, and the god of books. We do not want in this day molluscous, invertebrate beings, but men with a backbone who will stand up against public opinion if need be. Let us call things by their right names. Let us call robbery, robbery—not "liquidation;" drunkenness, drunkenness—not "being a little elated." Wrong is wrong, whether done by prince or peasant. Let us cling to the fundamental truths of Christianity. Avoid the sceptic who nibbles at the margin of revelation. Do not give God the shattered remnant of your life.

Dr. Davidson complained that all the good and effective things he meant to have said had been said by Mr. Davies; however, he found a very responsive audience as he sang the praises of Islington with its healthful situation, its easy distance from the City, its good lodgings, and last, but not least, its sound evangelical teaching.

Mr. W. E. Shipton proceeded in a very ingenious way to move a vote of thanks to the chairman, though that sensible gentleman had previously placed a veto on the proceeding. As our reporter is of opinion that votes of thanks ought to be banished neck and crop from religious assemblies, he found this a very convenient moment to beat a retreat.

Persecution in Hungary.

THE Baptists continue to suffer great persecution in many towns of Hungary. The following cases, quoted from the Wahrheitszenge, are specimens of what they have endured for at least two years. In July, 1883, Brother Lojos, in Vaczhartja, was, at the instigation of the Reformed pastor, arrested and imprisoned. In the letter of accusation he was described as "a most dangerous rogue," and was accordingly treated as such. The prison-van in which he was conveyed to Pesth was guarded by two mounted police, and after spending seven days and seven nights in a narrow hole with about forty thieves, he was taken to the nearest station, whence he must go home on foot.

At the end of October a small gathering met for prayer, when they were suddenly attacked by an armed band. After having broken the doors they proceeded to beat and tread upon those present; one old woman of seventy they repeatedly lifted up and threw down again. The leader was so beaten and bruised that only by the help of others was he lifted out of a pool of blood and carried home. These surprises have been often repeated since then, with this difference, that the brethren have been less frequently beaten with sticks, but have been more trodden upon; Cayenne pepper has been rubbed into their eyes.

The authorities do nothing to protect the sufferers; on the contrary, they rather support the people. In Promontor and Dömschott the persecution rose to its highest point in 1883. Whenever a baptism is discovered to be taking place, it is violently prevented, and heavy fines are imposed. Infants are taken by force and sprinkled by the Lutheran pastors. The writer adds, "But enough about persecution; that is not the worst thing that can befall a Christian congregation. We have much to be thankful for; the good seed is scattered, and God gives the increase."

RESCUE WORK IN POPLAR.—The Committee of Mrs. Wilkes' work have decided to divide the Homes, and conduct each independently. Mrs. Walsham How has undertaken the patronage of the "Elms," at Walthamstow; it will be used as a training school for penitent girls. The rescue work at Poplar will be under the immediate superintendence of Mrs. Wilkes. During last year 251 admissions were made to Kerby-street, Poplar, eleven of whom left of their own accord, and only six were dismissed. Pecuniary assistance is much needed, and may be sent to Mrs. Wilkes, 4, Kerby-street, Poplar, E.

CLOSING AT NEW CROSS.

THE New Cross Mission is ended. It always seems a thousand pities that just when the tide of blessing in a neighbourhood is fairly rising, it must suddenly be stayed and sent back to the old well-worn channels again. In this world, however, we must be content to do not what we would but what we can. Other parts of this great human hive are calling for the labours of the evangelists, and they must pass on. So the New Cross Hall, for three weeks the centre of many a busy and animated scene, now lies silent and deserted, awaiting its speedy removal and reconstruction.

If the tide of blessing returns very largely to its old channels, it will flow, for some time at any rate, in larger volume and at a swifter pace. What new channels it may yet make for itself remains to be seen. To drop metaphor for sober fact, we can rejoice heartily in the formation at New Cross of another branch of the Mizpah Band. It was started in the tent on Saturday night. Mr. Robert Simpson says it is a somewhat weakly babe, and will need much nursing, but there is life in it and it will grow. We sincerely pray it may; for there is probably no district in the whole sweep of the Metropolis that stands more in need of such an effort than Deptford.

Another very palpable and pleasing outcome of the Mission at New Cross is the increased spirit of unity and brotherly affection among Christians who are known by different names. We heard one good brother, who has been very active in the work, remark that he was most thankful that during these happy weeks he had learned to know and to love many of his neighbours, who had been strangers to him before. The fraternising that has been going on among the pastors and others has been delightful. It is not going to stop, as far as we can see. Indeed, it is receiving illustration in some very unexpected ways. Special meetings are going on this week in various places of worship in order to perpetuate and if possible to extend the influence of the Mission. Among the speakers set down for a series of services in Brockley Presbyterian Church is Rev. Gardner Smith, Vicar of All Saints, Hatcham. Imagine an English clergyman preaching the Gospel in a Dissenting Conventicle! What are we coming to? The millennium, some may say; may such signs of its approach be greatly multiplied.

A marked feature of the New Cross Mission has been the influx of visitors from all the regions round about. It has been less of a local Mission probably than any that have gone before. The rail has brought large contingents of people day after day from many Kentish and other country towns. This in part will account for the size of the week afternoon audiences. Last week, for the first time in the history of their London campaign, there were overflows in the afternoon! There can be no doubt that hosts of these friends have returned to their quiet rural homes and districts greatly refreshed, and with a fresh or a new-born zeal that will find outlets in numberless ways, and diffuse the influence of the meetings in a way that can never be recorded, or even known to the chief actors in the movement.

For the first week of New Cross, through the absence of Mr. Sankey, the setting forth of the Gospel in song went on with halting steps. The closing week has made up for the previous deficiency. Having finished their labours at Wandsworth, Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan came to New Cross on Thursday last, and since then "the music of the Gospel" has been sung into many an ear and many a heart besides those whom Mr. Sankey's voice has been able to reach. The Clapham male choir came as well, and the great crowds, both in the large hall and the overflow-meetings, have shared in the manifest delight of Mr. Moody, who appears to have a special fondness for these rousing Gospel choruses. The workers are continually bearing testimony to the power of these hymns to move upon the people, either in clenching the spoken word, or in serving as a channel of direct blessing. And not the solos only, but the hymns sung by the choir and the crowd singly or together. Among those frequently mentioned in this respect are "Take me as I am," "Come, Great Deliverer, Come," "Christ for Me," &c. &c. Among the solos sung by Mr. Sankey that are known to have been specially owned of late are "She only Touched the Hem of his Garment," "To the Hall of the Feast came the Sinful and Fair," "Where is my Wandering Boy?" and "Eternity."

Many other things could be mentioned that would interest our readers, such as the remarkable readiness shown by all sorts and conditions of people to converse about and listen to serious talk concerning the things of the soul. There seems a general thawing of the icy reserve that generally prevails in this matter. The workers are not slow to take advantage of this, and much quiet but effectual personal dealing goes far removed from the friends of the meetings. We ought not to omit the mention of an effort that Miss Kinnaird and other friends are making to extend the borders of the Y.W.C.A. in the New Cross district.

THE LAST DAY

was Sunday. It rose as bright and exhilarating as any spring morning could well be. By eight o'clock the great hall showed scarcely a vacant seat—such a muster at that early hour as has not been seen we think since the meetings at Islington. Mr. Sankey sounded forth in grand style Miss Havergal's Gospel message, "Tell it out." Mr. Moody, before beginning his address, asked all who had received spiritual blessing through the Mission to rise; thousands, we should think, started to their feet. "That will do," said he, "sit down. Now the next question is: What is it going to amount to?" Then he briefly urged the young converts to identify themselves with some church or chapel and go to work. "I am delighted to hear that there are going to be so many meetings in different places after we are gone. Every young convert ought to be good for a dozen others right away; there is a circle of friends they can reach that nobody else will be able to influence."

The theme of the discourse was the Bible, and how to study it. "I want to get you in love with the Bible. If you do not feed on the Word you cannot give it out to others. It is a sad fact that many who have been professing Christians for years and years have very little love for the Book. They still need to be fed through the ecclesiastical spoon. I was much cheered on going into a home yesterday to hear about one who was converted when we were in this country nine years ago. He died two years afterwards, and his wife told me that during these two years the Bible was constantly by his side. He never sat down to a meal without having it by him. It was always at his bedside. He said that if he was going to heaven he wanted to know all about it before he went there. I am sorry to say it, but I have noticed that there is not so much real Bible study here now as there was nine years ago. There is more discussion about various doctrines, but not so much feeding upon the Word."

Then Mr. Moody entered on a powerful defence and vindication of God's Word, dwelling especially on the fact that the Old Testament is of equal value and authority with the New. There are so many references and so many quotations in the New from the Old that they are inextricably interwoven; they must stand or fall together. Proceeding to urge a systematic study of the Bible in various ways, he advised all who did not possess a concordance to buy one the next day, even if they had to live on bread and water, in order to pay for it, for a week. He had heard of some ministers who stood up in their pulpits and talked against the doctrines of conversion and atonement; he would advise any young convert who came across such a minister to do as Lot did when Sodom was about to be destroyed: get out of such a church at once.

At 11 o'clock the crowd overflowed the great hall, into the tent. The Chairman and many of the workers had to exercise some self-denial at the bidding of Mr. Moody and vacate the platform, making room for many who were unable to get in. As the meeting was assembling, Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan sang with thrilling power their new song, "He that heareth and believeth." Later on, Mr. Sankey sang another of Mr. McGranahan's new hymns from the same collection, "The coming of the Kingdom draweth near," and also that sweet Gospel story in song, which has proved a channel of blessing to many, "She only touched the hem of his garment."

Among the congregational hymns sung was Mr. Sankey's "Take me as I am." Mr. Moody said he had just heard of a man now dying in Glasgow who found great comfort from the hymn. He also told of a man who heard it at one of the early meetings in Glasgow, and while Mr. Sankey sang it, before a word was spoken, he gave his heart to the Lord. At the close of the Glasgow Mission, five months after, he rose, told his story, and said he had been serving God ever since. Another case of blessing in connection with this hymn was that of a young lady who thought she was a Christian, but discovered she was not; as she sat at the instrument playing the hymn, she too gave her heart to Christ, asking Him to take her as she was. "Why should not every one of you here," said Mr. Moody, "just now ask the Lord to take you as you are?"

The sermon was on "Trust;" a marvellously clear and simple presentation of the Gospel it was. Speaking of the plague of half-heartedness, Mr. Moody told of a lady he met with in the second meeting some days before. He asked her if she was a Christian? No. Then would she go into the inquiry-room and have a talk about salvation. No, she would not go then; she would go some other day. He tried to show her that if salvation was a thing to be desired it ought to be attended to at once. Still she was indifferent. He saw her, however, in the inquiry-room on a succeeding day, but she seemed to be almost as indifferent as before. He remarked to the worker who was dealing with the lady that she was asleep and needed waking up, like some men who talk in their sleep. The lady went home and talked to her husband about it; the result was that both of them got thoroughly woke up, and they have both given themselves to the Lord.

As to the afternoon meeting for women only, we can but say in a sentence that it was packed, with two overflows. Mr. Moody's sermon on the wondrous love of Christ as seen in the shame and suffering that surrounded his betrayal, his trial, and his death on the Cross was of itself enough to very powerfully affect a susceptible audience. The atmosphere, too, was close and depressing, and as a consequence the delivery of the sermon was much interrupted by the removal of persons who had fainted. It was a time of great searchings of heart, and we believe much work was done for eternity in the subsequent large inquiry-meeting.

How shall we describe the closing gathering, with its wonderful array of men closely wedged within the four walls of the iron tabernacle? One could not look on the spectacle without being oppressed by a feeling of the deep solemnity of the occasion. After Mr. Sankey, Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan and Major Whittle, had sung "Oh, to be over yonder," Mr. Moody prayed in very touching words, entreating the blessing of God on the many present who had friends at home longing for their salvation. He thanked God for all the happy and blessed times they had enjoyed in the hall during the past three weeks. He added that, having received a note from a man who said he would be present, and who thought he had gone so far astray there was no hope for him, he would ask Mr. Sankey to sing "Abundantly able to save." Accordingly this glorious proclamation of salvation was sounded out by Mr. Sankey, the chorus being taken up as before. As he heard that many in the district did not believe in revivals, he asked all who were converted in a time of special awakening to rise, and a good sprinkling of men stood on their feet. Then those who had been converted in churches that did not believe in revivals were next asked to rise, but there was no response. A little later on, while all heads were bowed in prayer, Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan sang the hymn out of the new collection, "How far is it called to the grave?"

Mr. Moody's closing message was an answer to the question, "What is the Gospel?" It was a message of hope to the very worst. Could there be blacker, viler creatures than those Jerusalem sinners who crucified the Lord of Glory? Yet salvation was freely offered to them if they repented. How grand and inspiring were the words in which he declared the "glorious news"—sin, death, the grave, the judgment, all met and conquered and swept out of the way through the life and sacrifice and resurrection of the Son of God. How the vast crowd looked and listened and eagerly drank in the sweet and comforting tidings that came flowing in one unbroken stream from Mr. Moody's lips. It is not everything that will move and melt down 6000 men of all ages and ranks and conditions; but Mr. Moody achieved this as he drew near the close of his address and told some of his most touching incidents setting forth the unspeakable and unchangeable love of God. "Oh, men! at the close of this solemn Mission, let me entreat you to close in with Christ to-night."

Then came the familiar call for a confession of soul anxiety; the responses were so many and so simultaneous that many must have missed even the vigilant eye of the preacher as he scanned the wondrous scene before him. "Thank God for this night" was his exclamation, which every sympathetic heart could echo to the full. "May God make this a memorable night in your history," was a petition that must surely have its full fulfilment.

At the various meetings on Sunday Mr. Moody announced that a reunion of all who had been brought to Christ through the various London Missions since November last would be held at the Midland Terminus Hall, St. Pancras, on Monday, March 24. He requested all converts to send stamped envelope with particulars of their conversion to Mr. Lindsay Brown, at the St. Pancras Hall, and they would receive special tickets of admission. As we have intimated elsewhere, the evangelists will proceed to Addison-road, Kensington, after the St. Pancras Mission is over. Hampstead will be the next field of labour. In our next issue we hope to give an account of Mr. Moody's visit to Edinburgh.

By Pastor C. SPURGEON.

Since February 12 there has been an increasing blessing in connection with the visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to this district. From the opening of the campaign the numbers in attendance have been marvellous, and the Bible lectures are especially noted in this respect. Non-churchgoers have been reached to a large extent, as will, in fact, be seen when we say that two-thirds of those seen by us in the inquiry-room and hall have been of this character. Six cases recur to our mind, as we write, of persons who had come simply out of curiosity, and were "believers in nothing." Another class which has been greatly blessed are those who have been anxious seekers, but up to this time remained in the dark. Mr. Moody's clear, simple, and whole-hearted declaration of the Gospel has brought them into light and liberty. As one inquirer put it to me, "I SEE it all now." Knots of doubt have been untied, tangled skeins of thought unravelled, and a "clue to the maze" given to many weary wanderers. Reaping has been going on at the same time as sowing and harrowing. Many have been "cut to the heart" by the first address, and then coming up a second night they have been "pricked in the heart." Conviction was the work of the Spirit when the evangelist discoursed upon sin and its direful consequences, and conversion soon followed as he told out the love of the Lawgiver. We admired the choice of subjects, as they seemed to fit into the needs of the people. When one rough-looking fellow said "he was too black to be saved," the next evening we had the "Dying Thief" as the theme, and if the suggester was not present, there were many who saw a crucified Christ as a Saviour for black sinners that night. No character has been forgotten, for both in preaching and in prayer, all have been remembered before God.

We think, too, every Christian has been bettered by these gatherings. It has been our pleasure to talk with a number who have trusted Christ for years and yet have not "delighted in the Lord." Such, by these services, have seen their privileges and possibilities more clearly, and by the grace of God are now "rejoicing in Him." Is this not a work needing to be done even more fully everywhere? As God made a Moses to bring up his ancient people out of darkness and bondage, so He has, in a large measure, anointed our dear brother Moody to do the same grand work. That this has been one of the results of this Mission we gladly bear witness.

We were asked by a stranger in the district this question: "Do you think the work done will be lasting?" Our answer is, "That greatly depends upon the after working of the churches." Where "the wilderness has been made to blossom as the rose" it is necessary for gardeners to tend the flower, if it is to flourish; and so in these "waste places," where by God's Spirit and the blessing of this revival, buds of holiness and blades of grace are bursting forth, it will rest with the husbandmen in the churches whether "they bring forth fruit." Without undervaluing the glorious labour wrought, we firmly believe that the following-up work is of equal importance.

All round, whether it be as regards the singing, the overflows, the prayer-meetings, or the inquiry-room gatherings, we cannot but say, "It is the work of God." Most heartily do we rejoice in the manifold blessings of the Mission, and in the calendar of our life's history the period dating from February 12 to March 2 will be long remembered. We have counted it an honour to share in the smallest degree the benefits of this revival, and pray that everywhere others may be even more enriched than we have been.

A united Mission has been arranged for Greenwich, to be conducted by Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan, commencing in the Presbyterian Church, South-street, on Monday, March 3. By this means we hope to "gather in the fruits."

The Children's Service on Saturday afternoon was conducted by Mr. S. D. Rickards, of the Children's Special Service Mission. About four thousand were present, and the attention and interest was very marked throughout. Mr. Rickards took the four pictures of the Sinner, in Luke xv. The closing one of the sinner forgiven was very impressive. A good number remained to the after-meeting.

Incidents of the Stratford Work.

Many cases and facts of a most encouraging kind are being met with by the workers in connection with the visitation of the people. We subjoin a few that have come to our knowledge:—

A gentleman called one day at a house where he had been accustomed on former visits to see the wife with a black eye, the result of her husband's bad tempers. This time, however, the door was opened by the husband himself, who astonished the visitor by saying, "I know you have come in answer to prayer." The gentleman, thinking of former experiences, replied, "That is not much in your line, is it?" "It didn't used to be, but since I have been to Mr. Moody's meetings things are very different with me." "Do you mean to say that I can now take you by the hand and call you a Christian brother?" "Indeed you can." It seemed almost too good to be true.

At one of the Stratford meetings a worker, in conversation with a man who seemed deeply anxious about his soul, had great difficulty in getting him to concentrate his thoughts on any point. After having prayer, and doing all he could to direct the man to the Word of God, the worker gave him a little book, entitled "Just the Saviour you need," asking him to read it carefully at home. The man said he did not want it; it had better be given to some one else. Not to be daunted, the worker, having discovered that the inquirer was married, asked him to take the little book for his wife to read; he at last reluctantly consented to do so. True to his word he gave it to his wife when he went home, and she read it through. As she laid it down on the table, she said it was a nice book, and advised him to read it. He took it up and when he came to the third page he exclaimed, "I see it now; I have been going the wrong way about; I have got to accept salvation as a gift." He has since been giving grand testimony, and every indication of having entered on a new life. His wife last week visited the house of the worker who talked with him, and was also led to an acceptance of the Saviour.

A man attempted to get into one of the Sunday meetings at West Ham-lane Hall, and failed, much to his disappointment. A young worker, who met him, seeing his downcast looks asked the cause. On hearing how the matter stood and seeing the man's great anxiety to hear Mr. Moody on that occasion as he could not get any other day, the worker managed to get him squeezed in through the crowd. He was wonderfully touched and impressed both by the sermon and by what the young worker said to him. This friend sent him a little book through the post, and had a hopeful letter from him. It so happened that another worker on going home the evening after this man had attended the meeting, found a letter awaiting him from a Christian woman, to whom he had been made a blessing four years before. The letter asked the worker to join her in praising God for the conversion of her husband at the hall the night before. Some days afterwards these two workers met, and the fact came out that the man whom the younger one had led into the light was the same as the husband referred to. He is now bearing noble witness for Christ in a church which greatly needs such testimony.

A great blessing has come to several of the young clergy in the Stratford district. Some who were wavering, or even hostile, have been brought into fullest sympathy with the work. There will be large additions it is expected to the membership of all the places of worship whose pastors were in sympathy with the meetings. A manifest blessing has come to not a few of the railway men, of whom there are so many in the district. It has been discovered that numbers who were impressed at the meetings, but did not go into the inquiry-room and come to a decision, are now grieving over the lost blessing and are seeking the counsel of workers with whom they come in contact.

It is known that some men who were notorious drunkards have been reclaimed. The newly-formed Mizpah Band is doing a glorious work. The friend who has given a site for the Conference Hall to be erected, now furnishes a temporary place of meeting on his business premises, where meetings are held every Saturday and Sunday evenings. The Mizpah Band has been very happy in securing such officers of worth and standing as will be a guarantee of the satisfactory and permanent nature of the organisation.

LOWESTOFT.—Mr. George Blaiklock has just conducted a four days' Blue Ribbon Mission at Lowestoft. The meetings were held in the Skating Rink, and were crowded each evening. Many new pledges were taken.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN SAILORS' SOCIETY.—Mrs. W. E. Gladstone will open a bazaar for the benefit of this Society on April 1 at the Town Hall, Kensington. Contributions of fancy or plain work, works of art, or any articles suitable for sale, also cheques or postal orders, will be gratefully received by Mr. E. W. Matthews, Secretary, Sailors' Institute, Shadwell, London, E.

Notes and Comments.

THE United Kingdom Band of Hope Union is offering prizes to the amount of 200 guineas for three Temperance tales. Upwards of 80,000 copies of six tales already issued by this society have been sold.

A prison chaplain, writing of scenes he has beheld, says :—

"People talk of holy poverty, but there is a great deal of unholy wealth—unholy in its origin, unholy in its distribution, unholy in its non-distribution. When a poor woman gets punished for stealing a fur jacket belonging to one of the upper classes, and that jacket is appraised at £300, sufficient to keep five families for a year as wages go, I feel inclined to wish there might be a revival of Sumptuary laws, and that certain expenditure, or expenditure in certain ways, might be branded as profligate and immoral."

We are constantly hearing of the wrong-doing and the thriftlessness connected with poverty: it should not be forgotten that wealth has also its attendant evils and dangers. Much of the poverty which exists results from the abuse of wealth by those who possess it.

The West-end has its outcasts and its bitter cry as well as other less aristocratic regions. A letter appeared in the Daily Telegraph from a West-end clergyman, in which it is said :—

"The Royal Commissioners need not go very far in their search for dens and dirt. Within a stone's-throw of Regent-street—its glittering shops, its rustling promenade—we can show them grown-up families in single rooms, houses all let off in tenements at shameful rents, families living and eating with the corpse in the same room, &c. Within the last fortnight's visiting I have found—(1) Man, wife, four children, crouching over the remains of an apology of a fire; three gallipots in the room; nothing else whatever; sold up; trade bad. (2) Wife, two children; husband sent to asylum six weeks ago (poverty preyed on his mind); selling her clothes and things gradually to buy food; broker's man in possession in the one room (same afternoon as 1). (3), Wife, family, children playing, eating, &c., in room; corpse in coffin, on two chairs, in same."

Many of the workpeople employed by tradesmen in Regent-street and the neighbourhood, as tailors, bootmakers, &c., are obliged to live near the shops for which they work, and so are charged enormously for the rooms they occupy. The consequence is that all the miseries of overcrowding, and its accompaniments, are entailed upon them. How long shall these things be? When will the public conscience awaken, and righteous action be taken in the matter of wages, and the social claims of the working classes? Surely employers who reap their wealth from such toilers have a responsibility to see that such conditions as those referred to are remedied.

A Society for the Enforcement of Sanitary Laws and the Improvement of Dwellings has just been formed, prominent among the names of its Committee being those of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, Lord Shaftesbury, Miss Octavia Hill, Mr. S. Morley, and other well-known philanthropists. The prospectus, which has been issued, expresses the belief that much may be done by voluntary action in spreading a popular knowledge of the law, and in helping to enforce it. Communications are invited as to any particular cases of hardship or misery (in London) which are traceable to evasion or neglect of existing laws; they should be addressed to 17, Albert Mansions, Victoria-street, S.W.

Mission work among the deaf and dumb is a highly desirable and valuable form of Christian effort. Rev. W. F. Mayers, of Bristol, has been very active in this work, and a society has just been started in that city to care for the spiritual well-being of this sorely afflicted class of the community. Between eighty and ninety deaf and dumb persons are already within its reach, while from thirty to fifty attend a regular Sunday service held for their benefit. This, and similar movements in other districts, are worthy of general sympathy and support.

The Baptist Missionary Society has sustained another loss in its African field. Rev. Q. W. Thompson, who for twenty years past has laboured for Christ on the west coast, died at Victoria on December 29 last. He was only forty-three years of age, and had proved himself a most valuable agent and director of the work as Mission secretary for the district of Victoria and the Cameroons. Such losses are severely felt by those who have to fill the vacancies caused, and prayer to the Lord of the harvest to raise up a constant supply of efficient men should be earnest and continued.

The Rev. Hugh Stowell Brown, of Liverpool, says that "the Israelites sacrificed their children to gods, but that is nothing to what our English children suffer through strong drink. There are children in Liverpool who have not so good a place to lie down in as the horses, asses, and dogs for whom there has so long been a Protection Society." Such a statement ought to fill every member of society with sorrow. It is lamentably true of all our large towns and cities—indeed, all over the country—homes are desolated and misery is entailed on the young through intemperance.

A case in point has lately appeared in the daily papers. A commercial traveller and his wife at Birmingham were brought before the bench charged with endangering the lives of their three children by starvation. When arrested they were both intoxicated. The wife was wretchedly clad, and said for lack of clothes she had not been out for ten years, and had slept on a brick floor. The husband it appeared had been in receipt of a good salary, but through inattention to business was now receiving only 25s. a week. The children were emaciated and in rags. Such instances are by no means rare, when drink once gains the ascendency, it overrides natural affection, and thus brings untold misery in its train.

Isaac Walton tells that George Herbert, in the course of a walk to Salisbury Cathedral, saw a poor man with a horse that had fallen under his load. Herbert at once put off his canonical coat and helped the man out of his trouble. On coming to his friends at Salisbury they expressed surprise that he appeared among them soiled and discomposed, whereon he explained the cause. One of the company told him he had lowered himself by his action, but he replied "that the thought of what he had done would prove music to him at midnight; for if he was bound to pray for all that were in distress, he was surely bound to practise what he prayed for," and he added, "I would not willingly pass one day of my life without showing mercy, so I praise God for this occasion." Many who are joyless and shut up to themselves, would find in imitation of such examples music to their souls which would cheer and animate their whole being.

Bath has lost one of its most useful and devoted residents in the death of Mr. Leonard R. Valpy, which occurred on the 21st ult. He was a zealous promoter of various Evangelical and Evangelistic efforts for the glory of God at home and abroad. The South American Missionary Society and the Lord's Day Rest Association were specially indebted to his services. He will be greatly missed and deeply lamented.

The appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate the true condition of the London poor is an accomplished fact, and gives rise to hope that practical remedies for existing evils will not be long delayed. The Prince of Wales is one of the Commissioners, and has personally inspected some of the proscribed districts. The staff represents all shades of religious and political thought, and may be fairly expected to deal with this important question in an impartial and effective manner. With others, however, we much regret the omission of Miss Octavia Hill.

Miss Macpherson, of the Home of Industry, Commercial-street, Spitalfields, E., writes to us that she knows of a thousand Christian families in which her children reside in Canada who would be thankful for a copy of The Christian after it has been read. Any one sending their address to her on a post-card will have an address returned to them. Thereby the dwellers in the backwoods will join our other readers in prayer for still greater blessing to rest on our sister's work among the perishing masses. Some who do not wish to part with their own copies might order a copy to be sent direct from the office.

What Mr. Gladstone said the other night when introducing the Franchise Bill in reference to that measure is capable of a far higher application. "Let there be no wandering," said he, "on the hill-tops of speculation, or into the morasses and quagmires of doubt." So say we as to the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and all the glorious truths revealed therein. Such wanderings have been sadly common of late, and account in thousands of cases for low standards of Christian life, and for practical departures from the living God. Happy those who keep to the King's highway, abiding content with the word of truth, and leaving side issues and mere questionings of men.

Mr. Coleridge Kennard has brought into the House of Commons a Bill for the suppression of Grocers' Licences. The Daily Telegraph declares it to be as preposterous a Bill as was ever drafted, and asserts that "the private bottle from the grocer's" is a mere bugbear, devoid of any truth or reality. The editorial further warns publicans not to support this measure, as it is said they are likely to do, assuring them that by so doing "they would be only smoothing the way for the destruction of their own trade, root and branch." Facts only too glaring and frequent come under our own notice, proving the curse grocers' licences are to society; and as to the destruction of the publicans' trade, the sooner it is brought about the better. Anyway, we would urge our readers to use all their influence in support of the effort to undo the mischief caused by licences having been granted to mixed traders. The Bill stands third on the list for Wednesday, April 2. In a letter to The Times on the above subject, Mr. Kennard urges the adoption of petitions to Parliament in favour of the measure.

We have received a copy of a new and cheaper edition of a little work we have before noticed and commended. It is entitled, "The Divine Ideal of the Church," and has been compiled by an Elder. It is written in the very words of Scripture, and forms an excellent manual for young Christians and all Church members. It may be obtained of Mr. Elliot Stock for 9d.

The sad intelligence of the celebrated Dr. Lange having been found drowned in one of the canals of the Rhone has been received with universal regret. A prince of commentators and a man of God, he had won for himself a high place in the estimation of the Church of Christ. As Professor of Theology at the University of Bonn, he exerted wide influence on the Continent, and in England and America was held in great repute for scholarly research and patient toil in the exposition of Scripture.

In recent number of The Pall Mall Gazet Mr. W. Tallack has furnished an article on "The Society of Friends" in London. Starting with the admission that they were a small body, numbering in Great Britain and Ireland only 18,000, he shows that in proportion to their numbers they exert a very great influence in almost all directions. In London the Society includes about 2000 members, and is divided into twenty-two congregations or meetings. The Bedford Institute, Spitalfields, is cited as a proof that the Friends are fully alive to the importance of home-mission operations in our crowded districts. Schools and other agencies are carried on in connection with this central building, by means of which some 1800 children and adults are constantly brought under good training, and receive necessary kindly relief, a band of 130 voluntary workers giving their services to these ends.

The promotion of Temperance is specially aimed at. During the past year 536 adult pledges were received at the Bedford alone, beside 385 more in the junior Bands of Hope. Mr. Tallack refers to the principles of the Friends not allowing them to encourage theatres, dancing parties, and so forth as recreations, but states that industrial exhibitions and prizes offered for handicraft work are better means of quickening recreative activity, and afford more prolonged and real pleasure in the homes of the poor. Christian independence and manliness, self-help and self-development, are the great ends aimed at by their operations, both in spiritual and temporal matters. Altogether Mr. Tallack fully establishes the claim of this worthy section of the Church of Christ to be regarded as taking its full share in the work of benefitting the outer world.

A letter has reached us from Cape Town asking us to warn Christian parents and guardians of the inadvisableness of sending young people of either sex on the mail steamships unless accompanied by some one in whom they can place confidence. The writer says that during his own recent voyage the officers of the ship appeared to regard it as part of their duty to carry on flirtations with the ladies on board, while the doctor of the vessel openly advocated infidelity, and freely circulated freethinking periodicals and books among the passengers. The voyage was one endless round of amusements, dancing, card-playing for money, sweepstakes, and theatricals. The saloon is the common sitting room, and often the only only one, and being used for these purposes, those who decline to join in them are compelled to go to their cabins, or to remain on the deck.

Surely the directors of the companies should see to it that their officers are restrained from originating questionable amusements and circulating bad literature. It is to be feared some of them rather connive at it. Our friend adds, "I was able, by God's grace, to bear witness against such a course in the steamer in which I sailed, and I now call upon all true followers of the Lord using such vessels to do likewise, as I fear from what I gathered from the stewards that such witnessing is a most rare thing." Testimony firm and bold in the midst of abounding evil is, alas! very rare in these days of worldly conformity and laxity of principle. There is nothing which Christians more need to cultivate for the glory of their Master than faithful witness-bearing in every sphere they are called to occupy.

In the volume of Essays by George Eliot just published, a bitter attack is made upon evangelical teaching. The reputation of the gifted authoress is by no means enhanced by speaking of the evangelical ministry as a profession in which a man "will find it possible to reconcile small ability with great ambition, superficial knowledge with the prestige of erudition, a middling morale with a high reputation for sanctity. . . . His platitudes will be accepted as wisdom, bigoted narrowness as holy zeal, unctuous egotism as God-given piety.' Young, the author of "Night Thoughts," and Dr. Cumming, are dealt with as examples of this. Whatever failings and mistakes may be chargeable on some men who have held high place among evangelical divines (and the greatest men are not wholly free from them), it is very unjust on that account to satirise and censure a body of men whose aim is to hold up Christ to their fellows, and whose power for good has been a chief factor in the advance of righteousness and truth.

A correspondent writes to us relative to the question of selling and delivering milk on Sunday. She urges that milkmen are more hard pressed with Sunday labour than any other class, most of them having seven or eight hours' duty every Lord's Day. It is a difficult subject to deal with, but much might be done to lessen the labour involved, and to shorten the hours, if public sentiment could only be aroused upon it.

A sale of every kind of handiwork, including useful and fancy articles, is to be held by Earl and Countess Cairns, at their residence, 5, Cromwell Houses, S.W., in behalf of the Dublin Ragged Schools and Homes connected with the Society for Irish Church Missions. The sale will be opened at noon next Thursday, March 13, by Rev. H. Webb-Peploe, closing at seven; and on Friday by Rev. Nevile Sherbrooke, closing at eight.

There is an urgent need for premises to form the headquarters of the new Morocco Mission, just opened by the Council of the Mission to the Kabyles, and other Berber races of North Africa. A house, eminently suitable for the purpose, built by an English gentleman for his own use at Tangiers, has been offered at a low price, and has surroundings capable of adaptation for various branches of Mission work. The premises have been purchased at a cost of £2,250, of which about one-half is as yet received. Dr. Witten has been appointed medical missionary, and is prepared to start and join other workers there as soon as the funds are forthcoming. Mrs. Grattan Guinness will be glad to receive communnicatios addressed to her at Harley House, Bow, E.

We are desired by Messrs. Moody and Sankey's Committee to make it known that there is now a need of funds for the carrying on of their work to its conclusion. We hope it is only necessary for us to make this announcement in order to ensure an immediate and sufficient response. Our provincial friends will naturally be interested, as well as those in London, considering the ceaseless stream of people flowing from the country into the metropolis, and the action and reaction for good and evil of each upon the other.

Rev. Geo. F. Pentecost (the writer of the first article in our present number), accompanied by Mr. Geo. C. Stebbins (the composer of some choice tunes in the Songs and Solos), have arranged to sail from New York on the 7th inst., to hold meetings in connection with those of Messrs. Moody and Sankey. Many of our readers have pleasant recollections of their former visit.

The Japanese Ambassador, who for four years has been resident among us, has just returned to his own country. Before leaving, he gave a representative of the Pall Mall Gazette a lengthened statement of his views on public affairs, which proves him to have been a man of keen insight as well as close observation. He gives us, as Englishmen, some useful lessons, as for instance when comparing our Western civilisation with that of the East, he says :—

"There is one thing in Japan which you have not here, and which I miss. You had it perhaps hundreds of years ago to some extent, but we have it to a much greater extent in Japan. I refer to the sense of brotherhood which binds together all the members of one family, and which extends from them to all dwellers in one district. There is no member of our family, no matter how weak or poor, who has not a right to come upon the head of his household for assistance, with the full conviction that it will not be refused him. When I am in Tokio, for instance, there is no man from my native village, no matter how poor, how mean, or how destitute he may be, who would not have the utmost confidence in coming to me for assistance. Nor can I refuse it him. There is nothing like that here; and that you may say if you like is one great element of practical religion among my people. Thus it is that we keep the second commandment of Christ: 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.' Among other things this sentiment has very good results. In the city of Tokio, with a population of 1,500,000, there are only 800 or 900—certainly less than 1000—persons who depend upon the State for their support—that is, who correspond to your paupers. In London, with three times the number of inhabitants, you have something more than thirty times the proportionate number of paupers."

Referring to the question of peace and war, he says :—

"You ask me about standing armies and the impression which is produced on the Oriental mind by a continent converted into an armed camp. That spectacle, I am free to confess, impressed me far less than the war of commerce which, under the name of 'competition,' goes on unceasingly. In military warfare there is sometimes peace. You have truces and treaties, and you have intervals during which nations abstain from armed strife. But the war of commerce never stops. The competition of nation with nation for the monopoly of the trade and industry of the world is constant and cruel."

There are many who suffer greatly from what is justly called the cruel competition of our times, and the amount of lying and cheating to which it gives rise is not the least part of the mischief wrought by it. Fair dealing is rendered increasingly difficult, both at home and abroad, and honest traders are hard put to it to hold their own.

The late Mrs. Curtis, of Stratford.

MANY of our readers will hear with regret of the death of Mrs. Thomas Curtis, whose name and interest are closely connected with Stratford, but who has been of late years resident at Highbury. On Sunday, February 24, at the age of seventy-four years, she "put off this" her "tabernacle," and being "absent from the body," was "present with the Lord." After a preliminary funeral service in Christ Church, Highbury, her remains were removed to East Ham, where they were interred.

She was well known in Evangelistic circles. Brought somewhat late in life to a saving knowledge of the truth, she dedicated herself and her talents to the service of the Lord that bought her, entering fully into the spirit of her Lord's command, "Freely ye have received, freely give." Her drawing-room was opened for Bible readings, with a view to the spiritual welfare of her friends and neighbours, while every good and philanthropic movement found in her a warm supporter.

The last public proofs of her love for the souls of Stratford were eminently characteristic. It was her kind generosity which provided the ground upon which was erected the hall where the wonderful Stratford mission of the American evangelists was carried on. Of that ground "it shall be said," with regard to very many, "this and that man was born there." Moreover, a liberal donation from her contributed in no slight degree to the establishment of the Stratford branch of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Sound common sense, sanctified to the glory of God, directed her zeal into proper channels, and accurate precision of character enabled her to prosecute with singleness of heart her "work of faith and labour of love." Now she rests from her labours, but her works "do follow" her.

A Mass Temperance Meeting.

ON Friday evening last a most enthusiastic meeting was held at Exeter Hall, under the auspices of "The City of London Total Abstainers' Union." The larger hall was crowded to excess, many hundreds being unable to gain admission. After prayer by Rev. Newman Hall, Mr. John Orchard, the secretary, gave a descriptive account of the rise and progress of the union. The work was begun in 1861, and now holds weekly meetings in the city warehouses, varying in number from seventy to 700. Many commercial men and women have thus been reached, among whom a good work is going on.

Mr. W. Pease, M.P., presided, in the absence of Mr. S. Morley, and said he believed thousands of young men in London were injuring their health and prospects by drink, though it could not be said that they were intemperate. He urged young men present to take the better course if they would preserve their health; especially if they were Christians and desirous of being useful in any Christian work.

Mr. W. Noble, in a spirited and forcible speech, dealt some heavy blows at the drink traffic, illustrating its evils and the dangerous influences of moderation, in his usual practical style, laying particular stress on the Gospel being the only positive cure for the terrible disease of intemperance.

Canon Wilberforce, in a speech of nearly an hour's length, spoke of the bitter cry among the children as the result of the drink. In common with others, he believed the great cause of the poverty and misery of London and most other places, was the fearful extent of the drink traffic. These evils would continue, until the nation arose as one man to crush its everflowing tide. He warned everyone present against supposing that temperance was salvation. Men do not go to heaven because they are total abstainers, but because they have been converted to God and have trusted in the Lord Jesus Christ for salvation.

The meeting closed with a few words from Mr. G. Williams, and the donning of the ribbon by 500 persons, 60 of whom were new abstainers.

Richard Weaver at Edinboro' Castle.

WE rejoice to say that the Faithful One is standing by his servant, and using him mightily. Our brother is preaching the Gospel with great simplicity, sobriety, and earnestness nearly every night. On Sunday evening every nook and corner of the great new hall was crammed; numbers were standing, and a multitude were turned away. Three-fourths of the congregations consist of men of the working class, who listen with immovable attention. In the morning there was scarcely a dry eye in the house.

The after-meetings every night are full of interest and power. Dr. Barnardo is favoured in being surrounded by a number of men and women who have been trained under him, and who in the inquiry-room are able ministers of the New Testament. The consequence is, that from the plain and ringing Gospel preached in the great hall, and its intelligent exposition and personal application in the after-meeting, some of the clearest and most decided cases (so far as man can judge) have been gathered in. On Sunday night thirty-one were received into fellowship, some of whom were the results of these meetings.

Richard Weaver closes his Mission here on Thursday, 13th inst. Every evening, except Friday, at eight; on Sunday (his last Lord's Day for the present) at eleven, three, and seven. He then goes for a fortnight to New Barnet.

Evangelising in Carolina.

DEAR SIR,—Communications from any of our Southern States are rarely seen in The Christian, and I fear it is because there is but little evangelistic work to report. It was my good fortune to meet some of your readers from England at the Believers' meeting for Bible study at Niagara last summer, who will be pleased, I know, to hear from Carolina.

The attention of the evangelists who met there was called to the remarkable fact that this section of our country is seldom visited by them, and the urgent entreaty was made, "Come South and help us." The first to respond was Mr. Thomas Needham, who brought with him his invalid wife, with the hope that our pure, "Blue Ridge Mountain" air might benefit her. I regret to say his reception by some of our ministers was by no means hearty at first, as evangelistic work is not known, and therefore not appreciated by our southern clergy. The Lord graciously spared Mrs. Needham's life many weeks, thus opening up a way for his servant to get a foothold with the people, who heard him gladly, and the ministers themselves becoming convinced of his "orthodoxy," finally gave him their churches for special meetings. A number of souls found peace in believing, and Christians entered into the liberty of the Gospel.

Mr. George C. Needham, who responded quickly to the telegraphic call to minister at the bedside of his sister, arrived in Asheville, but not until the Lord had claimed his own, and the dear relative of the evangelist had already departed for the north. He continued the work, however, which his brother Thomas had inaugurated, and our people were greatly blessed by his stay. His engagements in Rhode Island necessarily shortened his visit with us, but time will not furnish a boundary for the benefits derived from his visit. Special efforts will be made to prepare the way for Mr. Thomas Needham to begin a tour of the south, when we trust, if the Lord tarry, your readers may hear from us further. Robert N. Garrett.

Asheville, North Carolina, Jan. 19.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for the ensuing week:—Mar. 9, John vii. 40—53; Mar. 10, John viii. 12—30; Mar. 11, John viii. 31—47; Mar. 12, John viii. 48—59; Mar. 13, John ix. 1—14; Mar. 14, John ix. 15—29; Mar. 15, John ix. 30—41.

VILLAGE WORK.—Mr. William Catlin and Mr. Joseph Phillips will be pleased to visit any neglected village in Surrey, Kent, or Sussex, for open-air or indoor services during the spring and summer months. Address, 17, Claremont-square, Pentonville, London, N.

The Paradise of God.

THE Paradise of God above,
The realm of bliss Divine!
There happiness alone holds sway
Around God's jewelled shrine.

The second Eden, spotless, pure,
Land of his blessed Son,
Who rising, raised the portals high,
And princely victory won.

Look up, my soul! and through the mis
Discern the glittering ray
Of glory, shining brightly down
From heaven's full endless day.

Catch, O my heart! the angel strain,
Ascend my soul on high,
Nearer and nearer to thy Lord,
Above the star-gemmed sky.

There shall my blindless eyes behold
The beauty of my King,
Who, dying, paid my boundless debt
And freedom full did bring.

Infinite happiness to feel
The heaven-born sunbeam's ray,
Incomprehensible the joy
Of that blest, raptured day—

Dawned with the opening palace door,
And fading glimpse of earth,
Heralded by the King's own choir—
A band of holy birth.

Life-dawn of happiness supreme,
The sequel of the cross,
First step to Christ-giv'n bliss unmarred
The end of earthly loss.

Welcome the first fair flushed sunrise
Of second Eden-life,
Peace, rest, and joyful happiness,
An end of sin and strife!

City Mission Work in Westminster.

ON Friday evening was opened a new Mission Hall, rendered necessary by the success which has attended the labours of two missionaries in the district. Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P., presided, and expressed his hearty sympathy with every effort intended to benefit his fellow-citizens and neighbours in Westminster, after which Mr. F.W. Buxton, M.P., spoke in high praise of the work and workers. Interesting addresses were given by Rev. W. M. Sinclair, Vicar of St. Stephen's, who takes great interest in the work, Dr. Rigg, Rev. J. Hutchinson, Messrs. C. Savell, F. Rose, and J. A. Gossett.

Messrs. Saunders and Barnett also gave cheering addresses and reports of their work in the neighbourhood. Mr. W. Davies, who has been well acquainted with the work from the commencement, gave an address, and urged all present to co-operate in this movement. Many souls have been saved during the past years. The hall had cost for fitting and renovation about £45. Funds are greatly needed, and will be gratefully received by the Treasurer, Mr. W. Davis, 48, Rochester-row, S.W.

HOME FOR AGED BLIND WOMEN.—On Saturday afternoon last the new premises of the North London Home for Aged Christian Blind Women, Mansion-house, Hanley-road, Hornsey-rise, were opened, and the foundation-stone of a new wing laid, in the presence of a large gathering of ladies and gentlemen interested in the welfare of the blind. Lord Shaftesbury, patron of the Home, was expected to open the new premises, but was prevented. Dr. T. R. Armitage therefore presided, and also laid the foundation-stone of the new wing. The Home, of which Mr. and Mrs. H. Bright are the founders and hon. superintendents, was opened in other premises in 1880, with four inmates, and now numbers 24, which will be increased to 30 on the completion of the new wing. The inmates are aged Christian women over fifty years of age, and there is no sectarian test imposed as a condition of admission. The freehold of the new premises has cost £1250, and the cost of the new wing, with renovation of the existing house, will be about £1000. Including the proceeds of Saturday's proceedings, over £1050 has been given or promised towards the entire cost.

MR. MOODY AND PASTOR MONOD.

DIALOGUE AT NEW-CROSS-ROAD HALL.

MR. MOODY: Now let there be perfect stillness all over the building; the questions I am going to ask of my friend are questions of life and death. The first question is this: What is the first step towards salvation?

PASTOR MONOD: We find the answer in the history of the Prodigal Son. If we look for the first symptom of his getting back into the right path we shall discover it in these words: "When he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want. . . . And when he came to himself, he said . . . I will arise and go to my father." The first step towards salvation is to come to one's self—a long journey sometimes. Then, coming to himself, the sinner feels a sense of need, whatever the need may be. To the Prodigal Son, it was hunger. In many cases—commonly indeed—it is a need of forgiveness; but that is not always the beginning. It may be simply a need of strength; or it may be a need of comfort. Others, again, chiefly feel a need of love; well, God answers that. No matter by what door you come provided you do come. I remember a French friend, now gone to his rest, who told me of his conversion—a very striking one. He said to me, "No, I cannot say I had a very strong sense of sin. I just felt happy in the love of God. God did to me as a mother will sometimes do to her child when he has overslept himself: He woke me with a kiss."

MR. M.—Is it a present salvation? Can any one be saved here to-night?

PASTOR M.—I cannot see how it can be salvation at all, if it is not present salvation. If a drowning man is not being saved now, I do not see in what sense he is being saved. What says the Apostle? "Ye are saved by grace, through faith." In one sense, of course, our salvation has been accomplished in the past; Christ has done it all, and we have but to receive it. In another sense, our salvation, in its fulness, is still future, and "is nearer now than when we believed." Yet it is also true that we are saved now; just as a drowning man is saved now, although he may not yet have put on dry clothes, or feel perfectly comfortable.

MR. M.—Does faith or repentance come first?

PASTOR M.—In the Gospel of Mark we read: "After that John was put in prison Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God, and saying: The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe the Gospel" (Mark i. 14, 15). The Apostle Paul said to the elders of Ephesus: "I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house, testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts. xx. 20, 21). Both repentance and faith are needful; and they are inseparable. If, however, we must name them in succession, repentance comes first.

An illustration may make this plain. What is repentance? It is not a feeling at all; it is an act. Repentance means turning round. Conversion and repentance are two translations of the same word. Well, suppose you do turn away from your sin, that is not enough; you must look to Christ as your Saviour. The unconverted sinner has turned his back upon the Lord; what must he do in order to look to Christ and to believe in Him? He must turn round. If he does not turn round he cannot see the Saviour; and if he does see the Saviour, it is evident that he has turned round. Which of the two acts comes first? The turning round, of course. That at once puts him in a position to look away from his sin to his Saviour. I cannot hold on to my sin at the same time that I am looking to Christ. Nor am I able to forsake my sin, except by looking to Christ. But I turn to Him, who is ready to forgive the sin which I am willing to forsake. Repentance puts me in the right position for believing; and, I might add, that believing is, in its turn, a most powerful means of repentance; indeed, the bitterest tears of repentance flow after we have believed in the love of Christ.

When I was pastor of a French Canadian church in the United States, the elders of the church asked a poor old woman who could not even read, "What have we to do in order to be saved?" She answered, timidly: "Why, it seems to me that if one has got a good repentance in our Lord Jesus Christ one is saved." I had never heard the expression before, and thought it a very striking one; it seemed to settle the vexed question about repenting and believing; what she experienced, you see, was a good repentance in our Lord Jesus Christ.

MR. M.—What is it to believe?

PASTOR M.—The commonest things are the most difficult to define. Suppose Mr. Moody asked me, What is life? or, What is love? it would not be easy to give an answer. What is it to believe? Well, to believe a person, is to consider that person as truthful. To believe a thing, is to consider that thing as true.

If you believe me, then, you take it for granted that any promise I make you will be fulfilled. If you believe that a bank note which is offered you is genuine, you reckon it as worth £5, or £10, or £50, though it is but a piece of paper. If you have the slightest doubt about its genuineness, then you dare not count it as so much money. If you feel certain that it is forged you take no account of it at all. In the two latter cases you decline to accept it. The proof of the trusting is in the taking.

MR. M.—Many think they must wait God's time in order to be saved. What is God's time?

PASTOR M.—It seems to me that we have given the answer with our own lips this very day. We have been singing:—

> "While Jesus whispers to you, come, sinner, come!
> While we are praying for you, come, sinner, come!
> Now is the time to own Him, come, sinner, come!
> Now is the time to know Him, come, sinner, come!"

And again:—

> "One there is who loves thee, oh, receive Him now!
> He has waited all the day—why waitest thou?"

But we have better than hymns; we have the Word of God. There we are told very definitely what the time is. "He saith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee: behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation" (2 Cor. vi. 2). We may think that we are waiting; but it is God who is waiting for us all the while. When we do decide, of course we have a right to say: "Now is God's time to receive me." But we ought to have decided long before. How would it do to tell an undutiful son that he should return to his father some day, or by and by, or to-morrow? His plain duty is to return now.

MR. M.—So if these friends go away unsaved, they are adding sin to sin?

PASTOR M.—Surely: because unbelief is not a misfortune, it is a sin—the one sin of which the Holy Ghost is to convince men: "of sin, because they believe not on Me" (Jno. xvi. 9). We are making God a liar as long as we refuse to receive the record He has given concerning his Son.

MR. M.—After they believe, what have they to do? A good many are afraid to receive Christ because they think that when they go out to-morrow they will have the same temptations as to-day, and will fall into sin.

PASTOR M.—They forget that if they do believe to-night, then they have got hold of Christ and Christ has got hold of them. He says: "Abide in Me, and I in you." If I believe in Christ I am one with Him. "He that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit" (1 Cor. vi. 17). Henceforth I am to draw all my life from Christ, not from myself. "In me (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing" (Rom. vii. 18); but "the law of the Spirit of life, in Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the law of sin and death" (Rom. viii. 2). A Christian working-man, being asked by what means he kept walking in the paths of obedience, replied: "Well, I came to the Saviour; He received me; and I never said, 'Good-bye.'"

MR. M.—Suppose they do fall into sin after they have believed?

PASTOR M.—We should not, and need not, fall into sin; but we may and we do fall into sin. If we have thus fallen, we are told most distinctly what we should do. "If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John ii. 9; i. 9). Have we fallen? Let us return to Christ, and make a clean breast of it. Let us tell Him all about it, and then resume the path of obedience, resting, not upon our good resolutions, but upon Himself, upon his blood shed for us, upon his word, upon his love, remembering what is said in the Epistle of Jude about "Him who is able to keep us from falling." Will anybody reply, "Oh, yes; it is written that He is able, but not that He is willing." What an offence to God! Suppose you are a surgeon, and you tell a poor man whose arm is broken, "My good fellow, I am able to cure you." He implores you to do so. "Ah!" you say, "but I did not say I was willing!" Why, if you were not willing, the least you could do would be to let him alone. But to go and taunt him by saying that you were able when you were not willing, would be cruel and heartless. Not one of us, "who are evil," would do such a thing; much less our Father which is in heaven. No; when God says that Jesus, "able to save to the uttermost," is "able to keep us from falling," that surely implies that He is willing. Let us, then, have full confidence, not leaning upon ourselves or upon these meetings, blessed as they are, but only upon the faithfulness of God.

MR. M.—Tell us how we can have a victorious life, right along, all the while.

PASTOR M.—Well, first of all, is such a life commanded and promised to us? What does Christ say? "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." "My grace is sufficient for thee." What does Paul say? "We are more than conquerors through Him that loved us." What does John say? "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" The victorious life of faith is summed up in the last verse of Col. i.: "I also labour, striving according to his working, which worketh in me mightily." The Apostle was labouring and striving all the time, but all the energy for that striving and that labouring came from Christ; it was God's working that worked mightily in his servant.

If we are to overcome our enemies, in the first place we must take our right position in Christ. As it is said in Romans vi.: "Reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God in Jesus Christ our Lord." Begin with that. It is not something to be found at the further end of the Christian life: it is the real, practical, starting point. Say to yourself: "I am dead to sin, not through any effort of mine, but through the death of Christ." "If one died for all, then did all die" (2 Cor. v. 15, R.V). Reckon it so. Do not consult your feelings about it. Take it as an accomplished fact that the death of Christ stands between the man that you were and the man that you are. But, further, we are to reckon ourselves as alive unto God. God commands us to make the reckoning; so we need not shrink from it, or fear that it shall not prove true. Then when a temptation comes, say to that temptation: "I am alive unto God; I am stronger than you, O tempter! I stand in the power of the resurrection of Christ. You shall not overcome me; but by thus trying my faith you shall only make it the stronger." For it is a glorious fact that every temptation over which we triumph through faith in Christ leaves us stronger than before. Need I add, alas! that every time we give way we are weakened.

The victory belongs to us; let us take hold of it, and go forth "conquering, and to conquer." And if there be failings in our faith, with defeat as the consequence, let us not be discouraged by them, still less reconcile ourselves to them. Let us keep aloft our only banner—the Cross of Christ. Let us trust the promises of God in Christ, which are the promises of pardon, of peace, of deliverance, of purity, of power, of joy, of victory, of plenteous and everlasting redemption.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Miss Waterman, who has been taking a brief rest, is now anxious to be again engaged in active service for the Lord. She may be addressed care of Mr. J. Smith, Castle-lane, Chilworth, Romsey, Hants.

Mrs. Hampson, whose remarkable evangelistic work in Australia and New Zealand we recently recorded, is now in California, hoping that the rest and change will restore her to health. She hopes to visit India next year if the Lord will.

London Police.—The work of the Gospel is making great progress among the Metropolitan Police. Miss Gurney and others who labour among them say there are now over five hundred enrolled as Christian men. A minister of South London recently baptized an inspector on a confession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Ross.—Mr. and Mrs. Diprose have been working here with good results. A recent meeting held in the Congregational Church, at which Mr. Diprose preached and Mrs. Diprose sang, was attended with blessing. The meetings held regularly at Michaelchurch and neighbouring villages are also well attended, and scores have been brought to a saving knowledge of the Lord.

Upper Norwood Y.W.C.A.—Mrs. W. E. Legg, of Harrow, has been holding evangelistic meetings every evening during the past week in St. Andrew's Hall, and has had Bible-readings for ladies and two children's services in the afternoons. Several accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as their Saviour, and left the hall with a determination to confess their Saviour, and to give their lives to his service.

Aylesbury.—A good work is going on at the Assembly Hall in this town. From six to seven hundred come to listen to the Gospel every Sunday evening, most of whom attended no place of worship ere this hall was built. In connection with this Mission a blessed work is going on in a number of villages in the neighbourhood, under the direction of Mr. J. E. Taylor. The people throw themselves heartily into the work.

Ledbury.—A successful Sunday's special evangelistic Mission has just been concluded at the Congregational Church, Ledbury, Hereford, conducted by Rev. T. R. Donaldson, of Ross, assisted by Mr. G. Donaldson. All the Gospel services, and especially those for women only, were much blessed. The church was quickened, and many of the young people of the congregation gave their hearts to the Saviour. T. R. D.

Homerton.—A week of special services, resulting in much revival and awakening, was held here. Rev. W. Darlow Serjeant (of Manchester), Mr. W. F. Price and Mr. W. Parker (of the Evangelisation Society), were the Mission preachers. Mr. Serjeant had a special meeting for men, at which over 200 were present on Sunday afternoon, and one evening from forty to fifty souls came up to the forms and knelt for conversation on seeking salvation. Each evening saw some finding peace, and the prayers of God's people have been answered, and rich blessing has been poured out alike upon the Church and upon sinners.

Glasgow Noon Meeting.—At this meeting on Monday week a student who had been brought to a knowledge of the truth during Major Whittle's last visit to Edinburgh, testified to a great work which had been done in Berwickshire through the work of a few students. He asked their prayers on behalf of the efforts to be put forth when Messrs. Whittle and McGranahan visited Edinburgh. Mr. Jack stated that a good work was going on in Dr. Somerville's old church, and numbers had been gathered in. On the south side of the Clyde in the Seamen's Bethel they had much to praise God for. One night thirty rose and professed to have found blessing.

The Bethel Ketch "Annie."—You will rejoice to hear that we were out last month in the very stormy weather, and were wonderfully preserved. Our ship has sustained but little damage. In the ports of Brixham and Torquay we have had great blessing; souls have been saved. Now we are at Plymouth, surrounded by thousands of fishermen from Cornwall, Devon, and other parts of England. The first night a full meeting. The second day from early morn the Cornish fishermen filled our cabin, and remained till one. On February 28, eighty sat down to tea, and a time of great blessing followed. Will the readers of The Christian pray that the Mission ketch Annie may be kept in motion in and out among the fishermen all the year round? Bags, eight inches by seven, Gospel books, Bibles, and Testaments are greatly needed, and may be sent to the Annie Mission Ketch, Plymouth, for the next fortnight.

Henry Cook.

Blackpool.—We had the privilege to be present at one of Rev. W. Haslam's Mission Services at Christ Church, in this town. The church was well filled, and the large congregation listened eagerly to the burning words of the evangelist, as he spoke from the text, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" Hundreds remained to the after-meeting, and many inquirers found salvation. E. M. C.

Barking.—A series of special services for children was held at Barking from Feb. 19 to 22, in the Congregational Church, arranged by Mr. E. H. Glenny and Mr. G. T. Gillingham. 700 children were present each evening, and from two to three hundred remained to the after-meetings; many, it is believed, decided for Christ. The meetings were addressed each evening by Mr. H. Lidstone, of the Children's Special Service Mission.

Jarrow-on-Tyne.—A very successful series of Mission services has just been conducted here by Mr. James Nuch. The congregations were composed entirely of working men and their families. About thirty have professed faith in Christ, many others have been quickened and brought into closer fellowship with God. It is proposed to hold a series of tent services during the coming summer, to reach those who are at present outside the operations of the ordinary agencies.

Timberscombe, Somerset.—Mr. George Back has concluded a month's Mission in this quiet little village. The spiritual success of the work has surpassed our most sanguine expectations. There seems to have been a general awakening over the whole neighbourhood, for which we cannot sufficiently praise God. Towards the close of the meetings the chapel was literally packed with anxious listeners, and many could not get in.—S. A. C.

Melrose.—I am exceedingly thankful to say we have had a glorious revival here under Mr. Mormon, at the United Methodist Free Church; there were 140 inquirers. Mr. Mormon has just commenced special services at Camelford. Mr. Greenwood has been holding revival services at St. Minver; sixty were added to the church. Mr. Ball has been holding services at St. Breward; there were sixty inquirers. Wm. Rowe.

Brick-lane, E.—On the 26th February a tea meeting was given to about 250 Jews and Jewesses at the Gospel Hall, Brick-lane, after which Rev. J. Dunlop, Dr. Ben-Zion, from Odessa, Mr. J. Townley, and Mr. Rowe gave Gospel addresses, to which there was the greatest attention and manifest interest. A good work is being carried on by the agents of the British Society in this district. There is a Medical Mission, night school, mothers' meetings, &c., in full working order, and not without positive results in the conversion of some of the sons of Abraham.

CONTINENTAL AND FOREIGN NOTES.

REV. E. P. HAMMOND AT ADDISON, N.Y.

Mr. Hammond has been holding meetings for children at Addison, N.Y., in which nearly all the churches united. At the close of each service a look of anxiety took the place of carelessness; many were conversed with, and a number went away with smiling faces, saying they were converted. Many ministers came in from the country around, and Christians of every name were united in earnest prayer that the whole region might be permeated with revival power.

HANOVER.

The Evan.-Kirch. Anzeiger calls attention to a noteworthy proclamation just issued by the Hanoverian Consistory to all the school inspectors and teachers of its district. The authorities say it is incumbent on the national schools to co-operate with the Foreign and Home Missions, and call upon the teachers lovingly and carefully to awaken and train in the children entrusted to them, a genuine Christian feeling, which is as necessary for the home children as for those of heathen lands. It is also commanded that during religious or geographical instruction, opportunity should be taken to point out the places where Mission work is being carried on, special attention being given to those in their own neighbourhood. The youth of the land will thus grow up with a ready-made interest in the work of the kingdom of God, and they will become acquainted for their own benefit with Y.M.C. Associations, and with homes or lodgings. In order to help the teachers themselves to a knowledge of such works, various Mission journals are recommended to them, and a monthly conference is to be held.

BELGIUM.

Belgium is the musterland of the Ultramontanes. Church and State stand there constitutionally free and equal, and yet the history of the last fifty years is one unbroken record of attempts to make the State subject to the Church. Nowhere in the world is there more fanatical opposition to all faith, than in Belgium. In 1829 there were 260 convents in the land; the census of 1880 gave 1346, that is, two convents to three congregations. In the Flemish Provinces in the same year the number of monks and nuns was 24,672, most of whom devote themselves to teaching; and with what result? Of the collective people of Belgium 33 per cent. can neither read nor write.—Evan. Kirch. Anzeiger.

MEDICAL MISSION AT ST. ETIENNE.

This Mission was commenced by Mr. McAll, of Paris, nearly three years ago, and is now being carried on with great zeal by Dr. Burroughs. Besides dispensary work three days every week, where, by means of conversation with the patients and addresses, many have been brought to the light of the Gospel, other agencies are employed, such as mothers' meetings prayer meetings, and a Bible exposition. Dr. Burroughs says: "If twenty salles could be opened, all would be filled," so great is the desire to hear the Gospel. A hospital is urgently needed. Dr. Lowe, of the Cowgate Medical Mission, Edinburgh, is interested in the work.

CORCELLES, NEUCHATEL.

From Feb. 3 to 8 was a time of much blessing here; pastors and people of the National, Moravian, Free and Independent churches took part in the meetings, amongst other Pastors Stockmayer, Rappard, de Dombresson, &c. At 9 a.m. from thirty to forty persons met for prayer, which was very real and to the point. Full liberty was given to the sisters to raise their voices in prayer. The afternoon was specially consecrated to edification and the study of God's Word. The evening was devoted to evangelistic preaching when the small chapel was more than filled with from 500 to 600 persons. Very many believers have been revived, encouraged, and strengthened. At the evening after-meetings the deep feeling of a soul to whom God speaks was often manifest. The friends had the great and holy joy of hearing many say, "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered." The evangelistic services are still being carried on.—Journal Religieux.

FELIX NEFF'S SCHOOL.

The Model School, founded in 1823, by Felix Neff, at Mens, is in danger, says a correspondent, of having a term put to its long period of usefulness, by the withdrawal of the grants hitherto accorded to it from the Department of the State Exchequers. The reason for this step is the new regulation which denies any assistance to any school in which religion is taught. But the devoted founder and his successors noted that the children had an immortal as well as a temporal interest, and dared not exclude the Word of God from its curriculum, seeing that by it they were made better citizens, as well as being instructed in the way of salvation.

The leaders of the present French Government are so blind as not even to see that a Christian people are always and in every sense the best citizens. God grant that the issue of the present great efforts to evangelise that unhappy land may lead to the removal of the scales now on the eyes of the rulers and people alike! In the meantime this useful school must not be allowed to fail in its good work for want of the necessary means.

MILAN.

The Committee of the Evangelical Alliance, at their meeting on February 4, wishing in every way to co-operate in the grand ideal of a true union of the Evangelical Churches in Italy, has resolved that this be made the subject of prayer at their monthly meetings.

BERLIN.

This Association has sent out its first year's report. It was founded by Pastor von Schlümbach, and now numbers 449 members, who are vigorously working towards their own edification, and seeking to help, instruct, and interest other young men. A boys' branch was begun last September; the report announces 86 members. They are now seeking to make known their existence as widely as possible; one method consists in placing large placards at the railway stations, inviting young men to their meetings. This is done by consent of the railway directors.

AUSTRIA.

Religious liberty is very limited in Austria, as M. Fermand, a delegate from a Swiss Committee, has found. He was seeking to establish in Vienna a Y.M.C.A., and had been promised help by a pretty large number of persons. A meeting, numerously attended, which had been authorised by the police, was about to be held in the Scotch church, when a police agent entered, and notwithstanding the assurance that it was in order, he demanded full information about the leader, and required that all children under thirteen years of age should leave the meeting, thus obliging many of the parents to do the same.—Christianisme au XIX^e^ Siècle.

The Y.M.C.A. at Work.

ABERLOUR.

A MOST successful series of meetings have been conducted here, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association, by Mr. Smith, of the Banffshire Gospel Van, during the last fortnight. The meetings, which were held in the Hotel Hall, were well attended throughout, and great attention was paid to the telling Gospel addresses given by Mr. Smith. This is the second time we have had a visit from this Mission Evangelist, which has been the means of much blessing in Banffshire since its commencement about two years ago.

BRECON.

During the winter the Young Men's Christian Association at Brecon has been busily engaged. Each night the Town Hall was the scene of earnest Gospel addresses, warm-hearted testimony of the power of Jesus to save and to keep. On the wings of song, too, the message of salvation flew into many a poor burdened heart. These open-air services have been accompanied by signs following. The Association has rented the large premises formerly occupied as the Post-office, which are particularly well adapted for evangelistic efforts. The heavy preliminary expenses in taking the building have pressed heavily upon the Association, but the members are working courageously to sweep away arrears. D. Devoir.

SOUTH LONDON.

The South Stockwell and Lambeth branches have lately united in holding a Gospel Mission at the Clapham Skating Rink, now known as the Clapham Conference Hall. It is comfortably seated with 1000 chairs. The Mission commenced Feb. 3, and closed Feb. 17. Messrs. E. J. Kennedy and Stanley P. Smith were the missioners, aided by the secretaries and workers of each branch. A strong force of Mr. Sankey's choir, under the leadership of Mr. Peploe Earl, rendered solos and led the singing. From the first night the hall was well filled. The blessing has not been confined to the irreligious or undecided; many of the members of our branches have had their spiritual life quickened, and a fresh baptism of that Power which alone fits for service.

The bond of union in our Y.M.C.A. was clearly seen, and though the nightly meeting was a great tax upon the time of our workers, yet there were many regrets when it was over.

Letters to the Editor.

WORKING MEN RESORTS IN STRATFORD.

Dear Sir,—Observing with surprise a statement in your paper of Feb. 14 (in which the account of Mr. Moody's meetings in Stratford is given) to the effect "that in all this district the public-house is the only place where a man without a home of his own can spend the leisure hours of the evening," I wrote to a well-known Congregational minister in Stratford to ask if this were so. The following is the reply: "We have a workmen's hall, with library, reading-room, and other arrangements for entertainment and comfort. We have a Mechanics' Institute, with similar arrangements and facilities for comfort, and moreover for instruction also. We have two or three Temperance public-houses. We have in the parish five Good Templars' lodges, and seven juvenile lodges of the same order. We have eleven other Total Abstinence Societies or Bands of Hope connected with nearly all the churches or chapels. There are in connection with nearly all the churches and chapels Young Men's and Literary Societies." After enumerating the many agencies in connection with his own church, which I need not repeat here, he says, "Now although we have not a great central Y.M.C.A., with appliances or arrangements like Exeter Hall, yet I think it cannot be said with any proper regard for truth 'that in all this district there is nothing but the public-house for working men.'" He acknowledges with deep gratitude the great success of Mr. Moody's meetings, and the number of inquirers therefrom, many anxiously wishing to join a Christian Church.—I remain, yours truly,

THE JUDGMENT SEAT OF CHRIST.

Dear Sir,—The very interesting discussion as to the interpretation of 2 Cor. v. 10, which has been going on for some weeks in The Christian, has brought out a marked divergence of opinion as to its meaning. In asking permission to say a word on this subject I cannot but express the reluctance I feel to differ from either of the honoured names which have appeared as taking opposite sides on this question.

2 Cor. v. 10 is a text which one can only hope to understand by the light of its context. If texts in an Epistle could be taken as so many detached statements of truth—such as occur, for example, in the Book of Proverbs—then the popular interpretation, so well advocated by Mr. Gosse, might freely be admitted. The argument then would take this shape. Here is a text which describes the trial of believers before the judgment-seat of Christ, with a result depending upon the character of the actions then brought to light. But we know by texts innumerable that the eternal salvation of every child of God is secured by covenant love and faithful promise. Therefore the results of this trial cannot affect their salvation, but can only affect their loss or gain of superadded reward, which loss or gain must, therefore, be the subject of this passage.

But how does this view accord with the context? But badly, it must be owned. There is a tone of deep solemnity about the Apostle's appeal to the approaching judgment which seems to involve much deeper issues contemplated than mere superadded reward, or the loss of it, at the tribunal spoken of. Even granting that the critics are right in objecting to the word, "the terror of the Lord," &c., as too strong; and taking it only as the word is generally rendered, "the fear of the Lord;" still this appeal to his consciousness of the fear of the Lord suggests more than either gain or forfeit of superadded reward where salvation is taken for granted. I do not wonder, therefore, at Mr. Van Sommer's protest against anything that would weaken the "reverential awe" which such a passage is calculated to produce if allowed to speak with undiluted force to the conscience.

On the other hand, what is the point of this solemn reference to approaching judgment? Those who have read the context, or indeed the whole Epistle carefully, can be at no loss to know. In no other similar writing of the Apostle Paul is there such constant reference, both tacit and expressed, to enemies of the truth amongst those to whom he was writing. "False apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Christ, . . . whose end shall be according to their works." Many allusions point to the fact that there was much false profession at Corinth, and though he might write only to "the Church of God, to them that were sanctified in Christ Jesus," saints by calling, yet it does not follow that he would not allude occasionally—indeed often, in this second Epistle—to those who were not what they seemed, though mixed up in a common profession with the true people of God, to those "who glory in appearance and not in heart," to those to whom he alludes in 2 Cor. xiii. as "reprobates," meaning thereby those who will not stand the test.

He had been charged by these false brethren with dissimulation and corrupt motives. Can we wonder, that after his assertion that his constant ambition or aim was to please Christ, he should appeal to their approaching manifestation before his coming tribunal, the result of which he could anticipate even now as owned of God, and to be owned moreover in the consciences of his converts. This word "be manifested" instead of "appear," is most important, and seems to afford the key to the whole passage. Whether the judgment referred to be the premillennial judgment of separation betwixt sheep and goats, wheat and tares, good fish and bad, or whether it be the post-millennial judgment of the great white throne, seems to me a matter of comparative unimportance, though I confess I think the former one intended. The point is that before Christ's bar we shall all be manifested, brought to the light, shown in our true colours, and that in order "that each may receive the things done through the body (so, I think, most naturally) according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." On this last clause, which is singular not plural, there is a good remark in the "Speaker's Commentary": "Men's actions are not spoken of as a number of items, but their conduct is taken as a whole, 'whether good or evil.'" To which I would add that Matt. xxv. 31 shows that this conduct is not the cause but the evidence leading to acceptance or rejection.

It is, then, in relation to the question of genuineness and reality that he would appeal for them as well as for himself to the approaching bar of Christ, and would even now anticipate for himself a favourable verdict, which he trusts will be ratified in the consciences of his converts. If the question were one of service, as there were, we know, ten more years of his own service still to run, I do not see how he could as yet say, "We are (or have been) made manifest to God and I trust also are made manifest in your consciences;" but, if the question is one of genuineness all is clear. Surely, in the present day, when profession so abounds it is not amiss to allow such a text to have its full force upon the conscience, not to deny the ultimate safety of the true believer, but to keep alive a wholesome fear of self-deception, and to arouse the fears of those who have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof. The very zeal for higher positions in the Kingdom which some would excite may, alas, often co-exist with lamentable self-deception as to having ever entered it at all. The judgment of separation spoken of in Matt. xxv., under the semi-parable of sheep and goats, shows how to the last those on the left hand were self-deceived in their presumption; whilst those on the right—the righteous—were self-diffident in their humility.

May we all anticipate more and more this complete manifestation of what we are before God, to be made in that day, and walk even now in the light of it.—Yours very truly,

Dovercourt. H. E. Brooke.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Dear Sir,—I think this important question has scarcely been placed upon its merits in the few letters which have appeared in your columns.

I am not only ready to admit, with your contributor "G," that the ultimate appeal respecting it must be to Scripture; but I think that if anything can be found in the Word of God enjoining the death penalty upon the present dispensation, it is useless and wrong to consider any other plea for its abolition. I am prepared, therefore, to decide the question entirely by the Word of God.

The words spoken by God to Noah are, as Mr. Noel says, "clear enough." But what justification have we for taking them out of their connection, and thus appropriating to man the vengeance or requisition of blood which the passage—consistently with many others—clearly appropriates to the Lord Himself? The words, Mr. Noel suggests, "cannot be taken as a prophecy; they must, therefore, be a command." This is strange reasoning, and a remarkable inference. Is there no form of speech apart from, or between, a command and a prophecy? Compare, for instance, Prov. xvii. 13, xxi. 13, xxvi. 27; Matt. xxvi. 52; Rev. xiii. 10. Because these are not prophecies, can they be reasonably taken as commands? Surely if we read these words of God's covenant with Noah in their unbroken connection, and in the light which other Scriptures throw upon them, we cannot fail to see that the whole passage is an expression of God's unchanging and providential law, and conveying a solemn and unmistakable warning of divine retribution. This is the view taken by Bishop Ryle, and many other evangelical writers. Compare Gen. xlii. 22; 1 Kings ii. 32; 2 Chron. xxiv. 22; Luke xi. 50.

Besides, if it is a divine command embodied in this covenant with Noah that is the justification for capital punishment in the present day, it must be admitted at once that that command is of a distinctly arbitrary character, and this is just to expose the inconsistency of the "deterrence" and every other argument. If this is a command to Noah, intended to apply to all time, there is no question of deterrence involved in it. It is not a reformatory punishment in any sense, it is a declaration of vengeance or retribution, pure and simple; and if a man is executed in obedience to this command, surely that is all-sufficient. It is quite superfluous and dishonouring to God, then, to plead that he is executed as an example to others; and if a man is condemned in obedience to this command, it is a manifest violation of God's law to reprieve him under any pretext whatever.

The punishment pronounced in the covenant with Noah is the same as that enjoined in greater detail upon the Israelites in a later age; and it is expressed in almost identical language in Numbers xxxv. and other places. The principle of the punishment which, in God's providence, He saw fit to enjoin upon his ancient people, was "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, burning for burning, stripe for stripe." But the teaching of Christ and his apostles was distinctly a contradiction of this. They plainly set forth the contrast between the old law and the new teaching of the Gospel (Matt. v. 21, 22, 38, 39, &c.). Love and mercy and forgiveness; these are the characteristics of the New Testament dispensation, not vengeance and blood shedding.

I know the God of Israel is still our God; and that the moral law contained in the Old Testament is as binding upon us as upon his people of old. It is not the law in its essential obligations, but the law in its effects, and the punishment, which is affected by the revelation of the New Testament. "The law was given by Moses," and the Lord Jesus came "not to destroy, but to fulfil the law," but "grace and truth came by Jesus Christ," likewise.

Under the Levitical law, the punishment of death was enforced for several offences besides murder. And it is to be noticed that God gave Moses his commands very explicitly; not by "whosos," but by "shalts" and "shalt nots." But while we accept the law given to Moses as the essence and perfection of our present moral law, we do not accept the punishments entailed by disobedience to it. And yet it would be quite as right and logical to consider these as binding upon the present generation as anything contained in the covenant with Noah, and thus to hang men for adultery and for dishonouring parents, as well as for murder. For if the teaching of Christianity was intended to be that murder was to be punished with death, and adultery, and theft, and false witness, &c., were not, would St. Paul have put all these offences together, in Romans xiii., in one category? Would he not certainly have put murder distinct, and specially noticed its punishment? And would Christ and his Apostles have said so many times "Thou shalt not kill," and yet never have added, "If you kill you shall be killed"? Would they not certainly have specified the particular punishment?

But the simple fact is, that the whole tenour of the Gospel teaching is entirely inimical to the spirit in which man can be put to death by his fellow-man under any circumstances whatever, and for such as are willing, as Mr. Noel says, to decide this weighty question by the Word of God alone, it surely ought to be sufficient that there is nothing in the New Testament—either in its letter or its spirit—which expressly enjoins capital punishment upon the Christian dispensation.

It seems to me a strange distortion of Scripture which makes St. Paul's declaration that "the ruler who bears the sword is ordained by God for a terror to evil-doers," applicable to the question of capital punishment.

I may just add that if the passage in Genesis ix. is binding as a command upon us, the context absolutely requires us to extend it to animals as well as man.—Yours faithfully, W. P.

Handsworth, Feb. 20.

THE WELCOME, CARDIFF.—Mr. George Lawrence, 179, Sale-road, Cardiff, writes of many cases of great need among the families of men who are waiting in that port for ships. Sometimes they are out of work a long time, on account of the periodical stagnation of the steamship trade. Mr. Lawrence will be glad if friends will enable him to help the many who apply to him for aid.

A ROUMELIAN REFORMER.

A WELL-KNOWN and esteemed member of the Society of Friends, Mr. J. Bevan Braithwaite, of Lincoln's Inn, has recently spent several months in the East, including Turkey, Syria, and Egypt, where he has made the acquaintance of many interesting characters and delivered numerous religious addresses. Since his return to England, one of his friends in Turkey, Mr. J. A. Tonjoroff, a member of the Roumelian Parliament at Philippopolis, has communicated to him some information respecting the religious and general condition of the country, from which we are able to offer the following extracts for our readers. He remarks:—

"There is a general uneasiness among the thinking class of our people, about the religious state of our country. Many declare openly that the national Greek Church is utterly destitute of life, and the people are getting worse and worse. Infidelity, immorality, drunkenness, dishonesty, and all kinds of sins are on the increase. A few days ago the Bishop of Philippopolis died. Only a few days previous to his departure, I had a talk with him upon the deplorable state of the people and urged him to unlock the pulpits of the churches, and to give to the perishing sinners the words of life. He felt the power of my words and said, 'Something must be done, if we wish to save the people;' then he added, 'Unfortuately, I feel myself quite unable.' Poor man, soon after this he went before the Judge of all the earth.

"You have heard, perhaps, that I was chosen last year by all the Protestant communities of East Roumelia to be their deputy in the Provincial Parliament. The Lord has been very good to me, and I have been enabled to introduce into the House some very important questions, such as the reform of the prisons and the exemption of Protestants from the military exercises on Sundays. For more than three years, the Protestant young men, for refusing to perform military exercise on Sundays, have had to undergo imprisonments, fines, and other punishments. I have received and presented petitions to the Permanent Committee asking for relief. The matter was taken into consideration. I hope this great boon for those who wish to keep the Sabbath day holy will soon be granted.

"As to the reform of the prisons, I have also taken action in the House. The Government has promised to make some improvements soon. English people have no idea of the miserable state of prison life in Turkey. I have recently visited some of the prisoners, and finding them anxious for books, I resolved to try and get a small library for them. Yesterday I went on this mission to the largest publishing house in the Bulgarian language. The owner of the house very kindly gave me the list of his books, and asked me to choose those that would be most profitable for the prisoners. I was much encouraged; but, unfortunately, we have not many good books in our language for such reading. Could you kindly procure us some of the wall pictures and publications of the Religious Tract Society, and some other books also? They would be very helpful and welcome to our poor prisoners, and, indeed, to many others besides. We feel a great need in our country for an illustrated periodical, such as the Sunday at Home or Leisure Hour."

If any of our readers would like to contribute towards Mr. Tonjoroff's good works in this direction, Mr. J. A. Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road, Holloway, N., will kindly receive and forward, or apply, any donations sent to him for these objects.

A JEWISH REFORMER IN RUSSIA.—The correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs from Odessa that considerable excitement has been aroused in the Jewish communities of South Russia by the appearance at Kischineff of an energetic Reformer named Joseph Rabinovitch. He declares Christ to have been the real Messiah, supporting his theories by numerous citations from the Bible and the Prophets. Rabinovitch is an enthusiastic and eloquent preacher, and is winning numerous proselytes. He is anathematized generally by the Jewish Press.

Barcelona Protestant Cottage Hospital.

WE extract the following from the annual report of this hospital; copies of the report can be had post-free on application to Miss Mielecka, St. Lawrence Dene, Ventnor, Isle of Wight:—

"Beginning some three years ago with one single room, where our distressed brethren might be tended by a Protestant nurse, rather than left to the pitiless care of priests and nuns in the Roman Catholic hospital, we find ourselves to-day renting a pleasant cottage capable of receiving ten patients, towards whose accommodation six beds are already provided. We have been enabled not only to furnish the cottage, but to secure the services of an efficient trained nurse and an assistant. A qualified Spanish practitioner, who is both surgeon and physician, also attends the patients. Both the head nurse and her assistant are Swiss Christains; they have had a thorough training and considerable experience.

"Not only Spanish Protestants, but English, French, German, and Swedish as well have been nursed in the hospital, reaping benefit both physical and spiritual. A considerable number of patients have been nursed in their own homes, in some cases on the score of economy, and in others on account of their being in too critical a condition to be removed. Many cures that might be considered remarkable have occurred, leading the doctor himself to exclaim, 'Surely God is in this house.' While thankfully availing ourselves of every means God has placed within our reach for the amelioration or healing of disease, we mingle believing prayer with all.

"It would be almost impossible to over-rate the value of such a refuge in popish Spain, where the Protestants lying in her hospitals suffer most seriously, not only in body but in soul. Here, in Barcelona, where there is but one public hospital, and that strictly Roman Catholic, we have seen and known Protestants (both Spanish and foreign) endure things which, if recounted, would excite the strongest feelings in the hearts of all bearing the Protestant name—feelings of sympathy towards the poor sufferers, and feelings of indignation towards those who, instead of ministering to the relief of the body, add rather to its burden, and at the same time sorely harass the spirit."

The report concludes by expressing the hope that funds will be forthcoming not only to maintain the hospital, but to enable the friends to extend a helping hand to the aged and decrepit poor of the Protestants for whom the hospital funds cannot be touched. They do not strictly come under the head of patients, but their case is a very sad one, as their only refuge, if they are without relatives or friends who can help them, is the almshouse, which means a denial of their faith, or endurance of unrelenting persecution.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—For great blessing on the labours of Mr. A. M. Scott and Major Oldham at Dunkeld. ——For increased blessing on a month's Mission by Mr. George Back, at Timberscombe Chapel, Somerset.——For a daily prayer-meeting at Spezia.

PRAYER.—That suitable men may be raised up for the Church Army.——For special services by Mr. Opie Rodway at Ebenezer Chapel, Pontnewynydd, to commence on March 8.——For a Mission to be held at Medstead from March 8 to 16.——For the conversion of souls at Dunedin, N.Z.——For a revival at Campsie, Glasgow.—— For special evangelistic services to be held in connection with the Hexham Y.W.C.A., by Miss Gorham, March 11 to 18.——For an abundant blessing on meetings at Shottermills, Surrey.—— For the troops at Meerut, and Major Walley's labours among them.

Mission Appeals.

Anchor Mission, Dockhead.—This Mission is greatly in need of funds. It is not connected with any place of worship, and is situated in one of the poorest and most neglected parts of Bermondsey. There is a free day-school, ragged-school, and other work in constant operation. The Hon. Superintendent is Mr. H. Wontner, 15, Thorburn-square, Southwark Park-road, London.

Mr. Fegan's Homes.—Mr. Fegan makes an urgent appeal to his friends for £500 to clear off every outstanding claim in connection with his work among the boys. He is very unwell, and is taking rest; help, therefore, just now will be the more helpful. Address, The Boys' Home, 95, Southwark-street, Southwark, S.E.

Christian Colportage Association.—A leaflet, entitled "Stray Leaves," issued by this Society, says: "There are now nearly 100 colporteurs labouring in connection with this Association, and by them about 250,000 homes are visited regularly every month; nearly 150,000 copies of the Word of God, and 3,000,000 Christian books and magazines have been sold by its agents. We are greatly straitened, however, for want of funds. Help is therefore earnestly asked that this important work may be maintained and extended." Mr. W. D. Brown, 37, Farringdon-street, E.C., is Secretary.

St. Luke's Medical Mission.—The Secretary of this Mission, Mr. E. Bastin, has departed this life. The attendance of patients has considerably increased. The Committee hope to further enlarge the work of the Mission, and will be glad of the continued sympathy of those who can help. There is still an outstanding debt of £70. Contributions may be sent to the Treasurer, Mr. G. Gillet, 72, Lombard-street, E.C.

Limehouse Ragged School.—The Committee of this school earnestly appeal for pecuniary help towards meeting a deficit of nearly £10 and prosecuting their labours. The various agencies are doing a good work. Address: Mr. R. H. Garner, 1, Locksley-street, Limehouse, E.

Notices of Books, &c.

A Sermon, preached at Reading by Bishop Perry, on the Church of England doctrine of the Lord's Supper, may be had of Messrs. Hatchards, Piccadilly, price sixpence.

Kitty Parr's Blue-Ribbon Dinner. By S. J. Fitzgerald. 2d. T. Woolmer. A pretty story of how a drunken father became a teetotaller, and was enabled to provide good dinners instead of bad ones.

Poems. By Claud Vincent. 1s. 6d. 1, Aldgate, London. These poems have considerable merit. In some of them there is depth of feeling, and most are deserving of praise. The book might have been got up better.

Handbook to Canada.—An official handbook of information relating to the Dominion of Canada has been published from 9, Victoria Chambers, S.W. It contains a very good map, some illustrations, and much general information.

Welcome is a small tract with an appeal to young women on the most important of subjects. It contains a list of the London Young Womens' Institutes and boarding houses in London, and may be had of Miss Ely, Y.W.C.A., 17, Old Cavendish-street, W., at 4s. 3d. per 100, post free.

Man: Physically, Mentally, and Spiritually Considered. By B. Copson Garratt, 16, Finsbury-square, E.C. The author has here given a number of essays on the relation of natural laws to the restoration and maintenance of health. He inculcates faith in the Great Physician, but endeavours to show the harmony between the use of means and a confident trust in God.

No Natural Law in the Spiritual World. By the Rev. F. J. B. Hooper. Elliot Stock. We do not think this pamphlet will be held to have impaired the value of Professor Drummond's work. Mr. Hooper asks—"Is the Supernatural, natural or unnatural?" It is enough to say that the philosophy which is coming in, and advocated by the ablest minds, repudiates the notion that the natural is to be understood as mechanical, and that a creation from which the Creator has been excluded is a huge contradiction. It objects even to the term supernatural, as used by many persons, and maintains that a true conception of Nature includes what is called the supernatural, i.e., matter and force are the work of God.

Notes for Bible Readings. Partridge & Co., monthly 1d. Contains notes on daily portions, as well as many jottings and miscellaneous readings. A valuable magazine for parents, teachers, and Christians generally.

Church of England Official Year-Book. 3s. S. P. C. K., Northumberland-avenue. This volume, of 700 pages, furnishes a trustworthy account of the condition and work of the Church of England, and all bodies in communion with her throughout the world. It will prove useful to those who require such information.

Stops; or, How to Punctuate. By Paul Allardyce. 1s. T. Fisher Unwin. A veritable multum in parvo. Most persons who have to read letters or manuscripts, to any great extent, will know that the art of punctuation is a very rare and neglected one. If all those who essay to write for the press (and their name is legion) were to "read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest" this comprehensive and excellently conceived handbook, a great burden would be lifted from the shoulders alike of editors, compositors, and proof-readers. The specimen page of printer's proof corrections is not quite exhaustive.

The Great Problem of the Times. By Rev. Edward Smith. 1s. 6d. T. Woolmer. In this neat book form, Mr. Smith, with our hearty consent, has published the papers which originally appeared in these columns as the first prize essay on "The Churches in Relation to Evangelistic Work." As we judged them worthy of such publicity it is scarcely needful for us to do more than commend them, in their permanent shape, to the earnest consideration of all Evangelical Christians. To the twelve chapters of the prize essay Mr. Smith has added an able paper on "Religious Indifference Among the Working Classes." Of this question he takes a discriminating and hopeful view.

On the Difference between Physical and Moral Law. The Fernley Lecture of 1883. By William Arthur. T. Woolmer, 2s. One could wish that the pen of the author of "The Tongue of Fire" had not been employed in combatting the errors and contradictions of the philosophy of doubt, or of Nescience, as some choose to call it. There is, however, need for a warning against statements which have been passed off as scientific explanations, and Mr. Arthur has given that warning with copious illustrations, and very searching logic. The mental artifices of Materialists, and the difficulties of the Positivists, to connect with their system a code of morality, are very ably exposed, and the book will help forward the reaction which is setting in strongly against a false learning, which has been little better than a gigantic imposition.

The Harvest of the City. By "Pearl Fisher." J. F. Shaw & Co. Under this appropriate nom de plume Mr. Thomas Paul, who has been on the literary staff of our contemporary Word and Work since its commencement, occasionally contributes to its pages interesting and realistic sketches of Christian effort in and about London. Nineteen of these sketches are reproduced in a handsomely got-up and well-printed volume. They amply deserve preservation in this form. In addition to a flowing and lucid style of diction, Mr. Paul has the advantage, which some of our popular religious journalists can hardly claim, of fullest sympathy and practical acquaintance with Christian effort in its varied aspects. Readers of the book—and we trust it may have many—will be well instructed as to what is being done for the poor and needy by some of the best-known "workers of to-day;" they will also, we trust, gain a quickened sense of the responsibility that rests on all who love the Lord to help on such practical endeavours for the salvation and elevation of their fellows.

Infidel Objections to the Scriptures Considered and Refuted. By Rev. F. B. Whitmore, B.A. James Nisbet & Co. So far as it goes, this is a valuable book. Although it overlooks the subtle learning of modern sceptics, and does not seem adequately to estimate the influence of the materialistic philosophy which has been ensnaring the young and the working men of our times, it is, nevertheless, calculated to be at once popular and useful. It sets aside with directness and vigour the superficial assertions of modern unbelievers. We can scarcely say that it is "a handbook" to furnish refutations of "the works of Tyndall, Huxley, Spencer, &c.," but it proceeds in this direction, and it will be helpful to those who are brought into contact with infidels who quote these scientists. If the work comes to a second edition, we would recommend the author, while preserving his incisive style, to prune away repetitions which are less suited to the treatise than the sermon. The section at the close of the work—"What becomes of the Infidel leaders?"—deserves to be circulated broadcast.

Magazines Received.—From Messrs. Cassell & Co.: Technical Educator, Garden Flowers, Magazine of Art, History of Protestantism, Book of the Horse.

From Sunday-school Union: Young England.

From Ward, Lock & Co.: Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary Part 35, Universal Instructor Part 45, Woman's Work, Clergyman's Magazine, Preacher's Analyst, Sabbath-school Magazine, Regions Beyond, Churchman's Family Bible Part 5, Wesleyan Sunday-school Magazine, Agriculture, Our Darlings, Free Church Monthly, Friend of Missions, Christian Church, Day of Days, Home Words, Fireside, British Friend, Herald of Peace.

Evangelical Alliance Conference.

THE Conference for 1884 has been fixed to take place at Stockholm, from August 30 to September 7. Many of the Continental branches of the Evangelical Alliance have already commenced active preparations. From Germany, Switzerland, and other European countries, numerous delegations will attend. From Great Britain it is expected a large number of members and friends of the Alliance, in addition to selected speakers, will avail themselves of such an opportunity as the Conference will afford for Christian intercourse and mutual counsel. In Norway and Denmark, as well as in Sweden itself, great interest has been awakened with regard to the proposed meeting, and it is anticipated that the assemblage will be a very large one. The meetings will be conducted in various languages, and many of the addresses will be interpreted for the benefit of the large number of Swedes who will be present. Special arrangements are to be made in regard to hotel accommodation for the visitors, and negotiations are in progress with a view to secure facilities for travelling. The Royal Family, and especially the Queen of Sweden, seemed to be much interested in the proposed Stockholm Conference.

Statements have been made in some of the continental newspapers that the proposed conference has been given up; but this is a misapprehension. It is true that difficulties arose with reference to the formation of a special committee for the conference, but the London Council, at the urgent request of Swedish and other continental friends, have undertaken the onus of making the preliminary arrangements. When the time draws nearer it is expected that a new and influential committee will be formed in Stockholm for the local management of the conference.

It has been stated that none of the leading pastors of the National Church in Sweden will take any part in the proceedings, but we have been informed that letters have been received within the past few weeks, from some of the dignitaries of that church, expressing their willingness to give addresses; the sister church in Denmark will also be represented by some of its influential pastors. The interest that has been awakened leads confidently to the belief, that not only will Evangelical Christians from all parts of Europe attend the conference, but many thousands of the Lord's people in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark will rejoice to have the opportunity of participating in the first assembly of the kind held in a Scandinavian country.

The London office of the Alliance is at 7, Adam-street, Adelphi, W.C.

TEXTS FOR SOLDIERS IN INDIA.—It is now two and a half years since your readers kindly sent me books, pamphlets, &c., for distribution in India. I am glad to say they were kindly received by the soldiers. In many cases through the gift of a volume the heart has been touched, and the soul led to receive the gift of God—eternal life. Several married people say, "Do you never get any illuminated texts? They would make our homes quite cheerful. They are so dear to buy out here, we wish you would bring some." I have decided to start "The Army Text Mission," as there is nothing like God's own Word; and if we can be the means of putting up in the married quarters, prayer-rooms, &c., in every station in India, the voice of God, we may expect great results. I earnestly appeal to you to aid me in this work. Will friends kindly remember the Mission in prayer? Texts should be sent out, not framed; we will frame them out here.—Yours faithfully in Him,

Charles C. B. White,
Army Scripture Reader.

IRISH CHURCH MISSIONS.

The remarkable success of the Missions in the

CITY OF DUBLIN

Encourages the Committee most earnestly to appeal for liberal contributions to the funds of this Society.

Peculiar facilities now exist for carrying on similar Gospel work in

SIX OTHER CITIES,

To which the Committee have been most earnestly invited, and where multitudes may be found willing to hear the Word of Life.

Special contributions are most earnestly requested for this purpose.

The following have been received since the last published acknowledgment:—

Mrs. Postlethwaite	10	0	0

Cheques and P. O. Orders to be made payable to W. Pasley, 11, Buckingham-street, Strand, London.

HORACE W. TOWNSEND,
Clerical Secretary.

THE HIGHER CHRISTIAN LIFE.

A

Two Days' Conference

WILL (D.V.) BE HELD IN THE

St. Andrew's Hall, Newman Street,

AT 11 A.M., 2.30 AND 6.30 P.M. EACH DAY.

The following are expected to take part in the Conference:—

Rev. E. W. Moore, M.A.	Mrs. Booth.
Rev. A. C. Ryder, M.A.	Mr. and Mrs. W. Bramwell Booth.
Rev. J. A. Jacob, M.A.	Miss E. M. Booth.
Pasteur Vernier.	Commr. and Mrs. Railton.
Mr. & Mrs. Haig Miller.	Dr. Wood Smyth.
Mrs. Armitage.	Major Howard.
Dr. & Mrs. Heywood Smith	Mrs. Somerton.
Col. and Mrs. Pepper.

Major Edmonds, and others.

You are earnestly invited to attend, and to bring your Friends.

Admission to the Conference by Ticket only, which may be had free.

Friends wishing extra Tickets or Circulars, or both, for the Conference, for themselves, or sent direct to their friends, are requested to send names and addresses, when they will be forwarded immediately.

For other particulars of Meetings, and Tickets, apply to Major Edmonds, 101, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

Please pray earnestly for much blessing on these meetings.

A CRY FOR HELP FROM THE EAST END.

The Workers of the East London Tract Society and Christian Union are in great need of a LARGER HALL near the principal Docks of London, and FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED for same. The workers are engaged amongst the Dock Labourers, Railway Men, Police, Bargemen, Sailors, also amongst the Poor; upwards of 3,500 families are visited weekly, &c., &c.

Sir Arthur Cotton, K.C.S.I., Earl of Shaftesbury, Samuel Morley, Esq., M.P., Lady Hope, and others, could bear testimony to our work.

Cheques and Post Office Orders may be sent to Morgan & Scott, or to the Superintendent, George Fuller, 34, Cawdor-street, Poplar, E.

CHILDREN'S CONVALESCENT HOME,

BROADWATER, WORTHING.

The Committee appeal for funds to open at once a Home for Boys. They wish to resume the existing Home exclusively for Girls. It is desirable to have the Second Home ready by May. Both the Homes will be for the reception of poor children from London courts and alleys. Over 170 children have already derived benefit from the Broadwater Home. Subscriptions marked Children's Convalescent Homes (Aulay Macaulay) may be sent to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, or to Aulay Macaulay, Hon. Sec., Children's Convalescent Home, Broadwater, Worthing.

Children are wanted to start Juvenile Associations in different parts of England.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

"Letter to the Rev. Robert Dawson, Secretary of the London City Mission, on the dismissal, by the Committee of the Mission, of Mr. Samuel Ship, one of its missionaries, apparently as the result of his having recently adopted higher views than he formerly held of the extent of deliverance from sin offered to us in the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." By James Pillans Wilson, Local Superintendent in the Mission.

Any desirous of obtaining a copy of this letter can do so by writing to me at the undernoted address, sending 4d. for the price and postage, or without money if not well able to send it. But my immediate object in this advertisement is to obtain employment for Mr. Ship. For it is surely a reflection on the Church of God that a first-class missionary should remain unemployed only for believing and daring openly to avow his belief that "if we walk in the light . . . the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

Mr. Ship can have the highest testimonials from the Committee and other Officers of the Mission, and other Christian friends, as to his personal Christian character and his devotedness to his work.
J. P. Wilson,
2, Lake-terrace, Wandsworth-common, London, S.W.

EXCELLENT INVESTMENT. — For sale, for £1,800 cash, a Printer's Plant, which cost more than three thousand pounds, and is now in good working order, near Fleet-street, London. Rent £3 a week. The printing of periodicals to the amount of £40 or more every week can be guaranteed with it for at least one year, and if well executed might be continued. Such an opportunity for capitalists seldom presents itself. Any one inexperienced in the business, or unable to attend to it themselves, might invest in this with great advantage, and be guaranteed 8 to 10 per cent per annum for a term of years without risk.—The plant can be seen at any hour by applying to Printer, 2, Ivy-lane, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

WILLIAM WOOD, Confectioner, Victoria-road, Darlington, has received Ten Shillings from one unknown, and freely forgives as God teaches us.

John Wesley:

HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

By JOHN W. KIRTON, LL.D.,

Author of "Happy Homes, and How to make Them."

"There are many lives of Mr. Wesley, and he who writes another must necessarily borrow from Mr. Tyerman's massive work. Dr. Kirton, whom we always associate with 'Buying your own Cherries,' has compiled a shilling book, which is published at the office of The Christian, and contains in a handy form all that the bulk of our people need to know of the great Methodist. The work is very well done; the book is eminently readable, and will be sure to command attention. To stimulate our own friends to get the biography, we give the following anecdotes, which will be new to many."—Sword and Trowel, March, 1884.

"This 'Life of Wesley' is precisely what it is intended to be—an interesting, condensed account of one of England's most popular men, adapted to popular use."
Christian Commonwealth, January 24.

"'The Way to God' is a series of Addresses by D. L. Moody, full of the point and pathos, wit and sense, the fire and force, of this great evangelist. He has the gift of putting the Gospel in a signally clear, fresh, and telling fashion. We do not require to recommend this volume. Its author's name will do that to multitudes. We simply help to make it known."
THE OUTLOOK.

"The Addresses are practical earnest, and affectionate."
EDINBURGH DAILY REVIEW.

"They are intensely Biblical, and direct in appeal."
CHRISTIAN CHRONICLE.

"Full of pathos, point, and power, and cannot fail to be the means of quickening and blessing wherever read."
PRIMITIVE METHODIST.

"Another earnest book from the successful evangelist and preacher, full of all his racy freshness and power, and calculated to be most useful both to readers and preachers. No one can fail, if honestly seeking it, to find the Way of Life who reads with open mind and prayerful heart these winning words. We can imagine no better way of helping the cause of Christ than the wide circulation of these sermons."

NINTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

CASE of MISS JANET BENNETT.

On the 20th of July last year I first received particulars of this case. The usual commencement—neglected cold two years before, followed by weakness, cough, and loss of appetite. The cough was exceedingly violent at the time she wrote me, with great pains in the chest, constant difficulty of breathing, palpitations of the heart and profuse perspirations night and day. The advice I sent was carefully followed, and resulted in complete recovery.

December 17 she writes as follows: "I have to thank you so much for your good advice. The cough of two and a half years' standing, the pains in chest and side, are all gone; my health and strength has not been so good for three years. When I wrote you I did not think I should ever get well. It will give me great pleasure to recommend all sufferers that I can to you.—J. Bennett, 4, West Princes-street, Helensburgh, N.B."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of acquiring the very valuable site from the Marquis of Bute, which is held for a term of ninety-nine years, and the constructing thereon Messrs. Clark & Standfield's Patent Floating Docks for docking ships; as also for the purpose of erecting thereon engineering and other works, and also for the purpose of acquiring and taking over the successful and profitable business of the Dumfries Ship-Repairing and Engineering Company, Limited, now carried on by them at the Bute Docks, Cardiff, and the Plant, Machinery, Stock-in-Trade, and the Effects of the said Company. The accommodation existing at Cardiff for the repairs and docking of ships is insufficient for the requirements of the Port, and with its rapidly increasing trade the want of additional accommodation is being more keenly felt every day.

The situation of the Docks is alongside the Fairway of the Channel, within a distance of 150 yards of the entrances to the Bute Docks, and is by far the most commanding and convenient position of any Dock in the Port, having a depth of water for vessels of the largest draught and tonnage, and insuring the following, amongst other advantages:—The Docks not being inside either of the existing Docks, vessels coming to Cardiff Roads, and having to load at Penarth (or any other Docks that may hereafter be constructed), will find these Docks most conveniently situated, enabling them to have their repairs done without the detention of entering the Bute Docks. Vessels can be lifted, sighted, and put back again into the water so as to catch the same tide in Dock, thus saving time and expense. No other Dock can perform such rapid work. The new Dry Docks will be so well placed that (apart from their perfect appliances, which enable them to surpass any other Dock in Great Britain in rapidity of docking and undocking ships), light vessels will be able to come up the drain, be docked high and dry out of the water before the loaded vessels will be ready to proceed out of the Dock, thus saving in most cases ten or twelve hours. The development of the Port may be seen from the following figures:—In 1870 there were 3,181,843 tons of coal shipped, and in the year ending 1882 there were shipped 6,740,755 tons.

To meet the increased trade of the Port the Marquess of Bute is now constructing a large new Dock, to enter which shipping will be bound to pass the Company's Docks. The value of the existing Properties of this description already working in Cardiff and the neighbourhood may be seen from either of the local papers, but for the benefit of those who may not have the opportunity of reference the following information may be of interest:—

Name of Company.	Nominal Capital.	Shares.	Paid up.	Last Div. per Annum.	Present price of Shares.
	£	£	£	p. ct.	Prem.
Hill's Dry Dock Company, Limited	200000	20	6	10	6 to 7
Mount Stuart Dry Dock Compy., Lim.	120000	50	30	15	24 26
Penarth Slipway Company, Limited	50000	50	50	16	41 43
Cardiff Junction Dry Dock Compy., Lim.	60000	50	40	30	29 31
Bute Dry Dock Company, Limited	175000	50	20	*	2½ 3½

The Directors and their friends, being largely interested in the shipping trade, have taken a considerable stake in the Company, one of the qualifications for the Directorate being the holding of £1,000 Stock or Shares in the Company; and the Directors, by reason of their position, will be able to influence a large amount of work to the new Company. Provisional arrangements with the Directors of the Dumfries Ship-Repairing and Engineering Company, Limited, have already been made (subject to the approval of their shareholders) for taking over that concern, with their Machinery, Goodwill, &c., &c. This Company has paid 15 per cent. per annum since its formation, and the Agreement provides for the purchase being paid for by Shares in the New Company.

The contract time allowed for docking a vessel on the Barrow Floating Dry Dock, similar in construction, by the same Engineers, was three hours, but thirty-five minutes have usually been found sufficient for the actual operation; and the proposed Docks for Cardiff will be correspondingly rapid.

Every shipowner will at once realise the great advantage the proposed Docks offer over all other Graving Docks in being able to raise, sight, and again float a vessel, so that she can be taken into the Loading Dock, all in one tide. The saving of time is one of the most important advantages for shipowners.

A Model of the Docks and of the improved method of shoring can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

A minimum dividend of 5 per cent. per annum on the paid-up capital of the Company is guaranteed until the Dry Docks are completed and handed over, but not exceeding a period of two years.

The Memorandum and Articles of Association and Agreement may be seen at the Offices of the Secretary, Bute Docks, Cardiff; and applications for Prospectus made to the Secretary will receive immediate attention.

MAGNETISM, AN UNIVERSAL LAW.

Nothing can be more patent to the informed student than the fact that Magnetism is not the isolated quality of a solitary substance such as iron, but a general, in fact, an universal law or force pervading all nature, and probably governing all material relations. Electricity is identical with Magnetism; and Magnetism we know is indubitably universal. Amber was anciently supposed to be one of the most Electrical of substances, simply because of the Magnetic qualities developed in it by friction. It is now well known that many substances very dissimilar to amber possess the same Magneto-Electric powers, which the mere act of friction will develop. Indeed, gravitation itself may yet be proved to be the general manifestation of the omni-existent Magnetic force.

Probably the precise and delicate modus operandi of remedial Magnetism will long remain inscrutable, just as it is not possible to analyse the nice and delicate chemical changes by which blood itself becomes transformed into muscle, membrane, bone, secretion, and nerve matter. Magnetic currents, however, pervade the entire system: when they are regulated and efficient the patient is in health; when they become deficient or irregular, the patient is plunged into the midst of disagreeable symptoms. No doubt can remain that much nervous distress either arises from, or is associated with, Magnetic perturbations of the atmosphere, and those disturbances which produce storms will often afford even a healthy man an unwelcome evidence of this truth. It is consequently perfectly natural that Magnetism, externally applied, should produce an internal physiological effect both in man and the lower animals, simply because there is no element or structure in animal organisms which can intercept the free egress and ingress of Magnetic currents at any point or part.

When it is fully known that Magnetic currents are as healthful as pure air, and as indispensable to the life of man; that they are not confined or local forces, but form a general principle, pervading all material things; when it is understood that man himself is truly Magnetic, and is vigorous only so long as the currents within him are efficient and equalised, then the employment of this powerful agent in the cure of disease will become general. A little further consideration of its marvellous effects will show the inquirer that there is no influence in all the known resources of Nature more powerful, more beneficial, or more strangely adapted to human wants; and will convince the sufferer that, of all remedial agents, it is the one which his condition requires.

From the March report of the "Evangelical Mission to Israel" in the Messiah's Witness:—

"We are thankful to say that by the instrumentality and skill of Mr. B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, Mrs. Joseph's health has much improved, and she is able to give her indispensable help in the work. I know that our friends will be pleased to hear that since she is under the voluntary and kind treatment of Mr. Garratt, she is much better in health."

MR. J. IRVING, Boat House, Red Hill, Rockcliffe, Carlisle.

On February 24, 1884, the brother-in-law of the above-named gentleman wrote us as follows:—

"We have had good news of my brother-in-law, Mr. John Irving, of Rockcliffe, Carlisle. When we were there at the beginning of the year the poor man was suffering both by day and night with sciatica; but we hear this morning that he got one of your appliances lately, and is now able to go to work."

On March 1, 1884, Miss Irving writes:—"I am glad to say that since my father adopted your treatment he has been a great deal better; so much so, that he is able to go to work."

Letters commendatory of Mr. Garratt's treatment by Magneto-Electricity have been received from hundreds of persons, in all classes of society. A private list of 850 names as referees can be had on application. Consultation free, personally, or by letter. B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF JESUS THE MESSIAH.

By the Rev. ALFRED EDERSHEIM, M.A. Oxon., D.D., Ph.D., Warburtonian Lecturer at Lincoln's Inn.

Opinions of the Press.

"The distinctive character, and, as we think, the great practical value of this book lie in the collection of what we may call Jewish evidence and illustrations, in the Jewish standpoint from which it is written, and in the Jewish atmosphere with which it is imbued. A Jew by birth, nurtured in the best Jewish learning, and with a large acquaintance with Jewish literature and customs, Dr. Edersheim is a Christian convert and minister, strongly evangelical in his views, and imbued with a devout feeling."—British Quarterly Review.

"We have in these volumes a realistic and copious description of Jewish life in the time of our Lord, as to its social conditions, manners and customs, sects, and religious ideas, such as we have not met with in any other work of its class. . . . . We hail Dr. Edersheim's contribution to the literature of the Life of Christ with devout thankfulness, and give to it our cordial commendation. It is manifestly the work of one who is a master in Israel, and eminently qualified for the task he has performed."—The Christian.

YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN.

JOHN tells us that many at Jerusalem believed on Jesus' name when they saw the miracles which He did; but Jesus did not commit Himself unto them, for He knew all men, and needed not that any should testify of man, for He knew what was in man.

Moses had said that the Lord their God led them those forty years in the wilderness to humble them and to prove them, to know what was in their hearts, whether they would keep his commandments or no. Their history was the exhaustive answer to this inquiry, the continuous revelation of the rebellion of their hearts, until, by Amos, Jehovah said, "I know your manifold transgressions and your mighty sins." But never until the days of Jesus had Jehovah absolutely refused to commit Himself unto them. He had smitten them with blasting and with mildew, sent them into captivity, and dispersed them among the nations. Yet by one of the latest prophets had come the word of the Lord to Israel saying, "According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so My Spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not." But now He had come unto his own possessions, and his own people received Him not. And henceforth it was not to the nation as such that He could commit Himself, but "to as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name: who were born . . . of God."

There was all the difference between those who received HIM and believed on the name of the only begotten Son of God; and those who believed on his name when they saw the miracles which He did.

It was the error of the Jews, as of many in these days also, to suppose that God had made not only a dispensational, but a radical and eternal distinction, between their nation and the rest of the human race. But here it is emphasized that the character and conduct of Israel proved what was in man. And then man and the Jews, the race and the nation, are linked together in Nicodemus, who was "a man of the Pharisees—a ruler of the Jews."

Now that God had known, by proving Israel not only during the forty years in the wilderness, but through the longer periods of the Judges, the Kingdom, the Captivity, and the Dispersion, what was in the most favoured nation, and therefore in the race of man, this representative of both the nation and the race comes by night to Jesus, saying, "Rabbi, we know that Thou art a teacher come from God, for no man can do these miracles that Thou doest except God be with him." He was one of those who believed in his Name when he saw the miracles which He did; not one of those who had received authority and title to become the sons of God, because they had received HIM who was the Life and Light of men—the only begotten Son of God. Nicodemus was a living illustration of the man who, thinking that he knoweth anything, knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.

To him Jesus answered with the second of those seven double verilys which distinguish this Gospel of John: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the KINGDOM OF GOD."

It was for this Kingdom, this Reign, of God, that Israel and the world had been waiting for four thousand years; and thus at the outset of his ministry Jesus reveals this momentous truth, that sin had so reigned unto death that without a new birth, a birth from above, man had no eyes to perceive that kingdom of God and heaven.

Let us pause to observe that this birth from above is no figure of speech, but a most literal and emphatic truth—as literal as the fall, as literal as death, as literal as the resurrection.

The natural man, who understandeth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can know them because they are spiritually discerned, naturally asks, "How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?" No, no, Nicodemus: that would only be to repeat the disastrous story of the past. All that sinful flesh is, or is capable of becoming, has been made manifest, during two thousand years without law, though not without death and judgment; and during two thousand years under law, holy and just and good, which only made the offence abound and sin exceedingly sinful. The new birth must be not only a second birth, but from a different, a higher, a heavenly source; not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a man be born of water and the Spirit [out of water and Spirit] he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God."

The reason why a man cannot see nor enter the Kingdom of God until he is born again is this: he is in a state of being which is darkness and death toward God, out of which he must pass into another state or condition, with a higher order of faculties in harmony with that new sphere. He is of that wicked one, a child of the devil, a child of wrath, and only by an inward and spiritual death and resurrection can he be translated out of the power of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son.

But "as hieroglyphics preceded letters, so parables were more ancient than arguments." And God has created a series of living parables, in all those insects which, first coming to their life as crawling grubs, die out of that condition, lie in their chrysalis tomb, and are born again, the same creatures, yet not the same, out of that death, into a new and higher life. Of all such creatures, the grub of the dragon-fly is, perhaps, the most vivid picture of our natural condition, and of our second birth. Living its first life in a stagnant pool, dead to the bright and beautiful world above, it dies at length out of that low condition, and rises, a glorious winged creature, to bask in the light and warmth of the shining sun.

This is, we believe, what is meant by birth out of water and Spirit, viz., death out of our old condition, resurrection into a new and higher one; death out of the power of darkness, resurrection into the kingdom of God's dear Son.

This death and resurrection are accomplished by means of faith in our Lord Jesus Christ; it is the work of the Holy Spirit, through whose operation we are united to God in Christ; and it is symbolised by baptism, for we are "buried with Him in baptism, wherein also we are risen with Him, through the faith of the operation of God, who raised Him from the dead."

"That which is born out of flesh is flesh; and that which is born out of Spirit is spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." The stream cannot rise higher than its source; and if the fountain be poisoned, the stream will be the same. Flesh became sinful flesh in Eve and Adam, and they could only impart a sinful nature to their posterity. In order that man may enter into the Kingdom of God he must become a new creature; he must be born of the Spirit.

"Ye must be born again." Spoken to any other man recorded to have come into contact with Jesus, these words would not have meant so much. As a man, he represented the race; as a ruler of the Jews, he represented God's peculiar people; as being of the Pharisees, he represented their most cultured society; as the teacher of Israel, he represented the highest religious learning in the world; as a member of the Council, he represented the political wisdom of the chosen nation. Had Jesus said, "Ye must be born again" to Nathanael, the solitary student of Galilee; to the woman at the Samaritan fountain; to the impotent man; to the profligate woman whom they brought to Jesus; to the man born blind; to Martha, Mary, or Lazarus; to Pilate, or to Herod—it would have conveyed with far less breadth and intensity the necessity of a new birth, in order that any of Adam's race may enter into the Kingdom of God.

Nothing could be farther from the thought of a Jew and a Pharisee than such a drastic mode of cleansing as passing through the laver of regeneration. The whole system of Judaism was built upon the ostensible basis of the possibility of purifying the natural man. The Christ's first sign to Israel had been to change the water for outward purifying into the best wine; and now the Jews and even John's disciples are still occupied about purifying, while Jesus is teaching the teacher of Israel that human nature is past purifying, and that the only washing that can cleanse it is the washing of regeneration.

You cannot wash a grub into a dragon-fly, and you cannot wash a sinner into a saint. Baptism does not symbolise washing or purifying, but death and resurrection—in one word, regeneration. Therefore Jesus called the resurrection state, The Regeneration (Matt. xix. 28). The right understanding of Baptismal Regeneration (not the figure, but the fact) would set a great many other wrong things right. M.

IS SIN UPROOTED?

THE Committee of the London City Mission have dismissed one of their missionaries, who has avowed the doctrine and his own experience of complete deliverance from sin. A letter has been written by a brother, long known, highly esteemed, and well beloved by us, defending the missionary, expounding his position, and professing the same views and experience.

He is a member of the Church of England, and prays according to its Collects, "Grant that this day we fall into no sin." Then he argues, "Believing this prayer to be entirely Scriptural, I feel it to be at once my duty and my great privilege to apply to it the words of our Lord: 'What things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them;' and also the words of St. John:—

"'This is the confidence that we have in Him, that if we ask anything according to his will, He heareth us: and if we know that He hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of Him.'

"And thus believing, according to that command of our Lord, that as I pray that prayer, I receive what I ask in it, I cannot doubt that God does as a matter of fact grant me that I that day fall into no sin. And so for the next day, and the day after that, and so on for any number of days."

The same reasoning is applied to the thoughts of the heart, and is continued in the following manner. A questioner asks the leader of a meeting:—

"Then you profess to be able truly to take into your mouth the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, 'The prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in Me?' To which the unhesitating answer was, 'Yes, I do.'"

On which our friend asks:—

"Is there any reason to be shocked at this? Was not the Son of God manifested for this purpose, that He might destroy the works of the devil? And where are the worst works of the devil, but within us? Are not all his outward works only the fruit of what he has wrought there? ('From within, out of the heart of man, proceed,' &c.) And has not our Lord fulfilled that purpose for which He was manifested? Has He not Himself declared this by his words to the Father in the hearing of the disciples the evening before his crucifixion, 'I have glorified Thee on the earth, I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do;' and by his words on the Cross, 'It is finished'?

"And if He has thus, as a matter of fact, destroyed the works of the devil; and if nothing is wanting—the rule in his kingdom always being 'according to your faith be it unto you'—but faith on my part to bring me into the benefit of what He has thus done; how can I, if by his grace exercising this faith, doubt that the works of the devil are destroyed in me? and therefore how could I, if that question were put to me, and I were required to give a simple answer, 'Yes' or 'No,' to it, do otherwise than give that same one, 'Yes?'"

Now it seems to us that the whole basis of this reasoning is unsound. The assurance we have that we are children of God, and of any further participation in the blessings of the Gospel, is not based upon or attained by any such process of reasoning as the above, but by the witness of the Spirit with our spirit. We never find the Apostles claiming, or professing, or teaching others to claim or to profess, that the prince of this world cometh and hath nothing in them. On the contrary, Paul says that lest he should be exalted above measure, there was given him a thorn in the flesh. But if Satan had nothing in him, the Apostle was in no danger of being puffed up, and did not need such a painful means of grace. James says that "in many things we all offend." And John: "If we say that we have not sinned, we make Him a liar, and his word is not in us."

We do not object to the teaching referred to that it inculcates too high, but too low, a view of deliverance from sin. Our friend contends that we are to believe that God fulfils his promises of deliverance from all sin, not only known but unknown to us, even "to the extent of His knowledge of sin, not merely of ours." But then follows this remarkable modification:—

"Though, of course, this belief is consistent with any amount of ignorance, if not wilful, and infirmity, and error in judgment, and mistake in practice, and all other consequences of our weak state through our fall from Him; but none of which things have anything in them of the nature of sin, if only they are such as are consistent with loving Him with all our heart and mind and soul and strength; poor and weak though that strength may be. For 'if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath and not according to that he hath not."

"INFIRMITIES NOT SINS.

"This point of the consistency of much that is very defective with entire freedom from sinning, I feel to be most important."

We find in Scripture no such distinction as this between sin and infirmity; nor any direction as to where to draw the line between ignorance, wilful and otherwise, or how to distinguish between sinful and sinless error in judgment, and mistake in practice. Our view of sin is that it is a missing of the mark. Or, again, that "all unrighteousness is sin." Now righteousness is not a variable quantity; it is a straight line, and every deviation from that straight line is sin. Is a young convert, is any Christian, able to define the limit where error in judgment, or mistake in practice, begins or ceases to have anything in it of the nature of sin? Is not this the way to make casuists rather than Christians? Is it not safer and happier to confess the sinfulness which there must be in our every action, while in this body of our humiliation, to confess our errors and mistakes as sins, and to know that "He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness"? It is surely better to confess too much than too little.

SOUTH WINDS AND SMOOTH SEAS.

By THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D.

THE narrative of Paul's voyage to Rome is fruitful in spiritual lessons. The contrast between that ship sailing out with a south wind and a smooth sea, and the same vessel rent with the hurricane, affords a vivid parable of human life. Fair appearances are not always to be trusted. Is there not many a business man who has been tempted by the promise of great profits into a great spread of canvas, which a sudden gale has swept from the spars and left under the "bare poles" of bankruptcy? These are the days of rash ventures in business with sanguine hopes of sudden wealth; "slow, safe, and sure" is the wiser motto. And how many a young pair have I seen float out into wedlock, while the warm wind of fair promise blew softly; nobody foresaw the tempests ahead; nor would their bark have ever foundered if the old-fashioned true love and trust in God had "undergirded the ship." Married life is not all smooth sailing; the head winds which Providence sends can be weathered out; it is the rough weather of your own making which wrecks home and hearts.

Sin, ever since its first entrance into this world, has owed its chief power to the fact that it presents its allurements and conceals consequences. Satan, in the Garden of Eden, promised only south winds and smooth seas. "The serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die; ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." So, when the woman saw the tree pleasant to the eyes and taste, and to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof and did eat. So has it ever been from that hour to this; the power of sin lies in its deceitfulness. When I was in the Orient, I saw a most attractive tree laden with blossoms of a delicate lilac tint. The beauty of the flowers attracts insects, and bees are drawn to them to gather honey. But from the blossoms the insects extract a fatal poison, and often drop dead under the branches. It is called the Judas tree, and is a vivid emblem of the deceitfulness of sin. For sin always has two aspects; the one is that which she assumes before the deed is done, the other is that which she puts on after she has ensnared her dupe and is administering the retribution. She approaches with her allurements as Jael came to Sisera, bringing "butter in a lordly dish"; but the hammer and the nails she keeps out of sight until her victim is fast asleep in her power. The wages of sin are paid promptly; they are death.

The danger with every unconverted person who reads these lines lies in this very direction. Because you see now only a smooth sea, and hear only the siren song, "There is no danger," you feel no alarm. Because God spares you and mercies are around you, and no retribution visible, you shut your eyes to the fact that God is just, and will yet punish sin and the rejection of his grace with a tremendous penalty. You do not see yet what lies behind and beyond the "Cape Matala" of the Day of Judgment. The captain of that corn-ship would not believe that there was anything ahead but fair winds and a prosperous voyage to Rome. He would not heed Paul's warning. After the tempest had burst forth in its fury, and no sun or stars appeared for many days, Paul reminded him: "Ye ought to have harkened unto me, and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gotten this injury and loss." Then it was too late. And so may you find it if you presume on the smooth seas of God's present forbearance and shut your eyes to the sure and inevitable punishment that awaits every life of impenitence.

I write in this strain from the promptings of love. There is a temptation which besets both pulpit and pen and tongue to "prophesy smooth things" and shirk unpopular truths. Paul did not make himself popular on that corn-ship by predicting storm and opposing a venture before a treacherous south wind. Yet before the gale was over he was the most trusted and respected man on board. There is a theology of south wind and smooth sea that is becoming very current, and it "takes" prodigiously in these days. It suits human nature exceedingly. It sets a low estimate on the exceeding sinfulness of sin and its desert of retribution. It treats very gingerly the primitive justice of God. It hoists no storm-signals in the direction whither so many souls are heading; it practically ignores Hell! Even if the voyage here be with some "loss of lading," it holds out the hope of a possible second probation in the unseen world.

However seductive or popular this un-Pauline theology may be, I do not discover it on God's charts, or in his weather-tables. If I deceive a soul with any such delusions, may not God hold me to a fearful account? Love demands fidelity. However smooth the sea, and however fair the wind before any and every soul yet out of Christ, let such soul be lovingly warned that the voyage will be with terrible loss, both to lading and to life! In the penitent acceptance of Jesus Christ is the only absolute, complete, perfect and everlasting salvation. Run no risks when your soul is at stake.—New York Independent.

Times of Refreshing in Victoria.

HAVING lately become a subscriber to your paper I have read therein with pleasure notices of the progress of God's cause in different places. It occurred to me that some reference to the work of Rev. John MacNeil in this colony may, by God's blessing, prove of service. Mr. MacNeil is known to many at "home" as a devoted follower of the Lord Jesus, having been successfully working for several years in and around Edinburgh. Since his arrival in this colony over three years ago he has been unremitting in his efforts to serve the Master, holding meetings night after night for months in succession, with brief intervals of rest now and then.

Having had a good deal of experience of Mr. MacNeil's work, I am in a position to speak of its beneficial nature and results. In the end of September, in compliance with an urgent solicitation, Mr. MacNeil began operations in the city of Ballarat, the next city in importance to Victoria after Melbourne. Two years before, the evangelist had laboured in the same city with gratifying success. Many Christians were anticipating a great blessing from this visit, and results fully justified expectations. As the result of the fortnight's work two hundred inquirers sought direction. But since the close of the services a number of other inquirers have been heard of. Over one hundred and fifty professed faith in Christ.

Some very interesting cases occurred. One instance might specially be mentioned. A young man who had been for some time in the interior of a neighbouring colony, away from religious ordinances, attended the services from the first, and soon intimated his desire to find Christ. Ere long the way of salvation was plainly seen, and the young man made a bold stand as a Christian. At the close of the services he intimated publicly that he had only known the Saviour for a fortnight, but had in that period enjoyed the happiness of years. But the cross had to be taken up and borne. It appeared that not long before the young convert had left his employer through some misunderstanding, and now his conscience accused him of having acted improperly. At once he wrote a humble apology, and returned thanks at the meeting for having been enabled so to do. He likewise wrote to a fellow-employé, who had left with him, saying how guilty he had been, and what regret he now felt because of his misconduct. His former employer, on receipt of the apology, intimated his full and frank forgiveness of the young convert. Since his conversion our young brother has been engaged earnestly for the Master.

In some cases conviction was very deep. One young woman—a backslider—heard the evangelist repeating solemnly, and in a voice peculiar to himself, the words "Lost, lost, lost!" These words struck terror into the young girl's heart, and soon she was found rejoicing in Christ. Being engaged in a large Institution where others were employed, her changed conduct excited notice and comment. The result has been that three of her fellow-employées have since received Christ. At a large Ladies' College in the city, where a number had previously been under deep concern, and some were rejoicing in Christ, others had not made the great decision, but after Mr. MacNeil's visit almost everyone attending as a boarder professed to have embraced the Saviour. Instances of backsliders being reclaimed, whole households roused, careless souls arrested, and Christians having been refreshed and reinvigorated, are numerous in the city. Bible-readings in the afternoons, conducted by the evangelist, are largely attended, and have proved seasons of refreshing.

After this fortnight's Mission the evangelist conducted services at Mooroopna and Shepparton, a township over 100 miles from Melbourne, As the result of a fortnight's work there were 70 persons who received inquirers' tickets. The next place visited was Buninyong, a pleasantly situated township about seven miles from Ballarat. In the surrounding district also services were held. Here there were 90 inquirers. Learmouth was next visited, and a very gracious work was the result; 70 were found seeking the way of life. A small township named Skipton was the next place where the evangelist laboured, and 55 souls were under concern. Rokewood and vicinity were then visited, and 115 souls were dealt with. All of these places are within a few miles of Ballarat, and are thinly populated, and each has experienced a gracious visitation from the presence and power of the Spirit.

Prior to this tour Mr. MacNeil was labouring for a fortnight at Warrnambool, a sea-coast town of some importance in the Western District of Victoria. Here 150 persons were found as seekers after salvation. A large mining centre named Stawell, in the North-western District, had also the benefit of Mr. MacNeil's abundant and successful labours, and 200 souls were awakened. The Pastor of the Presbyterian Church in the Stawell gave some interesting particulars of the work of God in his parish at the last meeting of the General Assembly, and stated that his own soul had been refreshed, his family had been blessed, his flock quickened, and the progress of the Gospel had been greatly promoted by Mr. MacNeil's visit.

The evangelist is now recruiting at the sea-coast, and many are desirous of enlisting his services when he again begins his tour of evangelisation in the cause of the Master to whom he is so much attached, and by whom he is so greatly loved. We ask the prayers of Britain's faithful Christian men and women on behalf of our beloved Master's work in these far-off highly favoured lands, and specially for our devoted brother who labours so abundantly in the Gospel.

Intemperance among American Women.

ACCORDING to a New York newspaper correspondent, who writes of the Home for Intemperate Women in that city, there is in certain circles a great deal of both drinking and drunkenness among women in New York. It is affirmed that "in the gay, fashionable society, women who are termed 'ladies' imbibe freely of intoxicants;" that "even in circles nominally religious an immense amount of wines and liquors is consumed at social entertainments;" and that "ladies moving in our highest circles, some of them members of our churches, and generally believed to be examples of rectitude," have been carried to the Home inebriated.

"Mrs. Blank, of Madison Avenue," the writer says, "is supposed to be at Point Comfort or at Atlantic City, while she is really at the Woman-drunkard's Home, in East Fifty-seventh-street. She returns to her splendid house, and her friends remark how her journey has improved her personal appearance." They are locked within the Home, necessarily, when under treatment, and it is stated that "the friends of the patients in every way try to hide their identity—fictitious names being given, &c. —but the truth is sure to leak out in some way, although the doctor tries to keep these painful secrets faithfully." "Delirium tremens in its hideous details," says this correspondent, "is not a stranger in many a grand mansion in New York, and, alas! the victim is not always one of the sterner sex, but some cultured, petted, pretty woman."

This is not at all a pleasant picture, and it is possible that it may have been overdrawn; but there is, however, too much reason to fear that it is substantially accurate, and that the case might be even more distressing if the truth were fully told. A "woman's crusade," supported and aided by good men, especially by the pastors of uptown, popular churches, which should work effectually to rescue and protect the women of what is called "good society" in this city from the toils and perils of the drink temptation, would be indeed a great blessing.—National Temperance Advocate.

LODGING-HOUSE WORK.—Mr. H. Putterill, 94, Frederick-street, Caledonian-road, N., would be glad of help in giving free breakfasts to poor children and the inmates of lodging-houses, on Sunday mornings. The Gospel is preached to them, and a good work is regularly going on among the poor and outcast found in such places.

For the Young.

"Love One Another."

A LITTLE girl with a happy look,
Sat slowly reading a ponderous book,
All bound with velvet, and edged with gold,
And its weight was more than the child could hold;
Yet dearly she loved to ponder it o'er,
And every day she prized it more:
For it said—and she looked at her smiling mother—
It said, "Little children, love one another."

She thought it was beautiful in the book,
And the lesson home to her heart she took;
She walked on her way with a trusting grace,
And a dove-like look in her meek young face,
Which said, just as plain as words could say,
"The Holy Bible I must obey;
So, mamma, I'll be kind to my darling brother,
For little children must love each other."

"I'm sorry he's naughty, and will not play;
But I'll love him still, for I think the way
To make him gentle and kind to me
Will be better shown if I let him see
I strive to do what I think is right;
And thus when I kneel in prayer to-night,
I will clasp my hands around my brother,
And say, 'Little children, love one another.'"

The little girl did as her Bible taught,
And pleasant indeed was the change it wrought;
For the boy looked up in glad surprise,
To meet the light of her loving eyes;
His heart was full, he could not speak,
But he pressed a kiss on his sister's cheek;
And God looked down on that happy mother
Whose little children loved each other.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey.

MR. MOODY IN EDINBURGH.

THE short interval between the closing at New Cross and the opening at St. Pancras was fixed that Mr. Moody might visit Edinburgh and preside at the opening of the new building of the Carrubbers-close Mission. The history of this Mission has almost been contemporaneous with the development of evangelistic work in its modern forms. The founders of the Mission claim that the term "evangelistic meeting" was first brought into common use in connection with the work at Carrubbers-close. The Mission was started in 1858, and since August in the following year the Gospel has been declared in or near Carrubbers-close every evening consecutively without intermission, except when alterations or repairs were going on. As far as we know there is no other spot throughout the length and breadth f this wide, wide world of which the same thing can be said.

Reaching the Scottish capital on Tuesday morning, last week, Mr. Moody was in close consultation for an hour with the Committee of the Mission. At noon he presided over the daily prayer-meeting in

THE FREE ASSEMBLY HALL.

The fine building was very well filled, many friends and workers being present from a distance. We were informed, however, that the Edinburgh pastors were poorly represented. After the audience had sung the grand psalm—

"I to the hills will lift mine eyes,
From whence doth come mine aid,"

Dr. Horatius Bonar offered prayer. Mr. Moody gave a short address on "the elder brother" of the parable in Luke xv. This man Mr. Moody regards as a type of those self-righteous people who think they do not need to be regenerated, and who do not rejoice over the salvation of others. In applying the narrative, Mr. Moody said he would rather stand in the shoes of the returning and repentant prodigal than cherish the proud and self-righteous spirit of the elder brother. Such religiousness, without any real spiritual life, and without any of the fruits of the Spirit, is an abomination to God. The true test of a man's religion is the spirit of love for others, and the desire for their salvation that he shows. In some remarks at the close of the meeting, Mr. Moody showed how the elder brother's conduct failed in every respect when compared with the characteristics of those who were described as "blessed" by our Lord, in his sermon on the Mount.

Mr. Moody appeared to be purposely brief, that there might be time for a number of other friends to speak. Accordingly many interesting and suggestive contributions were made to the elucidation of this question. Rev. J. Cunningham said it was a comforting thought that the coldness and lack of sympathy on the part of the elder brother did not prevent the prodigal from coming home. He knew that at any rate he was sure of his father's welcome, and his father's smile, and his father's forgiveness. The elder brother deserves to be pitied, because of the joy he missed; next to the joy of our own salvation, there is no greater joy than that of seeing other lost wanderers returning to the Father's heart and home. As other instances of the spirit shown by the elder brother, the Rev. J. H. Wilson cited from the Old Testament the case of Jonah, who was angry when God spared the repenting people of Ninevah; and the disciples at the well of Sychar, who did not enter into the Master's joy at the restoration of "the prodigal daughter." Another suggestive thought expressed by Mr. Wilson was to the effect that one phase of the elder brother's spirit is seen when people can rejoice over converts brought in through their own instrumentality, but not over those led to Christ by others. The wife of Jonathan Edwards was an honest specimen of such people. She said she had great difficulty in rejoicing over souls converted under the ministry of any one except her husband! The key-note struck by Mr. Moody, Mr. Wilson observed, was a very appropriate one in these days when the bitter cry going up from all our large cities is being so loudly heard. He feared that all the professedly Christian churches were pervaded by much of the spirit of the Scribes and Pharisees of old. Mr. J. M. Scroggie remarked that though there were plenty of people in London at the present time cherishing the spirit of the elder brother, yet many wanderers were coming home. He related a touching incident which the late Henry Moorhouse was wont to tell of a prodigal brother of his own who was gladly welcomed and sheltered by their father, though his other friends deemed him too bad and worthless to expend any love and care upon.

Dr. H. Bonar said he had traced the history of the elder brother back to Cain, the first and most perfect specimen of this type of character. "Am I my brother's keeper?" was the motto on which he acted. I fear, said the Doctor, that there are many such in Edinburgh sitting comfortably at their firesides, and hearing the bitter cry going up without heeding it. "What have I to do with the Grassmarket, the Cowgate, the High-street?" Many of these are not worldly men, but professed Christians, members of churches—I know them—yet standing entirely aloof from all movements for the evangelisation of the people. It is very sad that at a time when such movements as the one at Carrubbers-close are required in all our large cities, there should be Christians who not only draw back themselves, but try to hinder others. Rev. J. Carstairs contrasted the elder brother of the parable with our Elder Brother who came to us from the far country, and entered so deeply into sympathy with us as to bear our sins and sorrows. Another speaker said that the failure on the part of the elder brother began before the return of the prodigal. He did not seem to know that his father was on the look-out for his wandering son, and that he had gone out to meet him when he was yet a great way off. Without playing on words or straining their meaning, we may say that the reason of this ignorance on the part of the elder brother is described in the expression, "he was in the field." If we are not in sympathy with the work of our Father it is because we are in the field, not in the fold. If we are living near to God we will be in fullest sympathy with his yearning over the lost and will say:—

"The arms of love that compassed me
Would all mankind embrace."

OPENING THE NEW MISSION BUILDING.

Carrubbers-close is a narrow, dilapidated looking court abutting on the High-street of the "old town." The room, which for many years past has done duty as the head-quarters of the Mission, is at the bottom of the court. After seeing it, one does not wonder at the new move; it is a marvel that the change has been so long delayed. Thanks in a great measure to the unquenchable zeal of Mr. Moody in securing the generous support of various friends, the cost of the new hall, £11,000, has been met. It stands facing the High-street, about midway between Carrubbers-close and the house that has become famous by its association with that brave Scot who feared not the face of man or woman—John Knox. The facade of the building is of the Corinthian order of architecture; it is at once graceful and solid in appearance. The interior is not yet out of the contractor's hands; indeed, the main hall in which the opening meetings were held have yet to receive many finishing touches. It could easily be seen, however, that there is ample accommodation in the new house for carrying on an extensive and varied work among the dense population that resides within gunshot of the place. The hall is well designed, and has, we believe, a seating capacity of 1500. Probably several hundreds more were packed into it, both afternoon and evening on Tuesday week, many, if not most of them, were drawn thither doubtless by the name and fame of the renowned evangelist.

After a congregational hymn, the reading of appropriate Scriptures, and fervent prayer, offered by Rev. Dr. Macdonald, of Leith, Mrs. Hall, of Glasgow, sang very sweetly and expressively of "that beautiful city," where "the inhabitants never grow old." Then Mr. Moody called on Rev. Dr. Andrew Thomson to speak to the first resolution. The Doctor, it may be said, is a trustee of the Mission, representing the United Presbyterian Church, one of the three branches of the Scottish Presbyterian Family.

It strikes me, said Dr. Thomson, as a remarkable conjunction of Providence, that just when our old premises had become too circumscribed for our work, and consequently the progress of our labours had been arrested, our beloved evangelist [Mr. Moody] should once more have come upon the scene. With his fresh eye and shrewd discrimination, he at once saw the necessity for action, and giving it an impulse, set himself to raise the not insignificant sum necessary for the erection of this building. Having paid a warm tribute to the good service rendered by Rev. James Gall, the founder of the Mission, through its history of a quarter of a century, Dr. Thompson set forth the distinctive principles on which the past work had been carried on. These were in brief: (1) the duty of every Christian man and woman to be a worker; (2) that the service of these workers should be rendered gratuitously; (3) that the Mission should not be constituted into a church, or have any denominational colouring, but should simply be an evangelistic agency and a feeder of all the churches. Dr. Thomson said he could testify from an experience of those converts who had joined his church that they made very useful members. He referred in strong and feeling terms to the great services that had been rendered to the Mission by the late Mr. Jenkinson, who is now succeeded in the superintendence of the Mission by Mr. Robertson. The converts of the Mission are now scattered over the world, and many of them have been used of God to the salvation of others. Dr. Thomson closed his interesting statement by moving a resolution calling for thanksgiving to God for past tokens of his favour in connection with the Mission.

This was seconded in a hearty speech from Rev. Geo. Wilson, as representing the Established Church of Scotland. Other resolutions were presented, commending the work to the present and future support of Christians of all denominations; these were supported by Dr. Horatius Bonar, Mr. Brown Douglas, Professor Rainy, and Lord Polwarth. Dr. Bonar said he was sometimes afraid when, in a Mission, a new start such as this came in upon an old history. A work with small beginnings was often wonderfully blessed, but when it prospered and got "up in the world," the blessing did not always follow in proportion. He did not, of course, anticipate such a result in this case. In pressing the claims of the Mission on the Christian congregations of Edinburgh, Dr. Bonar said it seemed to him as though, in these last days, we were now in the position of the people to whom Jonah was sent with the message, "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown." He did not say this to discourage but rather to stimulate the workers to greater faithfulness and diligence. Professor Rainy said this Mission seemed to him a very happy embodiment of the practical agreement of the evangelical churches, not merely in truth, but in practical work. It also affords a good example, and perhaps a rebuke, to the churches, which all need to learn the lesson that each ought to do its own work for the salvation of the sunken masses. If the Scotch churches have anything about them which unfits them, or makes them less fit for doing evangelistic work, then they must just be reformed. When Mr. Moody comes to labour in this country he very rightly keeps himself clear of all church distinctions, but that does not absolve the churches, if they stand by and do nothing. Each must turn to and do its own work with all its might.

Address by Mr. Moody.

Coming up on the train from the South this morning, I jotted down a few of the things that I should do if I were going to work at Carrubbers-close, and had my own way; committees sometimes sit on you. First of all I would have the place open from 10 in the morning to 10 at night, every day. If there are some men who have no homes in which to pray, let them come here and pray; we can learn something from our Roman Catholic friends in this respect. If you are afraid that someone will steal the Bible, chain it to the desk as they did in the olden time. Have the rooms kept warm and cheerful. You cannot do all this without money. I do not believe you are going to run this Mission on air. You have been going on without any paid workers, but you must have a janitor for the building in order to keep it clean, and therefore your constitution in that particular is broken down, is it not? Then you must have a superintendent to keep the work going. Your janitor must be a man who will make everything pleasant and smooth for the people; above all he ought to be one who will all the time be watching for souls. As I have said, you ought to use the place morning, noon, and night. There are many godly people who could come here and have different classes at certain hours during the day. If the meetings get into ruts, and you find the people do not come to a Gospel service every night, have a song service now and then. That will be much better than allowing them to go to the public-house and get drunk, and go home to beat their wives. This place, it seems to me, ought to be a sort of half-way house between the degraded masses and the churches. When I think of the many prayers that went up from John Knox right near here, I feel as if they ought now to be answered. Why should there not be a grand work of grace bursting out here? There are a great many Christians "pot-bound," like a plant confined in a small pot where it has not room to grow. Many think that because a thing has been done in a certain way for the last fifty years it must always be done in that way. We must get at the masses in some way, but I am convinced that we are not going to reach them wholesale. We must have individual effort, seeking to win them one by one. Have Temperance meetings. Go in for the blue ribbon, or the pledge, or anything that will get hold of the people. Neither the pledge nor the blue ribbon will save a drinking man, but it is a great thing to get these people out and have their names and addresses taken. Then you can visit them in their homes next morning and pray with them and tell them of the Saviour. Some of you may say that if you go at the people in this way you will be encroaching on the field occupied by some one else. It seems to me that nothing will wake a man up much quicker than to have people from four or five churches after him in one day. At any rate, get at them some way. Get a coffee-palace in the front of the building, and give the people the best cup of coffee to be found in all Scotland. These coffee-palaces have been a great success in Liverpool; why should they not be so here? We have got to fight this whisky devil; and how you can do it better than by providing the people with good wholesome drink, I do not know.

Now, as I said before, let the place be open right along all the while. If you know of any young men or young women with a turn for work, let them come and help. Let them be encouraged to take some class in the Sabbath school. Let someone take, say, five or ten street Arabs, link himself right to them, and say, "This is my work." If he were to do this, how long would it be before he would win every one of them to the Saviour? I know of a young lady of twenty in London who made up her mind she would reach some of the rough boys in her district. In a few months' time she had got a class of about fifteen or twenty boys. Some of them are already trusting in the Saviour. She has won their affections, and the whole class is just like clay in her hands. Probably you may find in these dark alleys some of the brightest jewels in Edinburgh, but you will have to go and search for them. Who knows but you may discover and bring to light another John Knox, or a Wesley, or a Whitefield, or a Newton. Then I do not see why adults should not come in here and be taught the Word of God. It would be a grand thing to have the gallery filled with classes for adults. It is harder to get the people together in Chicago than in Edinburgh, but for the last twenty years there has been a Mission there, where 1,400 adults come every Sunday afternoon to study the Word of God. Inside of a few months you might have 1,500 in this building every Sunday afternoon, and in the evening a good live evangelistic meeting. If this were to go on right along, year after year, this spot would become the birthplace of many souls. We generally get what we aim for, and if we work for souls and live for souls, God will give them.

Then you want to have mothers' meetings here. In order to that, you must get some of your godly mothers to come and work among them. A few of them can do more to reach the poor mothers in this district than all the ministers put together. Let the mothers bring the babes with them; never mind if the babes cry a little; it won't do anybody any harm. It would be a good thing if the Christian women would go and take care of these babes now and then, so as to allow their mothers to go out to the meeting. You must lay your life right alongside of theirs, and sympathise with them, if you wish to reach them effectually. I would have a register kept of every family that did not go to church within two miles of this hall. I would send them all a post-card now and then inviting them to the meeting. Depend upon it, many of them would feel highly honoured to receive such an invitation. If any distinguished persons visit the city for the General Assembly, or at any other time, I would ask them to come down here and preach. I see a number of men from Glasgow here; I would invite some of the friends in that city, and other places, to come and preach occasionally, so as to preserve the freshness of the meetings. There are the Bible pictures and scenes from the "Pilgrim's Progress," shown by lime-light, that many of you have heard of. Why not have the Gospel preached and illustrated with these pictures? Have Missions for children, and invite the waifs from the street to come and have a pleasant time looking at these pictures on the wall. In these different ways you can have the place occupied all the time. Perhaps there is no darker place in Glasgow than the Cowcaddens. When we were having services in that city, the district was so bad that the drunken men and women could be seen leaning up against the Free Church. You might have fired a shot right through the church itself and not hurt anyone, it was so poorly attended. For twenty-three months there have been Gospel meetings there every night, and there is now a pastor to the church in full sympathy with the work. He wrote to me that, since Oct. 1, 218 new members have been admitted into the church. If that can be done in one church, certainly great things ought to be done in this Mission, where all the different tribes of the Lord's host are visited and banded together. What I should like to see here is a sort of Edinburgh Mildmay. In connection with the London Mildmay, there are between 90 and 100 godly women going into the darkest parts of London, and getting access to homes that no one else could reach. Great multitudes are having the Gospel carried to them, and many are brought to Christ. Why should there not be the same thing in Edinburgh? Then there ought to be meetings for soldiers and for policemen. Let some of the workers give up their lives to one particular branch of work. Let us pray that God may bless every effort put forth in this building.

In the evening the hall was crammed with a deeply-interested audience, to whom Mr. Moody preached in his most earnest vein from the words, "Come unto Me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." At the close, according to his wont, he called for public confession of Christ, and was rewarded with a goodly number of "I will's" from the crowded congregation. So the first Gospel meeting in the new hall of the Mission was, we may trust, the occasion of not a few soul decisions. The excellent choir sang with great spirit some of the pieces in The Christian Choir, and Mr. Moody had ample opportunity for the display of his skill in drilling the congregation into familiarity with the choruses.

The friends at Carrubbers-close, with their new and well-appointed building in the very centre of the unchurched masses of the city, have a grand opportunity before them; may they have the wisdom and the grace to make the most of it!

MIDLAND TERMINUS HALL, ST. PANCRAS.

If one may use a legal phrase, in speaking of a wonderful work of grace, the venue of the evangelists' labours is now in the very heart of London. No more central spot can be found in the whole length and breadth of the metropolis than that where the iron tabernacle now stands, hard by the Great Midland Terminus. It is close to a vast industrial population. It is almost within gunshot of the fashionable squares of the region of Bloomsbury. It is planted between the terminus of the North Western trunk line of rail on one side, and the termini of the Midland and Great Northern lines on the other. It is contiguous to the Metropolitan Railway, which sweeps around the city in several circles. It abuts on the Euston-road—one of the main thoroughfares of central and Northern London. The site was quickly "spotted," and coveted by the Committee when the visit of the evangelists to London was fixed upon. Difficulties, however, arose, and at one time it looked as though it could not be had. In the good ordering of God these were, however, smoothed away, and the kind co-operation of the Midland Railway authorities secured. We trust that in return a rich blessing will rest upon many of their servants, of all grades and classes, who alone we suppose would form a goodly congregation.

The hall has already become a fountain of blessing to not a few, though, when these lines are written, only four days of the Mission have come and gone. If it should serve any good purpose we would not cease to bemoan the fact that the hall, on its present unique site, will only be in use for two weeks and a half. We would that its doors were to swing open day after day for two years and a half. Then there would be hope of indelibly impressing the immense, throbbing mass of humanity that lies around. But it is useless to repine at the inevitable, and we can only pray that the stream of spiritual life that has begun to circulate around the hall may not stop when the building disappears and the evangelists have passed elsewhere.

The very first meeting yielded its rich clusters of ripe fruit—token of the goodly harvest to follow. That was on Wednesday evening, when the hall was as full as full could be, and an overflow was drafted to the Presbyterian Church in Goldington-crescent. The key-note of the St. Pancras Mission, and indeed of all the Missions of our beloved evangelists, was struck when on this opening night Mr. Sankey sang most clearly, in rich, full, sympathetic tones, that Gospel invitation which "has come ringing down the ages," and will not cease to ring till the last wanderer has returned to his Father's heart and home:—

"Weary, heavy laden, come, oh come to Me."

Who would not covet the high privilege possessed by Mr. Sankey of sounding out "the music of the Gospel" in such a way that it is wafted, not only to the outward but the inner ear of thousands? We praise not the singer, but we cease not to praise the Lord for enabling and inclining him to consecrate his marvellous gift. Would that all the great and rarely tuned voices up and down the world were dedicated to such high and glorious ends.

Mr. Moody's opening message was a comprehensive and pointed one—"Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and

He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." "Every bullet has its billet," is a grimly realistic proverb in the sad and terrible province of the battlefield, as recent events have too truly shown. In the warfare of the Christian it is also blessedly true. That Mr. Moody's shots on this evening hit many a mark was demonstrated in the second meeting, when at least 150 men and women stood up, and thus confessed that they were wounded. Whether all were thoroughly slain, and made a live again, it is not for us or for any one to say. If not, they will not be able to plead ignorance as an excuse; on the skirts of the evangelists their blood cannot rest.

So for the rest of the working week the stream of song and of speech, and, we trust, of fruitfulness, has flowed on. Mr. Scroggie has taken the overflows at Goldington-crescent, and in his own earnest, lively way sought to point his fellow-mortals to the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world. Talking of these "overflows," we may allude to the closing meeting conducted by Mr. Scroggie at the Wesleyan Chapel, New Cross, on Sunday week. As the preacher was busy giving out his message, the power of God seemed to descend on the assembly with unusual power. One man was so moved that he could not restrain himself, and shouted, loud enough for all to hear, that he had entered into the joy of the Lord. A solemn awe, we are told, pervaded the house, and it was felt that the hand of the Lord was touching many dead sinners and waking them into newness of life. Mr. Sankey now feels himself able again to sing at the overflows, and this is a great help to Mr. Scroggie in his somewhat difficult role of holding and influencing "a disappointed crowd," as someone has very aptly described those who have failed to enter the meeting proper.

In addition to those in the Presbyterian Chapel, overflow meetings were held last week at Christ Church, Somers Town, where various clergymen preached, and Mr. Sankey sang. Revs. N. Sherbrooke and Sholto Douglas will be the preachers this week. On Sunday last both these churches were utilised for the overflows, and also Tonbridge Chapel, Euston-road.

ST. PANCRAS' FIRST SUNDAY.

If the story of any of these Sundays could all be told, from first to last, and told by the pen of inspiration, what a marvellous record it would be. What a tale of emotions stirred; of hearts pricked to the core; of consciences awakened from slumber long and deep; of false refuges exploded; of serious introspection; of chequered memories and experiences starting out of the grave of the past and crowding into a few fleeting moments of time; of anxious questioning and debate; of clutching at specious and welcome excuses; of hardenings of heart; of softenings of heart; of haltings between two opinions; of counting the cost; of momentous advances and retreats; of spiritual conflicts; of devilish temptations, yielded to or resisted; of dawning light or deepening gloom; of decisions big with eternal fate, either for weal or for woe. All this perhaps going on in a couple of solitary souls; multiply these units by 3000 or more, and imagination fails to measure the scope and depth of the tragedies that are compassed in one hour, not to say the four, five, and six hours over which the Sunday's meetings extend.

These Sundays, in some respects, are much like one another, yet each one has its distinctive features that make it stand out in the memory. Last Sunday will be remembered as one when Mr. Moody set forth, in a threefold form, morning, noon, and afternoon, the boundless, changeless, and unfathomable sympathy, compassion, and all-sufficiency of Jesus Christ. In the morning the story of divine sympathy, as typified in the Good Samaritan, melted and fused the hearts of the great company of workers as one heart. At noon the wondrous tale of Christ's compassion deeply moved the audience and filled the inquiry-room with troubled, anxious, seeking souls. In the afternoon the setting forth of "What Christ is to us," with some of those tender touches of Nature that make the whole world kin, fairly broke down and suffused in tears the company of women that filled the hall. In the evening, to a sterner audience of men, Mr. Moody changed his tack and discoursed on the eternal inexorabilities and verities of the law of cause and effect. And yet, mixed with the solemn utterances about sowing the wind and reaping the whirlwind, there came frequent snatches of tender entreaty and loving offers of escape through the abounding grace of God.

Mr. Sankey's share in the day's toil was ample, and he had the ready help of other singers on the platform, including the well-trained choir. In the evening Mr. Sankey sang, "What shall the harvest be?" Applying that question to the services of the day, we may well cherish the sure and certain hope that the fruits will be neither scanty nor evanescent.

FOLLOWING UP AT NEW CROSS

MESSRS. WHITTLE AND McGRANAHAN.

The curiosity which led many to the New Cross-road Hall "to see the empty chairs," and which resulted in not a few instances in their seeing Jesus, may in some degree be still gratified. What was the hall is now something like a ruin; but in the centre of it the chairs are piled high in the air like a pyramid, boldly attracting the attention of the passers-by. The chief visible testimony, however, to the impressive meetings of the last three weeks, is to be seen in the way in which the surrounding churches (whose ministers and members largely supplied workers for the inquiry-room and stewards for the hall) are entering into and extending the Mission services. Every available place of meeting seems to be utilised. The thousands whose addresses were taken in the inquiry-room are being quietly looked after, and some of the young believers used in such a way as may be helpful to themselves and others.

The necessity of further effort was especially felt by the churches in Greenwich, and at one time it was thought that every denomination would join in the movement. Rev. Brooke Lambert, the vicar of the parish, was willing to join it, and grant St. Alphage's, the parish church, for the services, but unfortunately one or two of his colleagues in the ministry objected to the proposal, and Mr. Lambert reluctantly withdrew. There are, however, five congregations whose churches are within a very small radius. Arrangements have been made by them for a three weeks' Mission, during which their five buildings will be used in connection with the work.

Those who have had the pleasure and privilege of meeting Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan, will know with what force and sweetness they preach and sing the Gospel. For the past week a mid-day service has been held by these friends at the Lewisham-road Baptist Church (Rev. Campbell Gray's), and evening meetings at St. Mark's Presbyterian Church (Rev. Geo. Elder's). We are glad to report that their messages have met with much acceptance and many tokens of blessing. Monday evening's meeting in the Presbyterian Church was only fairly attended, but night by night the congregations grew in numbers and interest, until at last there was no room for more. Major Whittle's special aptitude as a Mission preacher was manifested, and numbers, from twenty to thirty, rose for prayer at the meetings towards the close of the week.

On Thursday and Friday evenings the after-meetings took the form of praise meetings, and many young men rose to acknowledge God's goodness in calling them from darkness into his marvellous light during the last month. One, who with two brothers and a sister have recently been converted, acknowledged that he had gone to Mr. Moody's meeting simply to see the crowd. By mistake he had gone to the tent and had to dodge the police to get into the hall, when he heard the line sung, "Eternity is drawing nigh," which led him to the Saviour. He said he had his hair cropped short in order to attend a sparring match upon the following evening, but by that time he was better engaged.

On Friday evening Mr. Charles Spurgeon, jun., who conducted this meeting, near its close invited those seeking salvation to stand up. Meeting with no response, he then asked all the Christians present to stand. "Everybody is standing," said Mr. M'Granahan. One might have thought that this was cause for congratulation, but not so thought Mr. Spurgeon. "We ought to be ashamed of ourselves," said he, "that we have not had better meetings with so many Christians among us. Let us pray." Then he led to the throne of grace, asking that every person should consecrate himself anew to the Redeemer's service, and work heart and soul to bring others into the kingdom. "Now," said he, "hands up for every one who will bring one unconverted to the meeting next Sunday night." On this being largely responded to, Major Whittle was obliged to protest that this did not mean their remaining to the meeting, as those present were not exactly the congregation he wanted.

The ministers of the five churches attended the prayer meeting of Saturday evening, special prayer being made for this week's services, which are to be held—mid-day meetings at the Congregational Church, Greenwich-road (Mr. Norton's); the evening meetings at the London-road Wesleyan Chapel (Mr. Boggis').

A Good Work at Gloucester.

DEAR SIR,—"Praise the Lord." He has been working mightily in Gloucester, in a Mission of nine days for the promotion of spiritual life, just held by Mrs. Lowther, of Richmond. The testimonies of Christians are: "It has been a blessing to hundreds." "A wave of blessing has passed all over Gloucester."

The Institute Hall (holding 600) was so crowded on one occasion that 150 persons could not get in; the interest increased daily, and many more disappointed ones had to turn away on the second Sunday for want of room.

The Holy Spirit wrought in the hearts of many Christians a deep sense of need and "great searchings of heart," and led them on to fulness of blessing. All who yielded themselves to God for this are already praising Him for "signs following" in their life and service for Him. Some who went forth in the power of the Spirit to the lodging-houses, on the second Sunday, saw great, rough men, whom they had not been able to influence before, broken down and weeping for their sins.

Though Mrs. Lowther spoke chiefly to Christians, we also found many unsaved ones at each after-meeting, in great anxiety about their souls, who afterwards "went on their way rejoicing" in their newly-found Saviour.

It was a most searching time. A very self-righteous woman stopped me, the day after, saying, "Before I came to these meetings I thought I was all right, but now I am sure there is something very wrong in me; will you pray for me?"

At one of the closing meetings a husband and wife were so impressed by the testimonies which flowed in from all parts of the hall, that they "asked and received" for themselves. Many and fervent were the thanksgivings offered up to God for having brought his beloved child amongst us, and earnest the prayers that He would bless her to many more elsewhere, for his glory. Truly "God hath visited his people," and filled our hearts with joy and praise.

Yours very truly,

Wotton Hill, Gloucester. MARY ANNE MEDLAND.

SALE OF WORK.—For the benefit of Mrs. Ginever's Orphan Homes, Holloway, a sale of work will be held on March 26 and 27, at St. George's Church room, Carleton-road, N., towards which contributions of fancy, plain, and miscellaneous articles will be gratefully received by Mrs. Hurst, St. Mark's Vicarage, Tottington-park, N., and Mrs. Washington, Southside, Carleton-road, Tuffnell-park, N.

Village Missions.

A WORKING-MAN evangelist, Mr. George Bailey, has been preaching and singing for Jesus in a number of villages in the neighbourhood of Wallingford, and there is great joy among the people.

SOUTH STOKE.

The Mission extended over a fortnight in this village, closing on Sunday, Feb. 24. The services were held in the new Temperance room, erected chiefly through the instrumentality of Mr. Isaac King, a farmer in the village, and promoter of all good works. This was the second visit of the evangelist here. About a score professed conversion, while those who had been added to the Lord during the first visit were greatly revived and strengthened. The incident is worth special note. Mr. Bailey had been praying that those at ease in false security might be undeceived, and that same evening an aged woman came there on her knees before the platform calling out for mercy. "Oh to think," she said, "that I should have been deceived for sixty years." By "simply trusting," she entered into liberty. Her conversion brought tears to many eyes, and produced a profound impression for good.

ASTON.

Here the Mission lasted from Monday, February 25, till Sunday, March 2. Mr. Bailey was here ten days at Christmas, when about thirty professed conversion, and these new converts raised the money among themselves in order that they might have a second visit of this servant of God. New converts came out every evening, and testified to the power of divine grace. At the last meeting two-thirds of the large audience stood up and bore witness to the good they had received at the meetings.

NORTH MORETON.

The services here extended over two nights. Every house was visited by the evangelist and Mr. T. Heley, farmer, who had instigated the movement. The greater portion of the inhabitants of the village were present to hear the Gospel, many who never go to either church or chapel being among the number. Some, indeed, had not been in a place of worship for ten years. The visit of the evangelist here was not without fruit, though, owing to the shortness of his stay, it was not so marked as in the two former villages.

Mr. Bailey has most striking success as a village evangelist, and it is a great pity that he cannot be relieved from the necessity of manual toil, in order to give himself entirely to this work.

THOMAS CURRY,
Aston Tyrrold. Presbyterian Minister.

OUR SOLDIERS.—Miss Tod, of Glasgow, who has done so much good work for the soldiers at Gibraltar, has gone to work amongst our troops in Egypt.

THE GLASGOW HOME MISSION UNION, which embraces ninety per cent. of the Glasgow churches, have been doing good work during the past few months. In the course of a few weeks they hope to be able to say that every non-church-going family in Glasgow is known and cared for by some Christian brother or sister representing a congregation in the immediate locality. The report when issued cannot fail to be of interest, and other large towns would do well to follow such a practical example.

CITY GOSPEL TEMPERANCE UNION.—This Union has been established for the purpose of holding meetings after the day's work is over, among the work-people employed in the factories and work-rooms of the metropolis. Several encouraging gatherings have been held. Monthly meetings are arranged at Messrs. Simpson and Renshaw's, 12, Paternoster-square, where the employés have heartily taken up the work. Monthly meetings are also arranged for the factory of Messrs. Copestakes, Hughes, Crampton & Co., 36, Goswell-road, who kindly provide a tea for those attending the meeting. Messrs. Smith Bros., bookbinders, Ivy-lane, have followed suit. Meetings are also being arranged for by Messrs. James and Pike, and several other firms. The Office of the Union is 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

Mr. Henry Drummond in Africa.

MANY of our readers will be glad to peruse the following portions of a letter from Mr. Henry Drummond, read by Professor Douglas, of the Free Church College, Glasgow, on the 23rd ult., and published in The Daily Review. It is written, remarks the Professor, a thousand miles from any post-office :—

"Africa, 9° South Lat., 33° East Long.
(Between Lakes Nyassa and Tanganyika),
Oct. 26, 1883.

". . . . I have not heard one word from home since June, and can only trust that you have been given strength to take your winter's place. I wish I could communicate to you a portion of the health and vigour, as well as some of the quiet and happiness, I have enjoyed in Africa. I left home with many misgivings, partly on account of the deadly climate, as well as of having to pass alone through the many dangers of travel in the interior. Indeed, had it not been a call of a special nature, as well as a special opportunity—probably the last of my life—of learning from nature better what I ought to teach, I should certainly never have come here. But I am thankful to say that, up to this time, I have passed through it all scathless, and without a touch of fever, even on the Zambesi. My object in coming to Africa is now all but fulfilled, and I am doing a little exploration on my own account.

"I came to Lake Nyassa viâ Zanzibar, Quillimane, the Zambesi and Shire rivers, with two breaks—the one at Blantyre Mission Station, and the other a fortnight's exploration of Lake Shirwa, which is very little known. After spending some time on Nyassa, and visiting, among other places, our Mission stations at Livingstonia and Bandawe, I left Mr. Bain on the coast, and pushed into the interior with a caravan of thirty-two men, all natives. At this moment I am camped in the bush, in the heart of the great forest country between Nyassa and Tanganyika. I thought of going as far as Tanganyika, but the usual travellers' misfortunes have overtaken my caravan, and I shall probably turn soon. A number of my men deserted at the first respectable hill, leaving their loads in the wilderness; and among those who are left there has been much fever and dysentery, as they are unsuited to the high country through which we are travelling. To add to this, the rainy season is due now in less than a fortnight, and although my tent is proof against anything even the tropics can produce in the way of liquid, the consequences to the men would be serious. I understand the remaining bit of country is just a repetition of this, so I shall lose little if I do not get much further. Up to this time everything has gone well, and I have seen and learned a good deal. It is a wonderful experience wandering among these tropical forests by the week together. Not a man in my caravan knows a word of English, so I am entirely solitary. My men are capital collectors by this time, and I have many new and rare specimens, and have seen much that will be of use to me by-and-by."

MISSION HALL, BARKINGSIDE.—A few weeks ago an appeal from Mr. George Soltau appeared in our columns asking for funds to build a small mission hall in Barkingside. We learn that but little response has been made to this appeal. If our readers would contribute the sum of £400 for this object within the next three weeks the work will be carried forward in Mr. Soltau's absence in America. His address is 69, Beresford-road, Highbury, N.

RESCUED FROM THE JESUITS.—Your readers, who have taken an interest in this case, will be pleased to learn that Mrs. Gaudeau was elected on March 6 to an annuity of £20 in the U.K. Beneficent Association. The Committee beg to thank the ladies and gentlemen who so kindly co-operated with them in securing this result, and they would further commend Mrs. Gaudeau and her three daughters to the Christian sympathy and help of any friends who may feel disposed to visit them at 205, King's-cross-road, W.C.

D. A. MOXEY, M.D.,
On behalf of the Committee.

Major and Mrs. Poole's Missions.

THESE evangelists held a five days' Mission at Eltham recently, when a good spiritual work was done. They then went to Stroud, as reported in our last; thence to Tedbury and Oxford. At the latter place two splendid crowded meetings were held in the Corn Exchange, with good results. From Oxford Major and Mrs. Poole went to Rotherham. In addition to the evening meetings, which were largely attended, a daily prayer-meeting was held every morning; about one hundred were present. Many earnest Christians looked for blessing, and were not disappointed.

Major and Mrs. Poole are holding a five days' Mission at Doncaster this month, and then on to Great Grimsby. They have been invited by the Bristol Gospel Temperance Union to hold a ten days' Mission in Colston Hall, from April 20 to May 3. Every branch of their work increases in magnitude, interest, and blessing.

A correspondent, in sending to us some details of the Mission in Rotherham, says:—The evening of March 3 was devoted to the great work of the Purity Crusade. Before an audience of men (all over eighteen years of age), filling the entire body of the large drill hall, Major Poole, in a clear and forcible speech of nearly two hours duration, dealt with the subject, "National Vice and Individual Responsibility." This is the first occasion on which the work of the Purity Crusade has been brought before the people of Rotherham, and a deep interest has been awakened. The Vicar (Rev. J. N. Quirk) and his three curates, together with many of the Nonconformist ministers and a large number of laymen, pledged themselves to organise a local branch for promoting the work. At the close of the meeting it was found that over 300 men had signed the Purity Crusade Pledge Card.

Through the kind permission of the proprietors, the men working at the Effingham stove-grate works assembled on February 29 in one of the large warehouses of the establishment, and listened attentively to a stirring address on Gospel Temperance work, delivered by Major Poole.

The straightforward, earnest, and thorough speaking of the Major, and the tender, eloquent, and loving testimony to the power and sweetness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, borne by Mrs. Poole, were much appreciated by the Yorkshire people. It is, however, not in the great meetings alone that the missioners have been blessed in their labours. At the noonday prayer-meetings and at the solemn after-meetings the Spirit of God seems to have been especially outpoured, and the clergy, ministers, and workers have felt that from thence a great power for good has gone forth. Altogether the Mission has been a great blessing to the town.

A BIBLICAL CURIOSITY.—We have before us a small volume issued from the Guille-Allès Library, Guernsey. It contains the Sermon on the Mount and the Parable of the Sower, translated into the Franco-Norman dialect of Guernsey from the French of Le Maistre De Sacy, one of the distinguished band of scholars who in the seventeenth century suffered greatly from persecution. It was while enduring a three years' imprisonment in the Bastille that De Sacy commenced his translation of the Old Testament from the Latin Vulgate. The translation before us was made by Mr. George Métivier, a descendant of a Huguenot family, and widely known for his many works in the dialect of his native isle, where he died just three years ago, in his ninety-second year. There is also a version of the Parable of the Sower in the dialect of Sark, taken phonetically in 1862 by Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte, which, as being probably the first specimen of Sarkese ever printed, is highly interesting. The little work is creditable to the editor, Mr. John Linwood Pitts, whose endeavours to preserve the island vernacular are meeting with much success.

Notes and Comments.

WRITING to a friend in this country, Pastor Aimé Cadot, Chauny, France, expresses a strong desire that some English friends should undertake work among Roman Catholics in Noyau. There is an open field, and the people are willing to receive the Gospel message.

According to the Figaro, twelve American millionaires have united to execute a gigantic plan. They intend to build in Jerusalem a Temple that shall exactly correspond to that which was destroyed by the Romans in A.D. 70. Two have already gone to Palestine to initiate the place and means of operation.

Mr. George Smith, of Coalville, the friend of poor toilers of every description, is contributing a series of illustrated articles to The Christian Million on "Our Canal and Gipsy People." These papers will doubtless be of special service at this time, when the attention of the Legislature is being called to the subject.

Under the new convention between Great Britain and the Transvaal State which has just been signed in London, the Rev. John Mackenzie has been appointed Commissioner in Bechuanaland. The Boers are not pleased at the appointment, but that augurs well for its value, as their dissatisfaction can only be from fear of his firm and resolute action in the cause of what is right and just. As a missionary of the London Missionary Society, Mr. Mackenzie has earned a high reputation for great abilities and faithful service.

The Rev. J. Long, Curate-in-charge of the Clare-market Mission, writes to the Telegraph touching the death of a girl in his parish, on whom a verdict was given by a coroner's jury of death from natural causes. The facts, as stated by Mr. Long, are that she lived and died in a room 13 ft. 6 in. long, 12 ft. wide, and 6 ft. 4 in. in height. In this room, at the top of the house, nine persons lived and slept, and it was also used as a workshop by the father of the family. The room was in a shocking condition, rain coming in through the roof. The child died on the 19th ult., the body remaining uncoffined until the 25th, when a post-mortem examination was made in the same room. The wealthy parish of St. Clement Danes has no public mortuary, so such scenes may be of oft recurrence. A more horrible state of things can scarcely be imagined, and calls for sternest denunciation. Such cases are not very rare after all, and vindicate the "bitter cry" from any charge of sensationalism.

We observe that the Marquis of Lorne, speaking the other night at a meeting in Kensington on behalf of the Church of England Waifs and Strays' Society, highly praised the efforts of Miss Rye and Miss Macpherson in connection with the emigration of children to Canada. He said that he had twice visited Miss Macpherson's establishment near the Niagara Falls, and could therefore speak warmly in its praise. A lady had lately told him that in Quebec alone places could be found at once for 1000 girls if they were sent out. It seems anything but desirable for either boys or girls to remain waifs and strays at home, while they can be made useful members of society at so small a cost abroad.

Speaking the other day on behalf of the South American Mission at Terra del Fuego, Lord Shaftesbury said, in words full of encouragement to our faith as Christian workers:—

"I think there is no record at all like the record of this Mission. I am perfectly astounded when I read the record of the doings of the men who have engaged in that work; I am astounded when I am told or when I read of what they have achieved. The only explanation which can be offered is that to be found in the words, 'What hath God wrought!' And will it not lead us to the conclusion that we should never despair with regard to Mission work? I believe that in the whole human race there are none so lost, none so degraded, none whose case is apparently so utterly hopeless, that by the grace of God and through the influence of Christian principles it may not be be brought to a level possibly quite equal to our own."

A correspondent sends us reports of a meeting held last month in the Wesleyan Reform Chapel, Sheffield, to give thanks to God for the remarkable removal of a long and painful affliction from a Miss Andrew, in direct answer to believing prayer. This lady had been unable to walk for three years, owing to an affection of the spine. Medical opinion declared her recovery impossible. Her sudden and immediate cure is thus narrated, in her own words:—

"My desire and prayer was that the glory of God might be manifested, and the impression being made upon my mind that this could better be gained by my accepting Christ as my healer, and the two passages, Psalms ciii. 3 and St. Matthew viii. 17, being also very forcibly suggested to my mind, I asked God to fulfil his own Word for his own glory, and a little time after rose and walked. Thus, to my great joy, it was proved that his everlasting promise is sure. To Him alone shall all the praise be given."

Since her recovery, thus effected, she has been able to walk considerable distances, and has no trace of spinal weakness remaining.

In this materialistic age God's own people have been far too ready to ignore His presence outside distinctly spiritual spheres. Many have limited "the Holy One of Israel;" of many communities it may be truly said He could not there do many mighty works because of their unbelief. It behoves all who believe in the unvarying and everlasting promises of God to consider well all manifestations of his continued presence and power in our midst, and prejudice against what may not be fully clear to us must not be allowed to shut out earnest inquiry. But, on the other hand, we must beware of going beyond the written Word, and making it appear that sickness is a proof of unbelief or sin. Paul did not recommend the prayer of faith in the case of Timothy, and the Lord Himself gave a better thing than cure, so that the Apostle gloried in his infirmities, that the power of Christ might rest upon him.

Our own zealous opposition to the still continued infamy of the opium traffic in China should be stimulated by the fact that, in New South Wales the Legislature is being roused to prohibit the introduction of opium into that Colony, save for purely medicinal purposes. A Chinese gentleman resident in Sydney pleads for such a course, on the ground of the fearful ravages the drug has made upon his own countrymen, urging that humanity and policy alike support his suit. It is gratifying to learn that twenty-nine municipal councils have backed up his appeal, and that widespread sympathy is being expressed with its object. Let us hope the Colonial Government will be more just and conscientious in this matter than our home legislators as yet have been.

Advocates of fancy fairs and kindred evils in connection with Church work may profitably ponder over the words of a recent leading article in The Times:—

"It is to be feared that an immense amount of time and money is wasted in these days upon new schemes. The clergy are ready to rely upon everything rather than upon the substantial claims of their message. One party takes to gay dresses, banners, and processions, another to penny readings, political lectures, and concerts. They change from one thing to another day by day, and the result is only a weary waste of their own time, and the creation of a certain amount of social feeling which might equally be produced without the supernatural influences of the Church and of religion. Religious truths, if they are what they are believed to be, cannot need all this trivial machinery to recommend them, and religious convictions which are to be of any value must be produced and sustained by more simple and more permanent means. If we may judge by the history of the Church, both in early and modern times, a man of true religious feeling needs nothing but a room and a Bible in order to produce the greatest results."

It is high time for the Christian heart and conscience to awake, and to assert themselves vigorously on the side of simple faith in God, and fearless reliance on his Word, when we find the secular Press saying:—

"We are inclined to think that too much money has been expended in the erection of large and costly churches. More parsonages, with simple lecture-rooms, and more ample endowments, would have given the clergy a much better chance of getting hold of the mass of the people. But the one thing essential is not new plans, new experiments, and daily changes, but a belief in the power of the permanent truths of the Christian religion, and a devotion to these, and to these alone."

The spirit of ancient Israel, when they went down to Egypt for help, is still prevalent among the professed people of God, and it is very suggestive to find secular journals rebuking it thus.

A correspondent writes from Manchester in reference to the great increase of secularism among young men there, and deploring the little energy displayed in endeavouring to stem the torrent. He says—and we fear his words apply to many other places as well as Manchester—"Freethought, like a plague, is gradually working its way into private homes, factories, &c., and, in fact, everywhere." The insidiousness of the infidelity with which we are confronted is its most dangerous feature. Rampant blasphemy and ribald Godlessness is not so much to be dreaded as the subtle, secret, and more restrained form of unbelief which is now so common in all classes of society. These are no times for dallying with the foe, but rather for bold and uncompromising contention for the truth.

The same correspondent refers to the apathy of many ministers and churches in the matter of finding out non-churchgoers who reside in the neighbourhood of their places of worship. In some districts house-to-house visitation is diligently employed, but in many cases no personal effort of this kind is put forth. Many people come up from country places to reside in our great cities, who have been accustomed to attend divine worship, but they are strange to all around them, and with no friendly hand to lead them they get lost in the crowd, and become regardless of the Sabbath, and of all religious privileges. A great amount of good may be done, by Christians just going out to kindly invite their neighbours and others to accompany them to the house of God. An hour so spent every Lord's Day, say just before a service, would yield rich results

We are asked to call attention to the Conference on Holiness to be held at St. Andrew's Hall to-day and to-morrow (Thursday and Friday), at 11 a.m., 2.30, and 6.30 p.m. each day. There will also be a meeting at Exeter Hall at 11 a.m., 2.30, and 6.30 p.m. on Monday next, at which Miss Booth, Pasteur Vernier, and others will speak, the occasion being Miss Booth's French anniversary.

The recently discovered diabolical plots to blow up several of our metropolitan railway stations prove that we have still to face a deadly and implacable spirit of malice and hate which lurks in our midst. A correspondent writes urging that the hand of God ought to be devoutly recognised as put forth to frustrate these cruel designs upon the public safety. Surely we are bound to offer praise for his kind and watchful providence.

Truth says:—"It is to be hoped that the Home Secretary will see his way to enforce the Prohibition of the Payment of Wages in Public-houses Act of last year, in the East-end. There is is no doubt that it is systematically disregarded there. The Fellowship Porters, who have to pay heavily to their officials for the limited monopoly they enjoy, could tell a tale or two of the way they are mulcted in their hard-won earnings by the publicans, owing to this system."

Infidelity and superstition are not far apart. Not long since in the town of Dürkheim, Pfalz, a family of gipsies encamped just under the University. There might have been seen women and young girls, amongst whom were many cultured ladies, in the evening twilight and the grey morning, disappearing under the dirty flaps of the gipsy tent to have their fortunes told. This happened in a town where the Protestant public, numbering 5000, are so enlightened that on Sunday, July 8, 1883, not more than fifteen men were present at the worship of God.

The Bible Banner gives two pieces of advice to its readers which are full of timely caution. One is to the following effect: "Let ministers be careful about what they say at funerals." There is reason to fear that too frequently at these solemn occasions there is a lack of fidelity and a generalising tone of remark in reference to the future life which sadly hardens the unconverted who are present. The formal words, often as indiscriminate as they are perfunctory, which are common in our great London cemeteries, are terribly deadening in their influence to religious conviction. Ministers and others taking part at such times do well to see that the living are duly warned of the momentous responsibilities and issues of life.

The other point which furnishes a good text for present day sermons is thus expressed, "Let there be pungent preaching to the large percentage of unconverted Church membership." Thousands think membership with the visible Church is synonymous with conversion to God, and in itself implies salvation. This is indeed a fatal mistake, and one we cannot be too earnest in discovering to those who are involved in it. The Church and the world have come so close to each other, the discipline of the former is withal so lax, that we need to be very clear and uncompromising in our testimony that outward privileges and professions are no sure sign of grace, and that "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Mr. George Soltau, late of the Ilford Homes, purposes proceeding to Canada and the United States on an evangelistic tour. He will commence work in Toronto on arriving there in the middle of April, and will then step into such openings as may result from this first Mission. He hopes to visit several of the new young cities of Western America, with a view to ascertaining the spiritual condition of the population, and preaching the Gospel among them. We heartily commend him to the prayers of our readers.

Various circumstances conspire at this time to call the attention of Europe to the Albanians. Few regions present a more promising field for Christian effort, or one more really needing to be worked than Albania. The great want is Christian schools, education being at a very low ebb. Dr. Thompson, agent of the British and Foreign Bible Society at Pera, Constantinople, says:—

"Scarcely an Albanian female in the whole nation can read, while more than half are Moslems, and with such mothers what can the succeeding generation be? The people are now, however, beginning slightly to waken up to a sense of their degradation, and are desirous for a national literature and education. What is needed there is male and female schools at Scutari, Berat, and Argyrocastro in the first instance, and these either to be supplemented by others afterwards, or to migrate temporarily to other localities like our Gaelic schools in the highlands of Scotland. The Christians of Britain are under no necessity of quitting Europe in order to find an ample field for missionary work. Here in Turkey are people plunged in ignorance and barbarism, with Mohammedanism eating into their very vitals, and probably even still gaining ground on the miserable nominal Christianity professed by the masses of the people, who understand no language but Albanian."

Several letters have reached us relative to the question asked by "C. B." in our issue for Feb. 28, as to the remembrance in eternity, or otherwise, of the sins of believers. One writes concerning our position in glory: "We shall be in no danger of needing incentives to either humility or gratitude, because when we see Him we shall be like Him" Another writes: "Reading the question sent through me a feeling of sadness, for has not our loving Father said, 'I even I am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins.'" It is certainly the teaching of Scripture that in justification we are cleared from all our former guilt, and to say that in spite of our perfect justification through the blood of Christ, we are yet to have a sad recollection of our past sins, and that even in eternity, seems to us to be a reflection on the grace of God and on the efficacy of the Saviour's work.

It is true that there is a sense in which it is impossible for God to forget, and it is strictly in a judicial sense that He is said not to remember the sins of those He justifies and forgives. We, too, shall have the power of remembrance in another world, and shall surely never forget that we have been redeemed from a state of depravity and guilt. But the remembrance can only be associated with joy and praise; it can involve no degree of sadness or of shame. We are fully, and for ever, absolved by the work of Christ from all our former sinfulness, and may confidently say with Zinzendorf—

"Bold shall I stand in that great day,
For who aught to my charge shall lay?
Fully absolved through Christ I am
From sin and fear, from guilt and shame."

The blessings obtained for believers under the Gospel are full and eternal in their gracious provisions.

We are desired by Messrs. Moody and Sankey's Committee to make it known that there is now a need of funds for the carrying on of their work to its conclusion. We hope the announcement will ensure an immediate and sufficient response. Our provincial friends will naturally be interested, as well as those in London, considering the ceaseless stream of people flowing from the country into the metropolis, and the action and reaction for good and evil of each upon the other. The office of Mr. T. A. Denny, Hon. Treasurer, and Mr. R. Paton, Hon. Secretary, is at 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

The title of "The Gospel Choir" has been altered to "The Christian Choir." After the former had been adopted, it was found to be already in use as the title of a Scotch publication.

The duty of the Church in reference to the question of recreation is among the most pressing subjects of inquiry and concern. To ignore the need of recreation is absurd and unreasonable, to pander to carnal tastes and adopt worldly expedients is unscriptural and injurious. Drawing the line between the Church and the world, separating the precious from the vile, becomes a less and less easy task. But the Church has to aim first at the formation in the heart of pure tastes in reference to all objects of pursuit, and then to aim at their satisfaction.

The current number of Regions Beyond calls attention to the fact that the British and Foreign Bible Society has issued in the 79 years of its existence 97,000,000 copies of the Scriptures, in whole or in part, in 250 languages and dialects. It is believed about 220,000,000 of Bibles, or Bible portions, are in circulation throughout the world. But of these a large proportion have been distributed in Protestant nations, not more than ten millions of copies of the Holy Scriptures being found among the one thousand million of heathen, Jews, and Mahometans who people the globe. There is, therefore, ample cause for ever-increasing zeal in the translation and publication of the Word of God. Thankful for what has been done, let all be bent on doing far more in this vital work.

It is said of the people of God, "They shall still bring forth fruit in old age, they shall be fat and flourishing." The Psalmist's words find an apt illustration in the case of the veteran philanthropist in whose honour the banquet was given last week at the Mansion House. Lord Shaftesbury has attained the honourable estate of old age, but his speech betokened a cheerful and vigorous faith, evidencing the genuineness and fervour of his convictions, and of his hold on God. He spoke as one who could look around on the varied scenes of life with firm confidence that God was guiding all events to an ultimate issue of triumph over all the powers of darkness and unbelief. The closing words of his Lordship's address, in which he exhorted his hearers to be "strong and very courageous" in working for God, will be long remembered.

MRS. DR. WELLS, a graduate of the New York Medical College for Women, has been for some months lecturing in this country on Temperance subjects, with occasional Gospel addresses. Her extensive and varied experiences, acquired by much foreign travel, with a full knowledge of the topics dealt with, render her lectures interesting, and highly instructive. Mrs. Wells is now lecturing in the North of England. Any friends who desire her services may apply to her at 3, Featherstone-buildings, Holborn, W.C.

Dr. Ziemann in Germany.

DEAR SIR,—I have cheering news for those of your readers who follow the work in Germany with their sympathy and prayers. The evening meetings, at Mülheim, attended by some 2000 people, were splendid opportunities for sowing the seed; it was so gratifying to see two classes of people there who usually do not come under the sound of the Word—a great number of working men, and men of higher education who think it beneath the dignity of an advanced thinker to go to church. One sees few men in the German churches. As the general interest spread they were drawn into the meetings. But I found neither time nor accommodation for after-meetings; so I proposed that those who were really anxious about their souls' salvation should meet me in the hall in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. I expected about thirty or so, and was not a little solemnised when I found gathered between 700 and 800 people, and looked into many faces expressing deep anxiety. It was easy to speak to such with the plain word of God in my hands; we searched out the meaning of faith, life, peace, assurance, &c.

Never will I forget those afternoon-meetings, which were held daily, the attendance increasing up to 1000. Those tears, those confessions, those praises and joy: it was heavenly! When searching Bible passages one afternoon about peace, we came to Ephes. ii. 15, "and made peace;" an elderly gentleman burst out, "I have been seeking all my life for peace, and here it is. He made peace, glory to God." And thus with a solemn voice which thrilled the whole meeting, he repeated, "He made my peace." I am sure the words unlocked many hearts; a great number professed daily to have found peace.

In a letter I received in Bonn, a friend told me that the movement is already spreading to the country places. In one large place of business five came in one day to their Chief (a Christian man), anxiously seeking peace. From Epen, we heard of two commercial travellers who had been to Mülheim during the week of those meetings, and were led to give themselves to the Lord. Some of the pastors here co-operated with much heartiness. I hear that yesterday (Sunday) the church was crowded, so that chairs had to be brought from the vestry, though there was nothing going on but the usual Sunday service.

I must add that Mülheim is a prepared ground. Here lived that saint of God, Tersteegen; though long since dead, yet he speaketh. The Gospel is preached here in one church very clear and warm; some brethren consecrated to God hold up holy hands. Mrs. Baxter has also been here, and is still kept in warm remembrance.

I have returned to Bonn for a day to make some arrangements to keep up the movement, and to provide care for the young converts. It seems to me that prolonged large meetings rather lead to make people dissatisfied with the quiet of the ordinary religious life. I have therefore proposed to have, in different houses, small meetings, more searching the Word. I would be glad if any of your readers could suggest to me anything in this line that experience may have taught them.

In some other places I have still much opposition from the clergy, but the people everywhere come and hear. In Bonn, where Professor Christlieb co-operated with me very heartily, God gave some encouragment, even amongst the students, though the ground is very hard. During this month I shall commence there again public meetings with Pastor Stockmayer. We ask for much prayer.

On the 18—20 inst. Professor Christlieb will have a conference with brethren from Berlin, Hamburg, Basel, Berne, i.e., to start an Evangelisation Society for Germany on some sound footing. A most important question for Germany! Will the brethren ask that wisdom may be given? Yours faithfully,

Johanneum, Bonn, March 3. H. Ziemann.

A Story of Persecution in Ireland.

DEAR SIR,—I should like your readers to know the following instance of persecution for Christ's sake, which has lately come under our notice in our work among our Roman Catholic fellow-countrymen. It is the case of a young woman of Roman Catholic parentage, who from her childhood has been more or less a disbeliever in the peculiar practices of the Roman Church, and has had an intuitive dislike for the priests and the confessional. From the time she left home, at an early age, she has been in service mostly with Protestants, though always attending her own chapel, never seeing the truth until she engaged herself to serve an invalid lady, who lived alone near to one of the southern towns lately visited by Mr. Moody. While living here she had time and opportunity to read such books as "Grace and Truth," and took great delight in learning hymns from her mistress, who was always ready to answer her eager questions as to the meaning of the terms used, many of which were so new to her.

She soon stayed away from mass and confession, refusing to do anything on the Lord's day but read her favourite hymns, until one day she saw the placards up announcing Messrs. Moody and Sankey's Mission. Her entreaties to attend one of these meetings were so earnest that her mistress was constrained to allow her to go to the first. This was quite a new thing to her, and she returned in ecstasy of delight with all she heard. She attended each night during the Mission, at the end of which she stood and publicly declared herself on the Lord's side. Great was her happiness for the few following weeks. Her next step was a very courageous one, and that was to appear at the church on the Sunday. On leaving the church she was seen by a person who had in time past been her unsuccessful suitor. This individual now made it his business to inform the parish priest, who immediately took steps to bring back his never very submissive sheep. She was from that time subjected to the taunts, groans, and hisses of the neighbours, and the house was favoured with a series of visits from the father and mother, who had now been instigated to endeavour to get their daughter away, but she had no desire to return to a home where she had seldom as a child experienced anything in the way of maternal affection, but violent treatment and abuse, nor to put herself in the power of the priests to be made a drudge (or worse) in a convent.

His Reverence, however, was not so easily deterred from his purpose as the kind-hearted father, who it was plain, was acting under the commands of authority he would never dare disobey, so a plan was concocted to forcibly abduct the young woman. The milkwoman was made an accomplice, and instructed to call much earlier than usual, so that no one would be about but the girl herself. Meanwhile a car was had in readiness on the hill close by, and the father with several other men stood by while the milkwoman knocked, and immediately the girl appeared they came in upon her. A scene then ensued. The poor girl screamed and struggled for her liberty while her strength lasted, but becoming faint she was literally dragged out of the house, and along the road towards the car. A friend noticed something amiss and came running down the road towards them, but was stopped by two of the party who threatened to take his life if he came near; so he returned and went to inform the police, the resident magistrate, and the lady's solicitor. Meanwhile the helpless captive was carried off to her old home, which soon became a scene of revelry patronised by the rev. father of the parish, who was loudly exulting over the success of the enterprise.

Suddenly all were startled by the clatter of horses' feet, and the magistrate appeared at the door with a force of armed constables. On inquiring into the case, and after questioning the girl, the magistrate soon saw how matters stood, and sent the girl back to her mistress; but their formerly quiet little abode was quite different now, being under constant police protection, and the windows barricaded up in anticipation of an attack upon the house, which the police knew was meditated by the people. In this state of affairs the lady's health was becoming very alarming as well as the poor girl's, and it became absolutely necessary to have them away from the excitement, but no one would lend or let any kind of conveyance under any conditions, so great was their fear. Some kind friends, however, arranged a plan which was successful; one went to the nearest town and hired a wedding carriage and pair in great haste, to be at the church up to time; when it came, the two ladies accompanied by two gentlemen stepped into the carriage, and the coachman drove off to the railway station, several miles away, with what he thought to be the wedding party.

So far all is well, but who knows the sorrow and anguish these feeble children of the Master have had to endure, having literally left all for the Kingdom of God's sake, and are now strangers in the earth. They need our prayerful sympathy as many others need our help. I have seen this dear girl, and think her remarkably taught of the Spirit. Please pray for her.—Yours faithfully, Ellen Smyly.

Haddon Hall, Bermondsey.

THE opening of this new Mission Hall on Tuesday, the 4th inst., marks an era in the religious history of Bermondsey. Few districts of crowded London are more loud in their cry for help than this. With a population of 92,000, there is church and chapel accommodation for no more than 24,000, and of that not more than one-half is appropriated. The new hall is a spacious building, capable of seating 700 persons, with a reading-room, a special room for 400 children, and various other offices suited for Mission operations. The cost has been £6,000, exclusive of the site, the whole of which sum has been contributed, upwards of £600 being subscribed at the opening meetings, so that the place should be free of debt. Mr. W. Olney, junr., who has so indefatigably worked the Mission for some years past, and whose family circle have largely contributed to the erection of the hall, is to be heartily congratulated on the position the work has now assumed, and on the prospects of successful efforts for the salvation of souls which open up before him and his coadjutors. Though closely allied with the Metropolitan Tabernacle, the work is to be strictly undenominational, aiming only at reaching in every possible way the destitution which prevails around.

In the regretted absence through illness of Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, his brother, Rev. J. A. Spurgeon, preached the opening sermon. At the luncheon the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor presided, supported by Revs. Burman Cassin, Rector of Southwark, J. A. Spurgeon, and others, a large number of friends and Christian workers being assembled to show sympathy with the movement. An enthusiastic public meeting was held in the evening, and an auspicious start was given to a work which promises to yield a rich harvest of glory to God and blessing to souls. It is proposed to obtain £1000, either to purchase the freehold of the site or to be funded, so that the ground-rent may be secured for the whole term of the lease.

HAM-YARD HOSPICE.—The report of this institution for helping the needy says that during the past twelve months 1597 nights' lodgings have been given, and during the past fourteen months 152,671 meals. Subscribers of one guinea are supplied with tickets for a certain number of meals, which may be obtained of the Secretary, Ham-yard, Great Windmill-street, W.

STUDY AND STIMULANTS.—In a very impartial review of a book called Study and Stimulants, the British Medical Journal says: "We cannot help feeling with Dr. Maudsley, and some other eminent men, that neither alcohol nor tobacco is in the least necessary or beneficial to persons in health, and that harder and sounder work is probably done without them."

THE WORKING LADS OF LONDON.

THE boys and girls in our Sunday-schools are brought under good religious influence, and great efforts are made to reform and save men and women of the working classes; but between the children and the adults there is a great gulf, and it is filled with lads and girls in their teens. Let us think of the lads. How few of us realise their number, their condition, or their influence. Some idea may be formed by noticing the groups pouring into the City every morning between seven and nine o'clock.

A few years ago they were merry boys at school and play—now they are at work daily, and each has for himself to fight the battle of life. Toil over about 7 p.m., they are free for two or three hours, and what becomes of them then? They may be seen loitering with girls at public-house corners, and will be found in large numbers in the music-halls and theatres, being educated in what is low and immoral; also, we are told, many attend the infidel lecture-halls. Such sowing in the fertile soil of youth must bring a fearful harvest.

Some years ago, in conversation with an errand boy, I learned that he had left Sunday-school, went to no place of worship, did not read his Bible, never prayed! Here, then, in this Christian land, surrounded by countless agencies for good, he was living as really a heathen life as the natives of Africa or India—nay, worse, for they do worship some god, but he none. This lad is the type of thousands.

Here is a problem. How can we reach such lads—how can they be saved from these evil influences—how can the vicious literature which is so largely circulated and ruins so many be superseded? Can we not, by God's help, do something for the mental and moral improvement of these youthful toilers, and, if possible, win them for Christ and his service?

With such aims, seven years ago, we opened our first Working Lads' Institute, situate in Whitechapel-road. The difficulties were great, and many fears were expressed as to getting the lads, or if they should come, of retaining them. As we look back we are compelled to exclaim, "What hath God wrought?" Some of those who joined at the opening are still members and over 1100 lads have been benefitted.

A second Institute has been opened in St. Bride's, near Fleet-street, where 800 more lads have been cared for, and in addition to these the effort has directly or indirectly resulted in the establishment of about a dozen other Working Lads' Institutes.

The agencies employed are varied, and comprise library, reading and refreshment-rooms, evening classes, lectures, Temperance meetings, savings bank, cricket, swimming, &c., Bible-class, evangelistic services, &c. The whole work is carried on upon Christian principles, but is quite unsectarian.

After eight years' work we are more than ever persuaded, that if you want to save the lads the best way is by means of an Institute.

A few extracts from some letters received from the lads may be of interest:—

"I have to thank you for giving me such a lesson as to the foundation of a character, which I will try and maintain throughout my life."

"I write to thank you for your kindness in sending me such sound advice as was contained in your letter. Since you last saw me I have been better both in mind and body, having found I have a Friend above who cares for me."

"Your hearty wishes and friendly advice seem to have completely called me to myself, and to have instilled into my heart a wish to spend this new year in a way that shall be more pleasing to God than the last has been.

"It gives me great pleasure to be able to tell you that I was received into the Church yesterday as a member. I trust by thus acknowledging myself on the Lord's side I may be the means of bringing others to accept Christ as their Saviour."

Perhaps some friends with means but living in the country or in provincial towns may think that such an institution being in London has no claim on them. But is this so? What about all the dear lads from village homes and every town in the kingdom who make their way to London? Are they to be left to themselves? Suddenly freed from all restraint, in the midst of strangers, without a friend in this mighty city, and exposed to all its fierce temptations, if no hand is stretched out to help them, no institute offers its kindly shelter, they are the first to be ensnared and go wrong. We have now under our care a youth who walked up to London from Manchester (over 200 miles) with only a few pence in his pocket. Fortunately he was introduced to the St. Bride's Institute, and has resided there ever since. This lad could not get a situation, and but for the Institute I know not what might have become of him. We gave him temporary employment, and he is now earning 20s. per week. Recently I received a letter from him, from which I extract the opening lines:—

"I have abundance of good news for you. The youth who was expelled from the Dormitories was induced by me to go to the Exeter Hall Bible-class on Sunday last, and with three others stayed to tea and evening services. He was impressed during the Bible-class, and after evening service went into the Secretary's office; with some conversation and prayer he yielded himself fully to Christ. When he left the office he came to me and warmly thanked me for inviting him to Exeter Hall, and I am sure I never saw a more bona fide case of conversion. Since he left the Institute he has lived with a family of atheists along with another member of the Institute who is an infidel. No sooner did he meet the young fellow with whom he sleeps than he joyfully informed him of his change of heart, and prayed with him in the bedroom."

This same lad previously had induced two others to go with him to Exeter Hall, when both of them were converted.

At the Whitechapel Institute we are now in serious difficulty, which, however, is really the result of its success. The building is small and cannot be enlarged; the work has been sadly hindered in consequence. Three years ago the Committee felt that the time for enlarging our borders had arrived, and a new Institute Fund was started. Freehold land has been secured, and it is intended to provide reading, refreshment, and class rooms, dormitories, a workroom, gymnasium, swimming bath, lecture hall, &c. The total estimated cost, including land, buildings, furnishing, &c., is £9000. Towards this £4200 has been received or promised, which includes £1000 collected by my friend Mr. Edwin Arrowsmith.

The proposed Institute will be open every day and every night, and on Sundays will be used for preaching the Gospel. We expect to have a thousand members.

We seem to have reached a solemn crisis. We have given and collected what we can, but still require £5000. We are at a standstill, and cannot commence building until at least £1000 more is paid in.

TRYON HOUSE Y.W.C.A.—The address of this institution will after Lady day be Tryon House, 29, Whitehead's-grove, S.W. £500 is at present required for rent, taxes, &c., of the home at 115, Sloane-street. The work has gone on for twenty-two years, and must now stop for want of funds. The report just issued shows that a good work has really been done among young women in business, and may yet be done if friends will kindly help. Contributions may be sent to Mrs. Catherine Ellis, at 115, Sloane-street, S.W.

NATIONAL BIBLE SOCIETY OF SCOTLAND.—At the monthly meeting of Directors held in the Society's chambers, 224, West George-street, Glasgow, on Monday, the agent in Japan was authorised to print an improved edition of the Japanese New Testament; and the agent in Pekin to issue the Gospel of Matthew and the book of Genesis in raised type for the blind. It was agreed to encourage colportage in Valparaiso. The sum of £50 was voted to assist the Bible Society of France, and arrangements were made to supply a reported lack of Bibles in the Sabbath schools of Lewis.

The Confidence of Faith.

"My God shall supply all your need."

GOD shall all your need supply,
All your need from first to last:
Never doubt his faithful Word,
For the promise standeth fast.

He is able to perform,
And we know is willing too;
Only trust Him with your all,
He will prove his power to you.

Boundless is his vast supply,
None can e'er exhaust that store;
Much He's given in the past,
Yet the Lord can give much more.

Bring Him hither all your grief,
Cast on Him your every care;
Everlasting are his arms,
They can well your burden bear.

He that sparèd not his Son
From the anguish of the tree;
With Him freely will bestow,
Every other gift on thee.

Limit not his Heart of love,
Limit not his Hand of power;
Nothing is too hard for God,
We may prove it every hour. M. F.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith at Leicester.

THE closing services of this Mission have left a distinct and ineffaceable impression on the religious aspect of our town. At the conclusion of the three weeks' Mission at Melbourne Hall, the evangelists moved into the Skating Rink, which was sufficiently seated to hold vast crowds of people. Night after night goodly numbers gathered, but all previous attendance was far exceeded on Friday, when the story of Mr. Smith's life was told. On Sunday the rink was half full at 7 a.m., and the usual hour of morning service found a motley group of non-churchgoers collected to hear the invitation to the wedding feast. But the evening meeting was the most memorable; the thronged rink, the awful hush, the impressive singing, the rising of scores to signify their acceptance of Christ—all these constituted a scene which will live in many memories for ever.

F. B. Meyer.

"Poor, yet making Many Rich."

IN 1882, there fell asleep in Jesus, at the age of ninety, in the Isle of Ré, near Rochelle, Madame Joussaume. Left a widow with three children in 1845, she continued in the paternal house from that time to the day of her death. She belonged to the simple peasant class.

In the later years of her life her children allowed her 300 francs (£12) annually. In addition to this she possessed a goat, some rabbits, and a little garden. This was her all; and yet out of this she contributed every year about 100 francs to the poor, and to different religious societies. She knitted and spun articles that were sold for the benefit of Foreign Missions, in which she was much interested; especially did she follow with the most lively interest all that concerned the Bassuto Mission, knowing the station of each individual missionary. She might always have been found before her window knitting or spinning, with an open Bible, the Journal des Missions, or the Feuille Religieuse before her. She delighted in God, and in helping to spread the knowledge of his love.

BOOKS AND TRACTS FOR FISHERMEN.—May I plead for the fishermen of this port? There are about 230 fishing-sloops, each having four hands. Connected with the Baptist Church there are nearly forty evangelists, most of whom are fishermen. I am anxious to place on board each sloop a box of books and tracts. The Religious Tract Society has made me a free grant, and offers more at a reduced rate. I want about £50.

A NEW HELP TO BIBLE STUDY.*

THIS is, as the title-page declares, "a literal translation and critical analysis of every word in the original languages of the Old Testament, with explanatory notes in appendices," and the first number (128 pages), which is before us, carries it down only so far as Genesis xvi. This might suggest that the whole when completed would be of rather portentous size, but the author tells us that "succeeding volumes will cover much larger portions of Scripture, as the earlier chapters of Genesis are necessarily dealt with very fully."

Of the value of the help which such a work as this will afford to the study of the Old Testament there can be no question; nor is this help such as will alone benefit the Hebrew student. It is the English reader who perhaps has most cause to be grateful for the help it will render to him, as, by a very literal translation combined with a grammatical analysis of every word, he can get at the nicest shades of meaning of the Hebrew idiom without knowing Hebrew. But we would not recommend anyone to stay in such a position; indeed, the chief value of such a work as this is that it will promote not only the study of the Scriptures, as to the accurate meaning in English, but will tempt the reader on insensibly to acquire a knowledge of Hebrew.

There is much that is very interesting in the exegetical part of this running commentary (for such it may be called) on the words of Scripture, but it must be owned there is that, too, which will disappoint the Hebrew scholar. There is a lack of sound judgment in some of the criticisms which is to be deplored. For example, the words in Gen. iv. 26: "Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord," are translated by Bishop Hellmuth, "Then it was commenced to call (idols) by the name of Jehovah," and the explanation to account for this extraordinary introduction of the word "idols," not in the Hebrew, is given thus: "Kimchi derives this verb (it was commenced) from 'to desecrate,' and translates, 'then it was desecrated to call in the name of Jehovah,'" i.e., idolatry was introduced.

But this fanciful notion of Kimchi's is one which few Hebrew scholars of name follow, whether among the great Hebrew scholars of Germany or among the scholars of the Jews themselves; and even if it were adopted it should be adopted consistently and translated as Kimchi does—"it was desecrated." But the Bishop renders it, "it was commenced," and then tries to combine with this Kimchi's notion by inserting without the smallest authority the word "idols." This is a mode of criticism much to be deprecated.

Another very questionable rendering is that of the latter clause of Gen. iii. 15, where after having rightly given as the literal rendering of the Hebrew, "he shall bruise thee, the head," he goes on, "and thou shalt glide unto him the heel." But the word is exactly the same in both clauses, and all authorities of any note that we have ever seen, Jewish or German, confirm our translation. Dr. Hellmuth speaks of the meaning "glide" as derivable from the Syriac, but it seems quite a conjectural derivation.

Whilst noting what seem flaws arising from too great a tendency to conjectural criticism, we would heartily commend the great industry and the extensive scholarship shown in the critical notes which this work displays. We rejoice to see Gen. xv. 6 rendered, "he trusted in Jehovah," as this better corresponds to the Hebrew word than our "believed in," and better accords with St. Paul's analysis of Abraham's faith in Rom. iv. 20. We commend this work to the attention of all students of the Word of God, and wish it much success.

EMIGRANT LETTERS.—Miss A. L. Walton, 31, Alexandra-terrace, Newport, I.W., desires to thank all who have so liberally responded to her appeal for emigrant letters. She has received about 400 letters, in all of which books and tracts have been enclosed.

CONTINENTAL AND FOREIGN NOTES.

VALLERANGUE, FRANCE.

God continues to work here in a manner that gladdens us all. Amongst those who were converted last year, we have a dozen brethren who speak in public with great acceptance and blessing. —Le Evangeliste.

POOR IN PARIS.

Mdlle. de Broen, assisted by several English ladies, has for the last month been distributing food gratuitously to 800 workmen out of work. The sick and suffering poor are also visited at their homes.

SWITZERLAND.

Mlle. Wyssa, a Captain in the Salvation Army and a Swiss citizen, has recently been expelled from the Canton of Neuchâtel. This is a fresh act of intolerance which we much regret, says the Journal Religieux.

The Christians of Bâle are pursuing with perseverance and energy the evangelisation of the Catholic Cantons. In many localities around Locarno and Bisaca there are persons desiring to be instructed in the Gospel, and an evangelist has been stationed at Locarno.

TEHERAN, PERSIA.

Tha Shah of Persia has authorised the Presbyterians to build a chapel at Teheran for the use of the Protestants of that city, on condition that no Mussolman shall be admitted to any service or receive any religous instruction. Children especially must be rigorously excluded.

ST. PETERSBURG.

On the 4th inst. Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Radcliffe attended the funeral of the American Ambassador in St. Petersburg. Mr. Kilburn (the American and English chaplain) gave a faithful Gospel address. All the ambassadors were present, and they and others seemed much struck with the simplicity of the service. Mr. Kilburn has received permission from Mr. Radcliffe to speak to Swedes in the American Chapel. Dr. Baedeker is waiting for permission to speak to the Germans. Much prayer is asked for all these Christian workers in Russia.

TAHITI.

One of the French missionaries writes:—"The situation is difficult; we have a great battle to fight. The Romanists are directing all their efforts to the youth of the island. They know the Tahitians wish at any price that their children should learn French, and besides the marked favour of the Government to their scholastic establishments, they have a large staff of priests and sisters who offer the natives, in any part of the island, the teaching they so eagerly desire. If we only had some Christian teachers here we should have nothing to fear. The Tahitians would not hesitate a single moment in their choice of masters for their children."—Journal des Missions.

A REVIVAL IN FRANCE.

The Evangéliste continues its account of a Revival at Ganges, France. Some striking cases of conversion are given. A man between forty and fifty, strongly opposed to all religious belief, has gladly received the Lord as his Saviour, after some time of deepest sorrow for past unbelief. A young man who, having a very fine voice, was a great frequenter of hotels, &c., has given himself to God, and his fine voice is now employed in praising the Lord. The writer says: "We have employed no extraordinary means; we are content to present the old Gospel, which is always 'the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth.'"

MEXICO.

The work of God in Mexico appears to be advancing with cheering strides. Rev. J. Milton Greene, who has just returned from a seven weeks' horse-back tour among the mountains of Guerrero, says, after having travelled 700 miles: "In all our trip I found the people most eager to hear of the Gospel. Nothing surprised me more in my journey than the readiness of the people to receive tracts, with which our poor horses were loaded, and their positive anxiety to attain to a better religious knowledge and life. In nearly every place we found the people practically deserted by their priests, who visit them only once a year, and then only on condition that they make up a handsome purse for them. Some few for lack of the priest make the best of it and confess directly to God. So said soberly one of those with whom we talked."

TRACTS FOR FRANCE.

The present is a most favourable time for sowing the good seed of the Word, and it is for this seed I would appeal. Tracts, Testaments, and Gospels will be gladly received and distributed. In going about my regular work among the shipping, I have many opportunities of talking for the Master among custom-house officers, labourers, and others who get their living on the quay, and I am much in want of books to give them. Our salle at Rue Grand Pont is well attended, sometimes to overflowing, and the attention paid is most encouraging. Already the Lord has owned his Word to the conversion of souls. Another salle has been opened among the ouvriers in the Quartier St. Sever. A Sabbath school has also been begun for the children of this quarter on Thursday afternoons. At Le Manoir, a village near Pont de l'Arche, the people are eager for the truth, and have been asking what papers they must sign in order to change their religion. The work among the sailors is also being blessed of God. Books suitable for lending are much needed, as well as Danish and Italian tracts. Parcels will be received and forwarded to me by Mr. F. West, Strangers' Rest, 163, George-street, London, E. William Gilchrist.

8, Rue Grand Pont, Rouen.

A Chinese, named Wah Lee, who in the United States has saved $3000 in laundry work, is about to enter an American University. He says that being himself converted to the Lord, he wishes to return to his country as a missionary of the Gospel. —L'Evangéliste.

Railway Evangelistic Tea Meeting.

OUR friend Mr. Robert Adcock, of Norwich, sends us an account of an interesting meeting recently held in St. Andrew's Hall, in that city. No fewer than 800 employés of the Great Eastern Railway Company assembled by invitation to partake of a comfortable and substantial tea, provided for them by the generosity of friends interested in their temporal and eternal welfare. On the removal of the tables the men were joined by their wives and other members of their families, and several stirring Gospel addresses were given.

Many of the chief officials of the G.E.R. were present, one of whom—Mr. Worsdale, chief of the locomotive department—was called on to preside. On the platform were the Sheriff of Norwich (Mr. J. F. Ranson), and many friends from city and county.

Mr. W. H. Jary, of Burlingham, was the first speaker, and in the course of his preliminary remarks said he looked upon the gathering as a wonderful sign of the times. Mr. Nettleship, assistant general manager of the G.E.R., and Mr. Dobbin, the company's land agent, were afterwards called upon to address the large company.

Mr. Dobbin remarked that thirty years ago, when he commenced his connection with the company, there were not a dozen professed Christians upon it; now there were hundreds whom it was a pleasure and a joy to meet, for they were an ornament and a blessing wherever they went. Christian love was permeating amongst them, lifting up those below and bringing down those above; he rejoiced in this meeting, and hoped it would not be the last in Norwich.

Mr. R. P. Ellis, the respected local superintendent of the Goods department, was one of the most active promoters of this very successful "Evangelistic Railway Tea-meeting," the proceedings of which were brought to a close by singing and prayer.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for the ensuing week:—Mar. 16, John x. 1—8; Mar. 17, John x. 19—30; Mar. 18, John x. 31—42; Mar. 19, John xi. 1—16; Mar. 20, John xi. 17—31; Mar. 21, John xi. 32—46; Mar. 22, John xi. 47—57.

THE BUTCHERS' FESTIVAL.—The annual festival of the London Journeymen Butchers will be held at Mr. Spurgeon's Tabernacle, Newington, on Tuesday, March 18. We believe this is the twentieth anniversary of this large and remarkable assembly. Mr. Herbert Tritton will preside, and addresses will be given by Mr. Richard Weaver, Mr. Henry Varley, and Mr. William Olney. The meeting commences at seven o'clock, and is open to the public in so far as the galleries of the Tabernacle are concerned.

THE FUTURE OF PALESTINE.

SIR,—The subject of Palestine now and then comes forward and drops, but again it is brought to the front, and each time with a renewed interest. It may be a new publication; it may be an account of the travels of a distinguished individual. Sometimes it is brought forward politically; and again by the announcement of a discovery in a newly explored district; by the report of the Syrian schools; or of missionary work of a society to assist returning Jews; or by the biography of one of England's honoured sons.

The unfolding of the future of Palestine is watched by all Christians throughout the world, and I would seek to place before your readers two questions. At the same time I would offer them for consideration, only as on a subject at present unsettled, until by the expression of different opinions an answer resting on authority may be given. I would try to avoid using Scripture for one purpose where the context would seem to apply it to another.

(1) Is there any assistance which Christians can give in reinstating the land of Palestine?

(2) Have they any duty to render such help?

To an observer of the different phases through which a new country passes before it becomes settled, the same advancement will be noticed to have been lately made in Syria.

Although not a new country it may be well called a re-newed country. From the usual quarrels created by the native tribes it has become quiet; trade is taking a stronger hold upon the population. Education is being commenced by missionary effort. An accurate survey of the country has been prepared. An influx of immigration, though small, has begun. Societies for improving the land have been formed. Together with a field of enterprise offered by a rich and undeveloped country, there are calls for help to that sympathy which exists between Christian gleaners and Christian workers.

North of Beyrout there are the American Missions; South, there are the British. The Syrian schools are influencing hundreds of children. The medical hospitals at Jaffa and Jerusalem are dissolving the antipathies of race and creed

But can work in the vineyard, used in a literal sense, become a part of Christian work and a special means of assisting the efforts already admitted to be worthy of a helping hand? There is the verse in Psalm cxxii. "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem; they shall prosper that love thee." As God works through his agents, praying would seem to imply working; at least, "love" is not a passive quality. Is. lx. 20, "And they (the Gentiles) shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the Lord." A marginal reference on the word "offering" gives Rom. xv. 16: "That I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the Gospel of God, that the offering up (margin, sacrifice) of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost." v. 27: "For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is also to minister unto them in carnal things." Ps. cii. 13, 14: "For the time to favour her, yea, the set time, is come. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones and favour the dust thereof." V. 16: "When the Lord shall build up Zion He shall appear in his glory."

Some of your readers may think that Palestine may remain as it is until that time, but I would refer them to three passages clearly relating to a previous time. Jer. xxxii. 44: "Men shall buy fields for money, and subscribe witnesses, and seal them," &c. Ezek. xxxviii. 8—12: "And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell safely"; and Ezek. xxxvi. 35: "This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden." Step by Step in Sweden.

AN interesting leaflet, describing the progress of her Mission in Spain, comes to us from Mdme. de Ramsay, of Wilhelmsro. She says:—

"Ten years have passed since the Home stood forth offering to shelter afflicted children. We have nursed seventy-five children on our property at Wilhelmsro. During these ten years we have succeeded in gaining many friends for the miserable children; above all, our own Royal Family, and especially our Princess Royal, Eugénie. In March, 1881, a Committee had been formed in the Palace at Stockholm, with the Princess as President; she took a personal interest in the matter through what she heard from us of the results of the work. Eight children were found and paid for at Wilhelmsro. In January, 1882, a bazaar was held for opening a home near Stockholm, called "Eugenia," to which contributions were sent from the whole country; and in October of that year we were happy to send the eight children back to Stockholm to that home. Besides the eight Stockholm children, fourty-two have gone out into the world to earn their own bread, or to other homes of their own, improved in health, taught many useful things, but some of them especially how to become children of God.

"Our own little flock cannot be considered as invalids any longer. We shall probably move them down to our other place, Hornsborg, a large farm in the south of Sweden. In the meantime God has led us to take up evangelistic work in the town of Jönköping. Classes for women, mill-girls, and children; Temperance work; Flower and Christmas Letter Mission, Bible and Prayer Union for adults and children, Sailors' work, Bible Hotel Mission, &c. We have a Young Women's Institute, but want to add a lodging-house to it. Being in England during the month of March, we use the opportunity of asking our loving friends for their praises and prayers."

Liverpool Strangers' Rest.

ANNIVERSARY meetings in connection with this institution, which is situated in Park-lane, were held last Friday afternoon and evening. The report was submitted and adopted:—"Seven years have now elapsed since the Liverpool Strangers' Rest was first opened. Many, we believe, have been rescued from degradation and vice through the timely invitations given to them by our workers on board their ships, and in the streets as they passed by. During the past year it has been most encouraging to notice the attendance of Spanish sailors at these meetings, on several occasions from forty to fifty being present at one time. Spaniards, who from their infancy are accustomed to witness such imposing ritual in their churches, are enraptured when they hear the simple story of the Cross. During the past year the Gospel has been preached in the Norwegian and Swedish languages twice every Sunday, and also on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, to both emigrants and sailors, with most encouraging results. The ships and emigrants' boarding-houses are regularly visited, and occasionally the sailors' lodging-houses. One night there were about 400 Scandinavian emigrants at the Rest attending the services, and our preachers have been cheered by many who have voluntarily come forward before leaving the port to tell them that during their short stay in Liverpool they have been brought to trust in the Saviour through these meetings.

"We expect that still larger numbers of emigrants will be passing through Liverpool in the year on which we have entered, and we are anxious to secure the aid of steamship owners to influence the boarding-house keepers to allow our workers to conduct the emigrants to and from the meetings. As the Rest was never intended to be exclusively for seamen, but for strangers of every land, the workers have, as each year has come round, been enabled to vary their spheres of labour according as necessity has arisen. Not the least interesting feature of the work during the last few years has been that amongst the Jews, many of whom have at various times found their way into the Rest, and there heard the glad tidings of salvation through Jesus Christ. We are in great need just now of workers, and especially of an Italian preacher."

The treasurer's statement showed the receipts for the year to have been £356 13s. 9d., and that there is now a balance in hand of £12 19s. 8d.

Addresses were delivered by Mr. Clarke Aspinall and Mr. Balfour, the former saying that the Rest was in the very position it ought to occupy, close to the docks, the Post-office, the Custom House, and the Sailors' Home, and in a main thoroughfare. How could they be more English—not to speak of Christian—in their sympathies than by giving strangers and pilgrims, chiefly engaged in the business of the sea, by which England had gained its wealth, friendly hospitality and counsel? This anniversary should result in some strength, some weft, some backbone, being given to the resources of the association.

Just now we are greatly needing funds; several of our best supporters are unable to help us this year. Thos. A. Leigh, Treasurer.

Young Men in the West.

BURLINGTON HALL, SAVILE-ROW.

LAST week Mr. Alderman Savory presided at the annual meeting of the West-end branch of the Y.M.C.A., at Prince's Hall, Piccadilly. The hall was full.

Mr. J. Pearce (Secretary) read the report, which stated that the annual expenditure of this branch amounted to £900. The association offered young men intellectual advantages and social enjoyment in the way of music, French shorthand, elocution, library for circulation and reference, and reading-room supplied with newspapers, periodicals, and writing materials, to which was added a refreshment-room. The most encouraging feature of their work had been the Missions conducted by Mr. E. J. Kennedy and Mr. Stanley P. Smith. Over 1000 young men had attended the services. The success of these services was mainly attributable to earnest prayer and devotion of heart and aim exercised by God's servants. The hospitality and social intercourse which had attracted large numbers of strangers to the West Branch of the association had again proved very successful. The report showed that one of the chief items of the year's work was Bible teaching, which had been carried on in this West Branch every Sunday afternoon without intermission for thirty-eight years. The Committee particularly desired that all the young men of the district should enjoy the privilege of belonging to this conversational Bible-class, where their difficulties may be solved and their trials and temptations looked at in the light of God's truth.

The Chairman expressed his sympathy with this important and valuable work. There were many points in the Association for which they were very thankful. They all knew of the terrible temptations which surrounded every young man at the present time, and into these this association did their best to prevent young men from falling.

Captain Verney, R.N., moved the adoption of the report; this was seconded by Mr. G. Williams, who congratulated the Committee on their choice of a new hall, a new chairman, and they hoped to make a new friend of him.

Rev. Canon Fleming, in an eloquent speech, dwelt on the word "Christian;" and Rev. H. P. Hughes chose the words, "Sincere, Social, Sympathy, Sanguine," with their place in the Christian life.

HAMMERSMITH.

The inaugural meeting of the Hammersmith Branch of the Y.M.C.A. was held last week at Cadby Hall, High-street, West Kensington. The hall, which will accommodate about 900 persons seated, was filled. The Earl of Shaftesbury presided. The Secretary read a statement setting forth that the branch was formed on the 8th of May last, when a lease for fourteen years was taken of Wycombe House, in King-street, East. There were about seventy members, and a Bible-class and various other classes had been formed. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Colmer Symes, Mr. J. H. Fordham, Rev. J. Macnought, Dr. Sinclair Paterson, Mr. T. A. Denny, Rev. H. Webb-Peploe, Capt. the Hon. Hobart Hampton, and the noble Chairman.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Dublin.—Since the appointment of Revs. Henry Dening and Augustus Tabuteau at Baggotrath Church, the church has been crowded and the prayer-meetings and Bible-classes largely attended. Prayer is desired for their work.

Richard Weafer at Edinboro' Castle.—Another week of mighty work for God. Husbands and wives, and in some cases whole families, have been found in the inquiry-room, and very many have entered into the rest of the Gospel. The meetings close this week with a meeting for the testimony of converts on Wednesday, and a farewell meeting on Thursday.

Sedgley.—Mr. John Elliott has just concluded a fortnight's Mission at the Temperance Hall, where a most prosperous work is being carried on by Mr. Homer. The attendance increased at each service. Upwards of twenty professed to have trusted in Christ as their Saviour, one of whom was in a state of intoxication the previous day. A large number have been deeply awakened.

Girlington.—Messrs. Mateer and Parker have been conducting a series of evangelistic services in connection with this church with blessed results. A spirit of anxiety has been aroused in many, especially the elder scholars of the Sunday-school; and not a few have been led to the Saviour. Some eighty or more persons were dealt with in the inquiry-room, in addition to a large number of children under fourteen years of age.

G. J. Knight.

Abinger.—A week of Church Army meetings were recently held here by Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Russell, of Tonbridge. The schoolroom was crowded, and at the closing meeting over fifty came forward to receive cards in testimony that they had been blessed. A great number also joined the Abinger Temperance Society and put on the blue ribbon. Evangelistic meetings have been continued by Mr. Wm. Sharp and Mr. Alfred Furse.

Cox Green, Bolton.—During the past three weeks wonderfully successful services have been held in the large cotton mill at this place, arranged by Mr. J. Garnett, of Manchester. The meetings have been conducted by Mr. W. J. Taylor. From the very first meeting the interest has increased, many have publicly professed their desire and determination to spend the remainder of their lives in God's service. Mr. Taylor goes to the Circus, Middlesborough, Yorkshire, from March 17 to April 6. Prayer is earnestly desired for a great blessing on his labours.

Hertfordshire.—During the last month Lady Sebright, assisted by Miss Hamond, has been labouring as an evangelist in Hertfordshire, where there have been several crowded meetings, and apparently great blessing. The meetings held in different villages round Sir John Sebright's residence in Herts, ended by a very large one at Luton, in the Town Hall, where about 1200 listened intently to the Gospel message; hundreds were sent away from the doors. The evangelists were warmly invited to return, and to open the Plait Hall to the 2000 or 3000 that it would hold.

Vale of Leven, N.B.—The good work here is still going on, and at every meeting there has been more or less fruit, and not a few very striking cases. Some time ago a young woman was brought to Christ in one of the meetings, who shortly afterwards became seriously ill. On her death-bed she explained the way of salvation to a companion, which was blessed to her conversion. She in turn became concerned about a young man, who was also led to decide for Christ, and began to work. Thus the work is spreading by young converts seeking the conversion of friends and companions.

Bonhill, March 3. T. Collins.

Terrington St. Clement.—On February 24, Mr. Henry Murch concluded a series of evangelistic services at this place. The congregation grew in numbers daily, and there is evidence of a more satisfactory kind that Mr. Murch's visit has been owned of God. The several denominations in the place and persons outside them all mustered harmoniously at the meetings. On March 2, two services were conducted in the schoolroom by Mr. Murch. Though the notice was short large numbers were present. Many have to thank God for these services. Truly the name of the Lord was magnified in the addresses and in their blessed effects. At the close of the evening meeting those who had received spiritual benefit warmly shook the hand of Mr. Murch at the suggestion of the vicar. Marlborough Crosse, Vicar.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—For great blessing on a recent Mission at Gloucester.——For blessing on the work at Trout Lake, Ontario.

PRAYER.—That suitable men may be raised up for officers in the Church Army.——For special services by Mr. Opie Rodway at Caerwent, to commence on March 15.——For services by the Rev. A. J. Jones, at Stonehouse, Gloucestershire, from March 10 to 15.——For blessing on meetings at Castle Cary.——For blessing on meetings being held at Middlesborough, by W. Taylor.—For a blessing on the Butchers' Festival on the 18th inst.

PLACES.—For the success and prosperity of the Aberdeen Tract Repository.

"Sorrowful, yet Rejoicing."

DEAR FRIEND,—Our dear son James died a most peaceful and triumphant death on the 19th inst. Since returning home from Holland last October his health gradually failed, chills and fever, with an increasing cough, continued, which terminated in a sort of bronchial quick consumption.

Never did we witness a more patient illness or cheerful submission to God's will. Not a murmur escaped his lips from first to last. All his regrets were in leaving father, mother, and brother. "But it's all right; I am ready to go." Among the many expressions which he was privileged to make were the following:—"I have travelled and seen about all I care to of this world, and now begin the struggles of life. I shall escape them all, and go to explore my heavenly home." "Father, I am glad I have always sung hymns with you. Keep on singing them. We'll be in time to sing together again in heaven." "Tell everybody I die a Christian; 'tis glorious to die with Christ." "Beautiful! I breathe out in faith my last sigh."

Our grief would be more than we could bear were it not for the comforts of grace, and his victorious entrance into rest. Our hearts are too full; we can write no more now.—Yours in Christian bonds,

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Phillips.

A New Hall for the West-End.

POWIS HALL, TALBOT-ROAD.

THIIS new and beautifully adapted hall, situated at the back of the Talbot Tabernacle, Notting-hill, was opened on Thursday last by the Earl of Shaftesbury, who laid the foundation-stone some months ago. There was a goodly gathering of sympathising friends, including many well-known, earnest Christian workers.

The hall will comfortably seat nearly 500 persons, whilst underneath are several commodious class-rooms, kitchen, &c. It is intended to serve as the lecture-hall and schoolroom of the future building, which as soon as funds are in hand will replace the present iron structure. We believe it is the desire of our friend Mr. Frank White that Powis Hall should be closely identified with sound, earnest Gospel work, both at home and abroad, on purely undenominational lines. Something of our brother's intention respecting it may be gathered from the fact that its house-warming is to take place next week in a Foreign Missionary Conference, particulars of which will be found in our list of Forthcoming Events. The cost of the hall, together with furniture and fittings, is about £2600; the whole of this amount has been received through the voluntary offerings of Christians far and near. Mr. White is steadily adhering to his determination not to go into debt. He will not therefore commence the larger building, though so greatly needed, until the £4000 required for its erection has been either subscribed or promised. The noble Earl who presided, as well as the speakers who supported him at the meetings last week, warmly pleaded for such ready help as would allow Mr. White to commence building in the course of the next twelve months.

Whether our friend is enabled to do this or not, he cannot but be cheered with the genuine and heartfelt sympathy which was shown him on Thursday. Mr. T. A. Denny, Mr. Charles Graham, Dr. Sinclair Paterson, Mr. Varley, Mr. R. C. Morgan, Mr. Russell Hurditch, and Mr. W. G. Habershon, spoke in warmest commendation of his effort. Mr. George Williams presided over the evening meeting, and so great was the number of people assembled that an adjournment to the Tabernacle was necessary. Good and earnest words were spoken by the excellent chairman, Mr. Frank Bevan, Hon. A. F. Kinnaird, Mr. R. H. Hill, and Captain Hobart Hampden. The offerings during the day amounted, we are informed, to £50 in cash and £550 in promises.

May we venture the hope that those of our readers who believe Mr. White's effort calculated to further the interests of sound doctrine and to promote the kingdom and glory of our Lord Jesus Christ, will endeavour to supplement this amount. We shall be very pleased to receive their offerings, or they may be sent direct to Mr. Frank H. White, 164, Westbourne-terrace, W.

Letters to the Editor.

CURE FOR DRUNKENNESS.

Dear Sir,—In reply to the query of "H. J. M." in your issue of to-day, "Cinchona Rubra" (Red Tincture of Cinchona) is considered the most powerful tonic known. Although there are several preparations of it, varying considerably in strength, it is administered in doses of half to a whole teaspoonful in water, three or four times per diem. I have known it prescribed for those recovering from drunkenness, with good effect, but believe there is only one cure for "habitual drunkards," viz., taking the pledge of total abstinence and sticking to it, which they can only expect to do by real earnest prayer to God for help.—Yours faithfully, H. S. Wade.

Fulham, Feb. 28.

Sir,—In reply to your correspondent "H. J. M.," I beg to say that a drunkard of eight years' standing was cured about thirteen months ago by taking Cinchona rubra, the second bottle (half-pint) giving him a dislike even to the smell of drink. A medical man here has another successful cure.

The patients must be desirous of cure, and abstain entirely from all intoxicants. The man I speak of says its effect is simply marvellous. He is now an earnest Christian, full of gratitude to God for having plucked him as a brand out of the fire. If your correspondent desires further information, I will gladly furnish it.—Yours, &c.,

Claremont, Alfred-road, A. J. Wilson.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

Dear Sir,—I would beg for space to reply as briefly as possible to your correspondent "W. P."

I never said that everything which is not a prophesy must be a command. But I still hold that when God says "shall," it implies either the one or the other. "W. P." quotes a number of passages which he says are neither prophecies nor commands. I should call them prophecies; and I think most people would do the same. But I have given my reason for not regarding Gen. ix. 6 as a prophecy.

"W. P." thinks it "quite as right and logical" to consider the penalties of the Mosaic law binding upon the present generation as "anything contained in the covenant of Noah." I may leave your readers to judge whether a code of laws given to one particular nation, and of which many parts are universally acknowledged to be applicable to that nation only, can be as generally binding on those who are not of that nation as a command addressed to the whole human race.

"W. P." says that if the passage in Gen. ix. is binding on us, the context requires us to extend it to animals as well as men. Certainly it does; cases of accident being always excepted.

When "W. P." says that "Love and mercy and forgiveness are the characteristics of the New Testament dispensation, not vengeance and blood-shedding," he repeats the fallacy which I have already pointed out, of ignoring the essential distinction between the duties of a ruler and those of a private individual. In one and the same epistle, Paul, addressing individual Christians, says: "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord:" whilst speaking of the ruler, he says, "He is the minister of God: a revenger to execute wrath on him that doeth evil."

Calvin, in his "Institutes," says: "The law of the Lord forbids to kill; but, that murder may not go unpunished, the Lawgiver Himself puts the sword into the hands of his ministers, that they may employ it against all murderers." And a little farther on he quotes Rom. xiii. 4, as proving it.

Why it should be called "a strange distortion of Scripture" to quote the words, "He beareth not the sword in vain," as applicable to the question of capital punishment, I fail to see. A sword is not the appropriate emblem of fines, scourging, or imprisonment (though all legal penalties should be abolished on the principles which "W. P." lays down); but it is the natural emblem of capital punishment. If Paul totally disapproved of capital punishment, it would have been just as easy for him to use the word "rod" as "sword," and much more suitable to his meaning.

Dean Alford says on this text: "In ancient and modern times the sword has been carried before sovereigns. It betokens the power of capital punishment, and the reference to it here is among the many testimonies borne by Scripture against the attempt to abolish the infliction of the penalty of death in Christian states."—Truly yours,

Woking, March 7. HORACE NOEL.

"APOSTOLIC METHODS."

DEAR BROTHER,—In THE CHRISTIAN of Jan. 24 there appeared a report of an address by our good brother Reginald Radcliffe on the above subject. I thought its striking statements would, ere this, have called forth correspondence from far abler pens than mine. A subsequent speaker at the same meeting said, "It would be a blessed thing if all the supporters of Missions in London would come to a close consideration of the points that had been referred to by Mr. Radcliffe." By a reference to these points (the whole article is worth re-reading carefully) it will be seen—

First, the Apostles aimed at gathering and forming living churches, rather than buildings of stone and lime. I give the gist. How much time, anxiety, and money at the present day are spent on piles of dead material. I have seen, in islands not far from our own shores, a blessed work of ingathering, and very few shillings spent on buildings—cottages, barns, the hill-side, or the sea-shore, being our mission halls and churches. First get the living souls, these will soon find a temple in which to worship God.

But the more important point raised was, that the Apostles, having been the means of gathering a people out of the world, ordained elders or overseers in the churches, told them to feed the flock, labouring with their own hands for their personal support, as the Apostle by example had shown them. We know how these assemblies became not only able to edify one another, but of the Thessalonians he could say, "From you sounded out the Word of the Lord."

Let the people of God consider: (1) Are the methods referred to really apostolic, or, rather, are they God's methods? (2) Are these methods binding on the Church in every age and country?

It is very essential sometimes to improve on human invention, for thereby perfection is gained; but God's methods are perfect to begin with, and to attempt improving upon them is as impolitic as it is impious. I confess myself one of those old-fashioned Christians who believe the nearer we keep to the Book, the nearer we get to perfect ways. The Tabernacle of old was to be built strictly after the divine pattern. "Take heed how ye build" is a warning much needed, though little heeded. Hoary tradition or present utility, rather than God's Word, apparently guides many workers.

It will at once be evident that the gain in "Apostolic methods" over present-day ones are (1st) The evangelist having seen believers gathered to the Lord, leaves them in charge of men whom the Holy Ghost hath made overseers, and thus feels himself free to push on to make fresh conquests for Christ. The evangelist was a man who moved about from place to place at the call of God and of a perishing world's need, heralding the glad tidings of salvation to every creature, quite unlike many of our modern missionaries (all honour to God-sent ones!) who settle down for a lifetime in one spot, and attempt to fill the offices of schoolmaster, magistrate, pastor, and evangelist.

But, in the second place, not only are those methods a gain in freeing the evangelist in order to fresh aggressive work, but, what a blessing to the Church itself! As a child is nursed only until it can use its own limbs, so churches must not be treated as if they were ordained to perpetual infancy. Pastors and teachers are given, by the great head of the Church, "for the perfecting of the saints unto the work of ministering, unto the building up of the body of Christ" (R.V.). Thus we read of the Church at Rome being "able to admonish one another." The saints at Corinth were exhorted, "Desire earnestly that ye may prophesy." The Apostle adds, "For ye all can prophesy one by one, that all may learn and all may be comforted."

The young church of the Thessalonians not only "sounded forth the word of the Lord," but also comforted and edified one another. Thus it is clear that these churches, gathered out of heathenism, were taught to edify one another, and, as a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices and to hold forth the Word of Life.

You mention in the same issue some thousands of churches in America "without a minister." Ah! sir, my heart is grieved to hear such a statement. Can it be true, that these churches are assemblies of living souls as they ought to be? and can it be true that, after eighteen centuries, the Church is further back than in the first century, when, as we have seen, they were able to build upon one another? Surely the principles in 1 Cor. xii. and xiv. are not obsolete. I know many will say, "The thing would never work." My answer is, "Let us do what God bids us, and leave the working to Him." The resources remain with us to which the elders at Ephesus were commended—viz., "God, and the Word of his grace, which is able to build you up." OLD PATHS.

Notices of Books, &c.

FOOTSTEPS OF TRUTH, edited by C. R. HURDITCH (3d., J. F. Shaw & Co.), continues to provide articles on Christian life and walk, with copious notes for Bible study.

THE CHRISTIAN TEACHER AND HIS WORK is a small pamphlet by MARY HAYWARD, and contains good counsel for that profession. It may be had of Mr. Morcom, Market-street, Liskeard.

NOTES FOR BIBLE STUDY in union with the Bible Reading and Prayer Alliance is a useful and suggestive publication which comes to us from across the Atlantic, and deserves warm commendation. The yearly volume is full of information on Bible themes, and is published by S. R. Briggs at the Toronto Willard Tract Society's repository.

THE SHIPWRECKED MARINER. Edited by W. R. BUCK. T. Fisher Unwin. Sixpence. This quarterly maritime magazine has much interesting reading relative to life at sea. There are some good illustrations, and a record of the labours of the "Shipwrecked Mariners' Society," the office of which is at Hibernia-chambers, London-bridge.

THE PSALMS IN PRIVATE DEVOTION. By G. STRINGER ROWE. 2s. Woolmer, 66, Paternoster-row. These short and pithy comments on the Psalms are full of interest and profit to devout readers. Suggestions of a most helpful kind abound in every page. Bible readers will find the notes very valuable as aids to devotion, and not seldom will meet with good critical observations, although the author disclaims any attempt to take the critic's place.

ON HIS DAY: A MORNING PORTION FOR EACH SABBATH IN THE YEAR. By G. STRINGER ROWE. 1s. 6d. Like the preceding volume, this deserves well of the reviewer who judges of it from its own standpoint. It aims at strengthening and deepening spiritual life, and is admirably adapted for that purpose. Brevity and point mark the author's utterances all through.

PRECEPTS FOR PREACHERS, IN THE PULPIT AND OUT OF IT. Compiled from many authors, by Rev. W. GRIFFITHS. 2s. 6d. T. Woolmer. This volume consists wholly of extracts from various writers bearing upon the office, qualifications, preparation, and style of the Christian ministry. There are also chapters on the conduct of public service, efficiency in preaching, and on usefulness and success. Wide reading, careful collation, skilful grouping, and practical point mark the book from beginning to end. The reader is delighted with numerous beauties of thought and expression, and finds himself in the midst of a host of God's worthies, past and present, whose words "fitly spoken, are like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

THE WELCOME. 6d. Partridge & Co. A coloured frontispiece, representing the Ducal Palace of Venice, adorns the March number of this excellent home-circle magazine. Besides other good articles and stories copiously illustrated, there is a very good article on General Gordon, with portrait. The "British Workman," "Friendly Visitor," "Band of Hope Review," "Family Friend," &c., are all worthy of the reputation they have earned.

CLIFFORD'S TRIAL; OR, THE CONQUEST OF PATIENCE. By YOTTY OSBORNE. Hatchards. This interesting posthumous story for young people aims at teaching that we should not judge others before knowing them. Making up one's mind hastily often leads to difficulties. It gives a good idea of how a step-mother surmounted the trials of her new home. As no direct religious teaching is given, we must imagine for ourselves that her motive was that "love could conquer all."

DRIERSTOCK; OR, LIFE ON THE FRONTIER. By MISS L. BATES. 1s. 6d. T. Woolmer. A cheerful story recording the progress of Gospel work in one of the newly-settled mushroom cities of America, showing forth whole-hearted devotion to Christ and the influence of consecrated lives over the powers of evil. The American Home Mission Board is doing good service in planting such centres of good in places where the restraining influence of godly precedent is entirely wanting.

WILFRID HEADLEY; OR, HOW TEETOTALISM CAME TO ELLESMERE. By S. J. FITZGERALD. 2s. T. Woolmer. A truthful narrative dealing with the early days of the Temperance movement, when people were just beginning to hear of the new departure taken by the "Seven wise men of Preston," which has had such a blessed and continuing influence. The story is freshly told and forms a veritable magazine of argument and information. It should be largely used in Temperance libraries.

One of the most valuable serial works that has lately issued from the teeming press of Messrs. Cassell & Co. is their ENCYCLOPÆDIC DICTIONARY, now being published in monthly shilling parts. A more lucid, exhaustive, succinct, and well-furnished work of reference to the words in the English language could not be desired by the general reader. It is far more than a dictionary in the accepted sense of the term. The origin and history of the words are briefly stated, while the profuse illustrative engravings and quotations greatly enhance the value and interest of the work. No Englishman who aims at knowing and understanding his mother tongue ought to be without it.

PANTOMIME WAIFS. 5s. Partridge & Co. With preface by Lord Shaftesbury. In appealing for assistance on behalf of the hundreds of children who, often at very tender age, go upon the stage, Miss Barlee reveals facts which may well arouse our so-called Christian public. If parents knew the amount of physical suffering as well as moral evil to which these young lives are exposed in order to perfect their performances, they would not allow their children to derive amusement from such a source. This is no narrow-minded work, for the authoress, from her own experience, concedes much to the claims of public amusement, and acknowledges the great courtesy she has often received from theatrical managers while pursuing her work. But she gives no uncertain sound as to the evils connected with the stage.

EARLY CHURCH HISTORY TO THE DEATH OF CONSTANTINE. Compiled by the late EDWARD BACKHOUSE. Edited and enlarged by Charles Tylor. 16s. Hamilton, Adams &]Co. An interesting and intelligently written history of the Early Church, viewed from the standpoint of the Society of Friends, compiled in the closing years of his life by the late Edward Backhouse, of Sunderland, and finished and prepared for the press by his friend Charles Tylor. Many who knew Edward Backhouse will purchase this volume as a memorial of him. Inside the Society of Friends he was deservedly looked up to, whilst outside of that communion thousands knew him as a prince among philanthropists, employing his great wealth in the service of God with wisdom, munificence, and catholicity. The volume is profusely illustrated with photographic and other pictures, and prefaced by a brief biographical sketch, with portrait, of the compiler.

Notes from Ontario.

DEAR SIR, — Allow me to express my renewed thankfulness to the kind friend who so regularly sends me The Christian. The paper is a welcome weekly visitor, and its cheering news and crisp articles often cheer and help me in my work. The accounts of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's campaign in London have afforded me great gratification and I trust some inspiration.

Your readers will be glad to learn that we are not without tokens of Divine favour in this far-off—and at this season—cold land. The power of God's truth and God's Spirit is not dependent upon climate or locality. During the present winter the work of the Lord has proceeded with gratifying rapidity in many places, notably in the cities of Brantford and St. Catharine, where many have been gathered into the fold. Here, too, God has favoured us with quite a number of conversions in all the dissenting churches. The work is still going on. In my own sphere I have had more encouragement than for a considerable time before. There are many yet unblest, and many discouragements; but God is able to make his grace to abound. There is ample room for many labourers in this great dominion, especially in the great North-West. May the Lord of the harvest send more labourers into his harvest. Robt. Lennie.

Mission Appeals.

Walsall-wood.—Rev. T. Reakes appeals for help to continue a coffee-house work, which has been the means of much blessing. He needs £60, for which he is solely responsible. Address: The Vicarage, Walsall-wood.

Lydbrook, Gloucestershire.—Mr. A. W. Latham would be glad of help towards clearing off a debt of £40 in connection with the Baptist Church here. A good work is going on among tinworkers. Address as above.

Farnham.—A few Christians carrying on Mission work here are desirous of building a hall, the cottage being too small for the number who attend. A gentleman has given the ground, and Mr. Wilbraham Taylor commends the work. Help may be sent to Mr. W. G. Smith, Moor Park, Farnham.

China.—Rev. R. W. Stewart, Foochow, China, would be glad [of sympathy in building a Bible-woman's Training Home. He needs £60 to complete the building. Mrs. M. Fagg (formerly Miss Foster), Homeside, Duppas-hill-terrrce, Croydon, will be glad to receive and acknowledge contributions.

Destitute Girls' Home, Galway.—This Home has provided food and shelter, and secular and Christian instruction, for those who had none to help them, for twenty-one years. Funds are needed for enlargement, and will be thankfully acknowledged by Mrs. Eliza Shawe-Taylor, Castle Taylor, Ardrahan, co. Galway, Ireland.

Southwark.—Mr. A. Higgins pleads for help on behalf of Long-lane Mission, S.E. A good work has been done the past seven years. The Mission Hall is filled from Sunday to Sunday, and there are seven meetings held weekly. There is a need of £18 for hall repairs. Donations will be thankfully received by A. Higgins, Secretary, 38, Long-lane, Southwark.

MISSION WORK IN SOUTH-EAST LONDON.

To the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN."

OUR FREE TEA FUND.—Dear Readers,—The last Free Tea, held on Jan. 16, was such a grand success that we desire to give another on Easter Monday to about 300 people. One poor fellow told me he had not tasted food for two days, and many others expressed their thanks and joy at such a grand treat. Our friends will kindly remember 6d. will give a good tea to one poor person, or £7 10s. for the 300; and when we think of the large sums of money spent foolishly every day, surely it is not waste to make our poorer friends happy. After tea we shall have a public meeting, inviting all our subscribers to come that can, and judge for themselves if we deserve the help I ask from the readers of The Christian. I heartily wish many would come who love Mission work. One gentleman, after asking me many questions, the next day sent me £5 to help us on.

COLLECTING CARDS for 1884.—Will every reader of this appeal write for a card? I only ask you to put one penny a week on it. You may get a few others to do the some. Do you think, at the Judgment Day, you will regret having helped me to win precious souls to Jesus? Never was our work in a more prosperous state. We have this year already received 35 new members to the Mission. Every service brings fresh blessing, and never did I need help so much as now. Our roof must be repaired, as the water comes in. I will do the work myself if I can get time; but even then it will cost several pounds, and I am engaged every night up to April, so you will know I have plenty to do to be ready for the night. Every month I need £30 to go on with the work. Will you please help me?

Bazaar.—Dear Lady Friends,—I know I am a great bother to you, but this year I want our Annual Bazaar to be the best we have ever had. Every year the work increases, and also the expenses. If you will be kind enough to make up a small parcel, and send it to me by June 30. Small or large parcels will be gladly received, or remnants that our good friends can make up, for I have plenty of willing workers. No minister has a better people, and, although it is hard work to get the money, I love my people, and would not leave them for £1000 a year.

P.S.—Aprons or ladies' underclothing always sell well.

Left-off Clothing for the Poor.—One lady sent us a box of hats. God bless you for them They look so nice on our people. Another sent me some new ulsters; they are doing good service also; every parcel has now been given away. Will other friends kindly look up their old things? If you sell them they don't fetch much. Surely it is better to give them to the respectable poor. I always take care professional beggars don't get them.

Extract from one of Mr. Spurgeon's Reports.—"In Gordon-road, Peckham, our student, Mr. Linnecar, an earnest evangelist fresh from the sea, has gathered a people together, fitted up an arch with his own hands, and formed a Church. Here is the nucleus of a hopeful community, which may the Lord multiply exceedingly! We confess that our joy is great when we see the working people drawn to attend the means of grace, and to take an interest in extending the Redeemer's kingdom. Men like Mr. Linnecar seem to gather a congregation better than some of those who are more refined, but have less energy. A railway-arch is a poor makeshift; but if the Lord will give his blessing, though the beginning be small, the latter end will greatly increase. Mr. Linnecar does a great deal of open-air work."

The Rev. C. H. Spurgeon was right. The Lord is blessing us. Has He not removed us from the railway-arch to a nice Mission Chapel? He will yet do more for us if we trust in Him. I will work; you must send the money.

I shall be glad to conduct special services in town or country any Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday in April. Expenses must be paid, as my purse is not full; many friends come out to hear the old sailor, who will not take any notice of the word Reverend. Letters should be addressed to yours faithfully,

G. W. LINNECAR

A CRY FOR HELP FROM THE WEST.

Very earnestly do the Committee of the LATYMER ROAD MISSION appeal for Help. The Funds are quite exhausted. The various agencies are at work as usual. Visitors are always welcome at the Infant Nursery and Ragged Boys' Shelter.

Several hundreds of pounds are needed at once, so as to free the Committee from pressing claims.

Messrs. Morgan & Scott will receive subscriptions, which may be sent also to Aulay Macaulay, Hon. Sec., Latymer Road Mission, Blechynden-street, Notting-hill, W.

THE ANCHORAGE.

Heb. vi. 19.

Special House of Shelter for respectable young women in trouble.

For full description of the work of the Anchorage Mission, with rules for admission to the Anchorage House, apply by letter to Mrs. H. Stuart Wortley (President of the Ladies' Committee), Rosslyn House, Grove End-road, N.W. Subscriptions may be sent to Mrs. H. Stuart Wortley, to any member of the Committee, or to Messrs. Morgan & Scott.

OUR LITTLE LADS.

HOMES FOR LITTLE BOYS,

FARNINGHAM and SWANLEY.

FUNDS are still URGENTLY NEEDED to feed, clothe, and educate 320 homeless little ones in the Cottage Homes at Farningham, and to complete the new Homes for Orphans at Swanley.

Will each reader of this do something?

Contributions of any amount most thankfully received by the Bankers, Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smiths, 1, Lombard-street; or by the Secretary,

Miscellaneous.

ANXIOUS INQUIRERS are again earnestly invited to write. Many have received blessing.
Jno. vi. 40. Evangelist, Clapham, S.W.

"Letter to the Rev. Robert Dawson, Secretary of the London City Mission, on the dismissal, by the Committee of the Mission, of Mr Samuel Ship, one of its missionaries, apparently as the result of his having recently adopted higher views than he formerly held of the extent of deliverance from sin offered to us in the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." By James Pillans Wilson, Local Superintendent in the Mission.

Any desirous of obtaining a copy of this letter can do so by writing to me at the undernoted address, sending 4d. for the price and postage, or without money if not well able to send it. But my immediate object in this advertisement is to obtain employment for Mr. Ship. For it is surely a reflection on the Church of God that a first-class missionary should remain unemployed only for believing and daring openly to avow his belief that "if we walk in the light . . . the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

Mr. Ship can have the highest testimonials from the Committee and other Officers of the Mission, and other Christian friends, as to his personal Christian character and his devotedness to his work. J. P. Wilson,
2, Lake-terrace, Wandsworth-common, London, S.W.

I must here acknowledge, as I have no other means of doing so, the receipt of an anonymous registered letter to my care for Mr. Ship containing £3; for which he returns his hearty thanks to the unknown giver, and all the more because of the cautionary texts accompanying the gift.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

CASE of MR. ROBERT HOWE. DISEASED LUNG (APEX of RIGHT).

Fifteen months ago this patient, then living at Hobart-place, Eton-square, came to Coombe Lodge, suffering with all the symptoms of Phthisis. On examination the apex of the right lung was found to be diseased. Full advice was given.

For two months he continued the treatment, then, being better, left off, and (as is too frequently the case) not having persevered sufficiently to conquer the foe, relapsed, and came again to me in the summer of last year. Also he corresponded with me afterwards for several months.

In a letter dated October 19 he says: "I have very great pleasure in bearing testimony to the efficacy of your treatment of Consumption. I am now enjoying good health. Your remedies shall have my warmest sympathy and recommendation to others.—Mill Cottage, Neyland, Colchester."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

BOOKS FOR ENQUIRERS AND CONVERTS.

Young Converts;

Or, Beginners in Zion's Ways. By Rev. R. BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"I have been continually asked by young converts where they could get a book in which they might find advice that would be helpful to them. This book seemed just the thing needed at this time. I have known the author, Rev. Dr. Boyd, for many years as a dear father in Israel. I have read his work carefully, and recommend it to all young Christians for prayerful meditation." D. L. Moody

The Way of Life.

A Book for Enquirers. By Rev. ROBERT BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth Boards, 1s.

"About fifteen years ago this little book attracted my notice. I read it with interest, and felt so much profited that I re-read it several times, and then circulated hundreds of copies among the soldiers during the American war. The number that then seemed blessed through reading the book has induced me to ask Messrs. Morgan & Scott to republish it, hoping that it may be the means of good in this country, as it has been in America." D. L. Moody

Thoughts and Reflections on the Person and Work of Christ. By ALEXANDER DICKSON. This book was printed at the express desire of Mr. D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"The volume sets forth Jesus very much in Scriptural language, for we have counted over 1340 passages of Holy Writ, chastely and lovingly interwoven in the discourses. Throughout, Jesus is the subject of delightful meditation, affection, and adoration." The Methodist.

Addresses to Young Men.

By Rev. DANIEL BAKER. With Preface by D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"These discourses were designed to be of an awakening character. They were preached (in substance) in numerous revivals, and were blessed to the hopeful conversion of many precious souls, of whom some fifty or more have become ministers of the Gospel. May He who was pleased to bless these discourses when they came from the pulpit, bless them also now." AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

John Wesley:

HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

By JOHN W. KIRTON, LL.D.,

Author of "Happy Homes, and How to make Them."

"There are many lives of Mr. Wesley, and he who writes another must necessarily borrow from Mr. Tyerman's massive work. Dr. Kirton, whom we always associate with 'Buying your own Cherries,' has compiled a shilling book, which is published at the office of THE CHRISTIAN, and contains in a handy form all that the bulk of our people need to know of the great Methodist. The work is very well done; the book is eminently readable, and will be sure to command attention. To stimulate our own friends to get the biography, we give the following anecdotes, which will be new to many."—Sword and Trowel, March, 1884.

"This 'LIFE OF WESLEY' is precisely what it is intended to be—an interesting, condensed account of one of England's most popular men, adapted to popular use."
Christian Commonwealth, January 24.

By J. R. ANDREWS,

Author of "The Life of Oliver Cromwell to the Death of Charles I."

In cloth (with Portrait), 1s.

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 5s.

"Whitefield was not a framer of discipline, not a leader of a sect, not a founder of societies, not a ruler of men, but pre-eminently a winner of souls. Would that such preachers were multiplied in the present day! We thank Mr. Andrews for this season able addition to our religious biography. No young preacher or student should be without it. But it possesses an interest far beyond any special class, and deserves a wide and general circulation."—Methodist Recorder.

MAGNETISM IN REFERENCE TO CHILDREN'S AILMENTS.

Of the value of Magnetism in the various affections of children it is impossible to speak too highly. The petulance and fretfulness of the little ones arise not from natural peevishness, but from the irritability consequent upon some nervous derangement. Cross children will be found to be sickly children, and fretfulness is often, to the scientific eye, the clearest symptom of disease. Whatever allays irritability or regulates the functional processes must, in such cases, be invaluable. A correspondent, writing to us, says: "My little boy was born with hoarseness and rattling in the throat, which more or less continued for nine months, during which time we had not a good night's rest. From the time your appliances were put on he began to amend, and after a little while he lost the symptoms altogether. My brother's little girl appeared to have chronic croup, which came on when she was only four months old, and after two months, treatment, different doctors quite gave the child up, thinking she must be suffocated, her breathing being so difficult. On adopting your treatment there was soon a marked improvement, which continued till the child got quite well. Both children are now strong and healthy."

It is thus possible to explain the efficacy of Odo-Magnetic treatment without resorting to the ingenious theories on which some persons expend a considerable amount of so-called logic. We refer to the supposition that the cures recorded have been effected by the faith or imagination of the patient. A large proportion of our patients have made trial of Odo-Magnetic treatment when despairing of cure from any remedy, and after having consulted physicians during fifteen or twenty-five years with a great hereditary faith in medicine. Yet in numbers of such cases we have been favoured with signal success, so that the insinuation itself conveys a free admission—none the less genuine because unintentional—that Magnetic treatment does effect cures, not by faith, but, as we assert, by the result of actual specific influence, because the cure itself cannot be explained by any action other than that of Magnetism. Other means are resorted to with considerable faith and confidence in their remedial power, yet fail in numberless instances to produce the decidedly permanent results which Magnetism—through its vitalising influence, resorted to at a patient's utmost extremity—often effects in the Paralysed, the Epileptic, the Dyspeptic, the Asthmatic, and sufferers from Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Bronchitis, Nervous or Muscular Weakness, and kindred maladies.

From Mr. BANNISTER, 18, Grosvenor-street, Camberwell-road, S.E.

"The following is an extract from a private letter just arrived from a cousin of mine in Sydney, Australia, in which you may feel interested:—

"'My time has been taken up for the past fortnight in nursing dear baby, who has been very ill ever since Christmas Day with dysentery, which afterwards turned to diarrhœa and sickness, and he wasted away till it became quite painful to dress or nurse him, he could not even sit upright. I remembered that I had an appliance by me which Cousin Millie gave me for Ada some years since, and that, applied to his back, very soon strengthened him, and he could soon sit up a little, and I am thankful to tell you now he has begun to pick up flesh, and looks quite bright and cheerful again. Many people advised different remedies, as usual, and some thought he could not recover.'

"The appliance mentioned was the same which you supplied to me for our little boy some years ago, which you may perhaps remember. It had lain by some years, and then was given to my cousin as stated."

Letters commendatory of Mr. Garratt's treatment by Magneto-Electricity have been received from hundreds of persons, in all classes of society. A private list of 850 names as referees can be had on application. Consultation free, personally, or by letter. B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

CHRIST REVEALING THE FATHER.*

By DR. OSWALD DYKES.

WHAT an astounding claim for any man to make: "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father!" Hardly less astounding is the fact that eighteen centuries of Christendom have owned the claim, and bowed down before this Man as the embodiment and likeness of the Divine. Could one man have dared to put such words in another man's mouth, if He had not used them? Or would the ages have bowed to the words, if his life had not rendered them credible? The belief that Jesus did reflect the moral glory of God in a quite unapproachable way is at least no modern one. Years before this fourth Gospel was penned, Paul had expressed it in an unsuspected letter of his, as the faith even then of the Christian community. He wrote: "Christ is the image of God!" He wrote again: "The light of the knowledge of the glory of God shines in the face of Jesus Christ." So early did the moral beauty of that wondrous Man appear to a soul thirsting like Paul's after God, to embody just that Divine Person whom he longed to know, in the vision and knowledge of whom he found certainty and blessedness, righteousness and life. What Paul found to satisfy the old craving (unsatisfied in Job or Moses), the deeper spirit of John found no less satisfying. For he wrote: "The light was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness and show unto you that eternal life which was with the Father and was manifested unto us." Again he wrote: "The Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding that we may know him that is true, and we are in Him that is true—even in his Son Jesus Christ. This (he adds) is the true God and Eternal Life."

Here, therefore, may you and I most hopefully seek after God, to find and to possess Him. Here, if anywhere, may we hope to come "even to his seat." That which is knowable of God is discovered in the person of Jesus, and through his revelation of Himself in word and deed, with more directness, more completeness, more certainty, and more satisfying, gladdening brightness, than in all other quarters put together. So say the Christian ages with unfaltering voice: and we, if we will search and try, will find it true. To begin with: Jesus is a Person, and reveals a Personal God; no mechanical Nature-force, no shadowy impersonation of Law or Rule; but a living, loving, choosing Person like myself, with whom I can enter into personal relationships. Next: Jesus reveals a Character: and such a character! "Merciful and gracious; long-suffering; abundant in goodness and truth; forgiving iniquity, yet too just to clear the guilty;" the old Hebrew name for God rendered into human life and illuminated by such deeds of charity, such infinite patience, such transcendent sweetness and self-sacrifice, such reverence for justice, such enthusiastic love for mankind as beforehand no man ventured to dream of. Nor can it be said that this is a distant or scanty revelation of the Divine Nature—a glimpse merely, retreating again into the gloom ere we can examine it. Jesus stands forth, an all-round figure, in the clear light of history; to be known by word and act, as we know our friends; to be examined, criticised, if you will, and studied as no other life on earth ever was.

Further: Jesus claims to have bridged the gulf of moral estrangement between mankind and its moral Ruler, so that God can justify the guilty, absolve the penitent, and restore broken intercourse with our fallen race. For not only is God in Him, He is in Him reconciling the world to Himself. Jesus reconciles the heart that trusts Him to the Father, for He reveals the Father as one with whom the sinful heart can be reconciled. He has made known a trustable, lovable Father—worthy of a sinner's confidence, and of a saint's allegiance. Best of all, perhaps, Jesus can still be approached with personal confidence and affection by us, if we will, for as a person He is neither dead nor changed, but the same as He was; and with Him it is possible for us to enter into personal exchange of feeling. You and I can get to know Him as we know other people; by keeping company with Him, and opening up our hearts to his influence, and getting more and more into cordial and sympathetic fellowship with Him. They who do this find that it conducts them to a real, indubitable acquaintance with God, not as a postulate of the reason, not as a working hypothesis to explain the world, not as a dogma of the schools, but as a Friend they know.

Of nothing are we so certain in this world as of persons; such persons as our mother, father, wife, child—persons whose inner being has been disclosed to us through the insight of love and moral agreement. Thus we may know God if we trust Him in Christ. In Christ we touch with our heart the heart of God. There is a poetic faculty—a faculty of apprehension, which belongs to the ethical side of our nature. Sympathy is the organ for discovery, between persons. By it we may know the Father, whom, intellectually, as the Hidden Absolute One, we cannot grasp. Know God we may, as we know our nearest and dearest. Of such knowledge, the conditions are trust and love. Its issue is moral one-ness between two persons.

Let me entreat you all—especially those whose life is before them—not to fling away in rash despair the hope of ever getting a sure hold on God and on the Unseen. Do not weakly give up the search after Him. To seek Him even is better than to be content without Him. Life forfeits its nobility when we abandon the ancient, indestructible craving of Job, and Moses, and David, and Philip, and John, and Paul, and every devout and godly nature—the craving which cries in secret: "Oh, that I knew where I might find Him! That I might come even to his seat!" Abandon it not. Be not disheartened though Science fail to detect Him for you, or history and experience answer with dubious accents.

Enough if anywhere, in one form only, is He come near within your reach; and if that form be the lowly, gentle, accessible, humane form of the Man of Sorrows and the Friend of Sinners, clasp that Saviour tightly to your bosom. Do not let Him go! For "this is life eternal, to know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent."

"STRONG DRINK IS RAGING."

A STATEMENT lately issued by the Belgian Patriotic League would seem sufficient to confer upon Belgium the unenviable distinction of being the most intemperate nation in the world. The number of public-houses in that country has grown in thirty years from 53,000 to 130,000. The number of suicides has increased during a similar period 80 per cent.; the number of the insane 104 per cent.; of convicts 135 per cent. Of the workmen who die in the hospitals 80 per cent. are said to be habitual drunkards. Such facts are a startling testimony to the ravages strong drink makes upon society, and illustrate the necessity for vigorous resistance being made to its power.

Apropos of Temperance, we note that the Directors of the United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident Institution have issued a reprint of an article that appeared in a recent issue of The Evening News, entitled "Does Drinking Pay?" In it the death-rate of the publicans as a class is cited to prove that in reference to health and longevity drinking certainly does not pay. The Registrar-General says that they die faster than any other class of men in the kingdom. For every 100 men who die in ordinary trades, there die 138 publicans, and this not because they are usually drunkards, but that alcohol co-operates with disease and intensifies and accelerates its action. The same point is proved by the fact that while in the General Section of the Assurance Company named above the expected claims for the last seventeen years were 4408, the actual claims have been 4339. In the Temperance Section during the same period the expected claims were 2644, actual 1861.

While the effects of drink upon the individual are thus shown to be prejudicial, its influence on the criminal condition of the community is well illustrated by a black-bordered pamphlet issued by the United Kingdom Alliance, entitled "The Black Record; or, Fruits of the Liquor Traffic." Taking the last week of 1883 and the first of 1884 the following particulars are given: There were 25 perilous accidents through drink, 13 robberies through drink, 5 cases of drunken insanity, 62 drunken outrages and violent assaults, 20 drunken stabbings, cutting, and wounding, 5 cases of drunken cruelty to children, 72 assaults on women through drink, 18 cases of juvenile intoxication, 72 drunken assaults on constables, 94 premature, sudden, or violent deaths through drink, 18 cases of suicide attempted through drink, 15 cases of drunken suicide completed, and 12 drunken manslaughters or murders. Such a record speaks for itself, and needs no comment.

"YE WANT NOTHING BUT THE FIRE."

ELIAS POWER AND THE NEW MINISTER.*

THE ministry of Rev. Burnish Brighter produced a sensation in Ease-in-Zion. His preaching became popular. The invitation committee, with few exceptions, thought they had made a fortunate hit in securing such a man for the circuit. Certainly he was not the kind of man Father Damper wanted. He was ornate, both in person and in preaching. His garb was faultless in its ecclesiastical cut, and his sermons were like his garments, prepared and finished with much care; only, as in his attire the tailor was as manifest as Rev. Burnish Brighter, so in his discourses there was not the sermon only, but the sermon-maker; or perhaps a better illustration of the rev. gentleman's sermons would be a well-trimmed pleasure garden, laid out and kept very nicely, beds and borders full of flowers and colours, but nothing natural; that is to say, the work showing more of the hand of man than of the hand of God.

Nevertheless, Rev. Burnish Brighter was a popular man. The local newspaper frequently gave glowing reports of his services, and congratulated the Methodists of Ease-in-Zion on having secured a pastor whose gifts commanded such important influence in the town.

Elias was a close observer of Mr. Brighter's ministry. He believed it to possess qualities which, if ruled and vitalised by the Holy Ghost, would make his preaching powerful, both to the edification of the church and the salvation of sinners. He felt that mental glow was substituted for the "unction of the Holy One;" and believing as he did that no preaching in the absence of Divine influence could be right in its aims or satisfactory in its effects, he was greatly exercised in mind upon the subject. He determined to seek an interview with his pastor, in the hope that an honest conversation with him might lead to good results. After special prayer that he might be enabled to approach his minister wisely and lovingly; that nothing should escape his lips to chafe or irritate, but that their mutual conversation might be over-ruled to the divine glory; he went, and was duly introduced to Rev. Burnish Brighter in his study. "Good morning to ye, Sir," said Elias; "ye must forgive me taking up yere time, for I know it's precious; but something in my heart has been pressing me so hard, I could not rest without coming to ye."

"What is it, Mr. Power?" asked the minister.

In that moment Elias followed the example of Nehemiah, who when questioned by the Persian King said, "So I prayed unto the God of heaven." The lips were silent; nevertheless, communication passed between his uplifted soul and heaven. In the strength of the heavenly answer, he replied:

"I've been praying for ye, Sir, ever since ye came to Ease-in-Zion, that God would do for ye what St. Paul asked the people to pray God to do for him, namely, open to him 'a door of utterance;' I've been trying on my side to get that door to open to ye; and I thought if ye tried on yours, it would open all the sooner."

"I thank you very much," said the minister, "that you pray for me. I hope you ever will; but do you think my sermons too short, that you pray for utterance?"

"No, no!" replied Elias, "good milk is made no better with watering, nor good meat with over-roasting. A short shot will often hit the bull's-eye, when a long one flies wide of it."

"Then do you complain of my language?" asked the minister.

"I don't," said Elias; "I find no fault with what ye say, yere words are right enough."

"Then do you object to my thoughts, Mr. Power? Do you consider my mind too feeble to deal with divine things?"

"No, Sir, I'm sure ye don't spare yere brains to find us thoughts."

"Then what is the 'utterance' that you so much wish to be opened to me?"

"It's the utterance of the Holy Ghost," replied Elias; "ye come into the pulpit with nice fuel, and ye lay it very nicely, plenty of shavings, plenty of timber, and plenty of coal; but forgive me, Sir, if I say—ye never get it fired, and so no heat comes out of it. Don't ye think that if ye sought for the fire as much as for the fuel ye would preach all the better for it? Ye know, Sir, the timber burns just as well, and throws out as much heat, when used a little in the rough, as when it's placed so smooth. Ye want nothing but the fire, Sir, nothing but the fire!"

"Are you quite sure;" asked the Rev. Burnish Brighter, "that you judge me fairly in thinking my ministry to be destitute of fire? Don't you think that a sermon well-prepared, and carefully thought out, is in itself fire?"

"Ay, Sir; but when is a sermon well-prepared without fire?"

"Then do you really think," inquired the Rev. Burnish Brighter, "that thoughtful, brilliant preaching is powerless without the fire?"

"I do," said Elias; "ye may build a sermon as ye build a machine; every bit of brass and steel so polished that ye may see yere face in it. The water's in the boiler, and the coal in the tender, but the piston never moves inside the cylinder: and why? Because ye have no fire, and therefore ye have no power. Without fire to boil the water, and bring the steam, yere beautiful engine is as helpless as a cold tin-kettle: and without the unction of the Holy Ghost, yere thoughtful preaching will have no spirit and life in it. But don't mistake me, Sir, God don't want weak preaching, and the people don't want it. The more thought ye can put into yere sermons, the more fuel for the fire; but the preaching of man's thoughts without Divine fire is preaching of impertinence."

The conversation impressed the minister. He felt, that although Elias was so plain-spoken, he was nevertheless an honest and a godly man. He thanked him for his visit, and promised to consider further the subject of this conversation. Elias asked to be allowed to pray, and he did pray, until that little study was felt to be hot with the fire about which they had been talking. He then departed, but with doubts as to the impression made upon his pastor.

For some time after Elias Power had taken leave of Rev. Burnish Brighter, the minister sat motionless; his arms folded, his head upon his breast, his eyes closed, his meditations absorbing his entire being. After a while he turned to the unfinished manuscript which was lying on the desk, and wrote in it where he had broken off to receive Elias:

"Ye want nothing but the fire, nothing but the fire!" He then fell upon his knees with his manuscript before him, and wept until his half-written sermon was soaked with tears, sobbing again and again:

"Lord Jesus, I want nothing but the fire, nothing but the fire!"

AS the outward life of Franklin Howorth was an unbroken course of beneficence, so his inward life was a ceaseless flow of aspiration. Exceedingly given to self-sacrifice, he was perpetually craving a larger measure of that grace. Laden with the fruit of the Spirit, he was always longing for more fruitfulness. Ever in close communion with God, he was always yearning after greater nearness. He was constantly asking his moral and spiritual inferiors to pray for his growth in holiness. His letters teem with these requests to confounded correspondents, fully aware of their inferiority and solicitous for his intercession. The most prayerful of Christians, he was ever aspiring to greater earnestness and perseverance in prayer.

Franklin Howorth was not only a man of prayer; he might be called, as Adolphe Monod calls St. Paul, "A colossus of prayer." If anyone ever obeyed the transcendent Apostle's bidding, "Pray without ceasing," my friend did. A strain of aspiration was ever ascending from his soul; but he was greatly given to uttered prayer, both solitary and social. He rejoiced to stir up others to prayer, to join with others in prayer. Thoroughly at home in a prayer-meeting, he loved to bring the power of prayer into other meetings, to mingle prayer with all business and all pleasure. On a wedding-day or birthday festival he never liked his friends to disperse, he never let his guests depart, without pouring forth his love for them in earnest supplication and thanksgiving to the Heavenly Lover. His character was well expressed in the deep, calm, tender fervency of his prayers in the public assembly, at private gatherings, and at home.

As his pervading cheerfulness seldom rose into extreme liveliness, so his intense, even unbroken, spiritual joy never vented itself in vehement transports and extravagant expressions. I never witnessed in him any undue religious elation, as, until after his paralytic stroke, I never witnessed in him the least religious depression. Lively, spiritual joy, springing, as it does, for the most part from a vivid sense of pardoned sin, from an intense feeling of spiritual renewal, from the glow of constant and direct communion with God, belongs to Protestant and Puritan saints rather than to Anglican or Romish saints. Mr. Howorth was emphatically a Protestant, nay, a Puritan saint; but his exceeding humility and tenderness, as well as his strong sense of the sin and sorrow around him, softened and chastened his religious gladness without in the least impairing its depth or restraining its utterance. The joy of assurance was fully his.

* Extracted from The Triumph of Christ: Memorials of Franklin Howorth. By Thos. H. Gill. 3s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. A delightfully written memoir of one of the choicest spirits to which modern biography has introduced us. In this record of a life that was purified by much trial and conflict he yet speaks, and will speak, we trust, to many generations of readers.

But while most thoroughly and thankfully assured of the love of God in Christ towards himself, he rejoiced still more in that love as bestowed upon all, as yearning to embrace all men. He contemplated with more delight the glory and loveliness of that self-renouncing, all-embracing love, than his own interests therein. The lines of Doddridge were often on his lips:—

"There all the millions of his saints
Shall in one song unite;
And each the bliss of all shall view
With infinite delight."

His spiritual joy, though singularly unselfish, was intensely personal. It sprang mainly from the exceeding closeness of his communion with God. How wholly does he belong to the company of happy souls set forth by Watts—

"Not with the terrors of a slave
Do they perform his will,
But with the noblest powers they have
His sweet commands fulfil.

They find access at every hour,
To God within the veil;
Hence they derive a quickening power,
And joys that never fail."

It was this constant access, it was this close communion, that steeped his soul in the lowly, deep, serene gladness which always possessed him, which so gladdened and refreshed all who had aught to do with him—his flocks, his friends, his guests. It has been sometimes said that to live with the saints must be dull and dreary. A sojourn with Franklin Howorth was unspeakably delightful. The depth of his spirituality as well as the sweetness of his sanctity contributed to this delight. His nearness to God seemed to bring down the purity and bliss of heaven into the common pursuits and daily intercourse of life. The prayer in which he joined with a guest about to leave his house, transcended the wonted warmth and tenderness of his petitions. His farewells had a sweet solemnity and loving intensity about them altogether indescribable.

His deep, all-pervading lowly mindedness, found expression not so much in self-disparaging words as in self-renouncing acts. It led him to esteem others far below him more highly than himself, to yield up his fair share in general conversation to those beneath him in knowledge and colloquial power; to regard with exceeding admiration philanthropists and saints far less laborious and devoted than himself; to think much of sermons and religious books inferior to his own compositions.

One who walked so humbly among men, walked most humbly with his God. The lowly mind seems hardly akin to the aspiring mind; yet in Franklin Howorth the deepest humility was not only blent with the loftiest aspiration, but had some share in producing that ardour of soul. It was the small esteem of his own gifts, graces, and good works, as well as the overpowering sense of the love and holiness of God, that made him a ceaseless aspirant; that filled him with perpetual yearnings for greater nearness and likeness to his Lord.

By Mr. GEORGE F. TRENCH.

IN 1 Corinthians the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, in his death, burial, resurrection, and manifestation subsequently, gives to sinners of the grossest sort the assurance of redemption, cleansing, justification, and sanctification before God; it also introduces them to fellowship with Christ, and to the indwelling of the Holy Ghost individually and corporately, with its cognate responsibilities.

The Cross of Christ is presented as detaching us from sinful living, as from ease, luxury and all human pride of wisdom, religion, and power. His resurrection gives us the earnest of our own at his coming.

The Lord's Supper, as a perpetual remembrance of Him, points to these great verities; and in their light the Apostle treats of love, unity, purity of association, ministry by each according to gift, patience, liberality, unworldliness, marriage, manners, and litigation.

The preaching of the Gospel is to be supported by the contributions of those who have received it.

In 2 Corinthians the lasting glory of the Gospel is shown in vivid contrast to the transitory glory of the law, which could bring to the blinded victims of the god of this world only condemnation and death.

The Gospel, on the other hand, reveals by the Holy Spirit, to eyes unveiled by faith, the true glory of God, the "God of love," and the "Father of mercies," seen in the face of Jesus Christ. By Him, in grace "made sin" for us, made poor for our enriching, the world's reconciliation to God is righteously provided for. He is not reckoning unto men their trespasses. Nought remains but our grateful acceptance of his grace. To this we are urged by the love of God, his command, his entreaty—"Be ye reconciled." The evangelist is his ambassador to this end, a sweet savour of Christ, in publishing peace.

Afflictions, even to martyrdom, ever in view, attend the preacher's path, and these not only from the world, but even from the distrust of his children in the faith. And yet the frail vessel of this treasure is sustained by faith through all sufferings, in prospect of the exceeding and eternal weight of glory, and of his vindication at the judgment-seat of Christ. With his powerful words of rebuke and remonstrance, Paul mingles the spirit of love and sympathy, sorrow for their sins and sorrows, comfort and commendation. He exhorts to humility, holy associations, and large liberality in response to God's unspeakable gift.

In Galatians, the Gospel is the special subject of the Epistle, as distinguished from the law and Jewish rites, which some were still insisting upon.

It is viewed as the fulfilment of the promise made to Abraham, of blessing in Christ to all nations, accessible to faith, and only to faith, announced long before Moses' law of bondage, exclusive rights, and ritual, which cannot disannul or limit it.

In this promise of grace, as realised in Christ, are found righteousness, or "justification," life, blessing, liberty and sonship. By the death of Christ and ours in Him, deliverance is given from (a) the Law, (b) the Flesh, and (c) the World, and through the Spirit, revealing Christ in the soul, the fruits of holiness, grace and love abound in the "new creature."

The Apostle Paul boldly claims a special and independent commission to preach and to defend this Gospel.

A Plea for Missions.

PROCLAIM the Gospel in every land,
O Church of Christ, 'tis thy Lord's command:
Arise and shine; for his grace so free
Hath shone with a wondrous light on thee;
Reflect its beams to the sunless shores,
Full many a child of the night implores.
The beckoning islands plead from far;
And loud is the Macedonian call
From continents dark, where the Morning Star
Is struggling forth through the midnight pall.

Alas! how few are the hearts and hands
That haste to the help of the groaning lands;
Shall the millions sink to a hopeless grave,
Whom our hearts should pity, our hands should save?
Shall the harvest waste, while we still withhold
The hire of the reapers—that cankering gold?
Nay, lest the Lord of the harvest frown,
Let our willing tithes to his storehouse flow;
And so shall the showers of heaven come down
On our gladdening souls as we give and go.

The work is great, and the need is sore;
Shall we idly stand by the open door?
The time is ripe, and the hour is come,
Help! help for the perishing heathendom!
Be a loving heart, and a generous hand,
Our prompt response to the Lord's command.
"Thy kingdom come," our prayer then be,
Till the world be conquered, O Christ, to Thee.

Homes for Working Girls in London.

THE Committee of these institutions are still pushing on and increasing the number of the Homes. A meeting was held on Wednesday, 12th inst., for the dedication of Hyde House, Somerset-street, Portman-square. Lord Aberdeen presided.

The Hon. Sec., Mr. J. Shrimpton, related how they had obtained the premises through the kindness of a lady who did not wish her name to be known. They had not gone forward until the way was clearly opened up, and he believed that the success of the work hitherto was attributable to the exercise of that principle.

The new Home contains some ten bedrooms with sixty beds, and a capacious reading-room, parlour, &c., while the fittings throughout are substantial and attractive in appearance. Such accommodation would, he hoped, induce many girls to share the comforts which under ordinary circumstances are so difficult for them to find. Above all, loving sympathy and Gospel teaching would be extended to them, which was really the most important object of the institutions.

The Noble Earl spoke of the economy which had been exercised in fitting up the Home, and added that the best means for friends to show their gratitude to God was not only to be present at a mere ceremony of dedication, but to follow up the work and help it on by every means.

At the close of the proceedings the visitors were invited to inspect the house, and at 8.30 the same evening several of the girls from the other Homes met to join in prayer and praise for this, the ninth Home founded in the metropolis by the Society.

THE GIPSY BROTHERS.—Mr. F. C. Spurr, of Forest-gate, writes to us:—"You will be sorry to hear that one of our good gipsy brothers (Bartholomew Smith) has been laid aside for a month, and is likely to be so for some time, owing to enlargement of the heart. The sick brother's address is Cobbold-road, Woodhouse-estate, Leytonstone."

NEW "UNIONS."—Two more have lately been added to the list of these popular modern institutions. Those who join "The Text Union" are expected to learn a text of Scripture daily, except on Sundays, when the texts for the previous week are repeated. The Secretary is Miss A. L. Ashby, Bridge-road, Redhill, Surrey. "The British and Foreign Christian Union," we learn, is one of the fruits of the late Stratford Mission under Messrs. Moody and Sankey. It purports to combine Christians throughout the world with the object of definite daily work for Christ. If any of our readers think they can be helped in this respect by attaching themselves to this Union let them apply to the Secretary, 24, Toronto-road, Leytonstone, London, E.

THE REVIVAL IN LONDON.

A Glance at the Great Work.

By LADY HOPE.

"HAVE you been to Mr. Moody's meetings?" "Have you seen those meetings?" "What do you think of them?" These are the questions asked just now. They are asked everywhere—in the street, the omnibus, the railway train, the kitchen and the drawing-room; and then a conversation on the subject naturally follows. Some approve, some disapprove, few remain neutral.

"Haven't you been there yet?" asks one.

"No; not I. I should not like all that crushing and crowding. Besides, I go to my church every Sunday, and I don't really see what more is wanted," replies the other.

"Oh, but you should go and see. It is a wonderful sight. That it is. I never saw anything like it before. Thousands of people sitting there for hours and hundreds more turned away. And then the singing! Oh! it is lovely. And as for Mr. Moody's speaking, it is quite different from everything else that I ever heard. It has helped me. I know that I would go miles and miles to hear him. So come with me some day, and then you will see and hear for yourself."

"Me? oh, dear no, thank you! Not a chance of it. I don't care about such things. I do like to be let alone; just to go my own way quietly. I don't like all this jostling, and crowding, and noise, and—"

"But there isn't any noise. It is quite quiet."

"Oh, yes! I believe that! and such crowds of people all gathered together, that they have to run special trains and trams for them. I am sure it would make my head ache, and set me all in a flurry, even to look at it. And then don't they ask you questions—whether you are 'saved'—and all that kind of thing?"

"Well, I will try and explain to you just how that part of it is, if you really want to know. There is no noise. Everything is perfectly quiet and orderly. There are a great many gentlemen acting as stewards, all over the hall, showing the people their seats, and doing everything they can to make them comfortable. There are crowds of people, but they only come because they like it, and sit so still to listen. You would be surprised to see them. They do raise their voices when they sing; but that is glorious. It seems to me like a little foretaste of heaven to hear all those thousands of voices singing to the praise of JESUS. I love it! There now, I have told you the truth."

"Praising Jesus! Why, I never heard you talk like that before! Whatever has come over you?"

"Ah, that's it! I was going to explain. Perhaps you never did hear me talk like this before. The fact is, I have been changed, perfectly changed. It is a very extraordinary thing perhaps, but it is quite true.

"Changed! There now, that is just the sort of talk I don't like. I never did like that kind of thing."

"Never mind whether you like it or not. It is a fact. Can you listen to me patiently for five minutes? Because you like hearing about things, don't you now?"

"Very well! go on, and tell me. Only you'll never persuade me anything about its being true, for I don't like that sort of thing. And as for their asking you questions about whether you are saved or not, I think it is horrible! There, that's my opinion."

"That is just what I want to explain. I went into the meetings just to see, one day; and then I liked them, and thought I would go again. And so I did two or three times. One night Mr. Moody asked all who wished to be prayed for to stand up. I felt a great longing that they should pray for me, and so I stood up."

"Stood up! I never heard the like!"

"Yes, I did, indeed; and others did the same. And then Mr. Moody prayed for us. Oh! how he prayed! He asked God to forgive us, and save us, and to take us right into the kingdom of heaven, just as we were, poor lost sinners."

"Right into heaven! What! To die, do you mean? Besides, you are not a poor lost sinner, or anything of the kind; and if you were, heaven is no place for you. Heaven is the place for good people. Everybody knows that.

"Ah! but I am a poor sinner. I know it quite well now. I found it out at these meetings."

"Who told you so?"

"God showed it to me quite plainly. Yes, indeed! There is no mistake about it. And I have got right into the kingdom of heaven, without any dying at all. I am SAVED! That is the real fact; and no doubt about it. But I have left off my story. When I stood up that time, and the people were all praying, something came over me that I could not keep from crying."

"Something! What do you mean?"

"Well! A very gentle, tender feeling, as if God loved me, and Jesus, the Lord Jesus, wanted to save me. I feel quite sure that the Holy Spirit of God came right into my heart just then. And, oh! It does seem wonderful! But He has never left me since. He is with me now."

"You quite frighten me. Really you do!"

"No! there is nothing to be frightened about. It was all so still and gentle. Just as Mr. Moody was saying, 'You can be saved right here, if you will only believe on the Lord Jesus Christ—He is the Saviour for poor sinners just like you,' a young lady came up to me, and spoke very kindly. She said: 'Would you like to come into the inquiry-room? It is quite close to you. I will show you the way; and then we can have a little talk. We will have prayer together; and I will ask Jesus to comfort you.' I said to myself, That is the very thing I want most! So I went in with her. And never, never, in all my life, shall I forget that day! There, in that room, with numbers of others, who all wanted to be talked to just as I did, I found the very things that I wanted, COMFORT, and PARDON, and PEACE. Oh! why did no one ever talk to me before about it all, and make it so plain? The three verses which I saw that day in the inquiry-room were these:—

"'The blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin.' 'I, even I, am He that blotteth out thine iniquities, and will remember no more thy sins.' 'I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.'

"Oh! . . . . it does surprise me, I never heard anything like it before. I don't think anybody could mind being spoken to kindly like that. And the singing, and praying, and all!"

"It must have seemed curious! And not on a Sunday either. Just on a common week day, wasn't it?"

"Yes. But it was no common day to me! It was the most wonderful day of all my life. To all eternity I shall bless God that ever I went to those meetings."

"Well, if they are like that, they can't do anyone any harm! I think I'll go to one myself, some day. Will you go with me?"

"To be sure, I will. Perhaps you will get some of the comfort that I got. I find it ever so much easier to do right now, than I ever did before. It is quite a new life, I assure you."

And thus ends one of the many conversations now going on in London,—lip testimonies of heart change. The life testimony follows.

When visiting a family where some of the young ladies were particularly opposed to everything connected with these meetings, and would not hear them spoken of without bursts of ridicule and the most cutting sarcasms, I interposed the question:

"But do you know anything about the meetings? Have you ever been to them? or have you known anyone who has attended them?"

One of the older girls immediately replied, "Oh, yes! There is Aunt J. She has been going to them. And really, she has been off her head ever since!"

"How has she shown this?"

"She used always to quarrel with everybody. She had quarrelled with almost every relation she had, and lived quite alone. Now she has written to everyone of them, and begged their pardon, and said that she herself was in the wrong. She says that she now loves them all very much, and wants to live in peace with them. Her spare rooms are always filled, and she tries to make us 'Christians,' as she calls it."

I replied, "Do you call that madness? It seems to me more like sanity! Will you take me to see her?"

"Certainly!" was the answer; "but I shall leave you alone with her, for she will be sure to begin talking religion to you, and I don't go in for that kind of thing."

We went; and I was left alone with the lady. Never shall I forget the sunshine of her room. Peace, joy, and beauty seemed written on her face. We talked long together of our Saviour and his love, his gracious promises too, and his commands. As we parted my new friend took my two hands in hers, and said, as the tears filled her eyes:

"Will you pray for my nieces! I do love them so much; and I long to see them blessed too!"

We would echo her prayer. Thanking our Heavenly Father with all our hearts for this great work that He is doing amongst us, let us plead most earnestly for its increase and continuance, doing all we can to invite others to share in the blessings that are now being so richly imparted.

Messrs. Pentecost and Stebbins.

The evangelistic forces now operating in our midst received a material accession by the arrival, last week, from America, of Messrs. Pentecost and Stebbins. These brethren, whose labours have been much blessed in their own country, are not unknown to us on this side of the Atlantic. All who had the privilege of hearing the one preach and the other sing the Gospel on their last visit to Britain, will sincerely welcome them again, and pray that a yet richer blessing may rest on their ministry during the coming weeks in the mighty metropolis of the world.

They were present at one of the overflows on Friday evening last, having only reached London the previous evening. On Sunday, Mr. Pentecost preached afternoon and evening at Tonbridge Chapel, Euston-road. No one who heard it will, we think, readily forget his wonderful discourse in the evening from the words, "Keep yourself in the love of God." For lucidity of exposition, fertility of striking illustration, freshness and force in the method of putting the truth, it could not well have been excelled. We were particularly struck with the beauty of one of the illustrations used. Having made the startling assertion that nowhere in the New Testament are we commanded to love God, and spent some time in a very conclusive argument that if sinners are ever to be saved at all it must be because of God's love to them, not their love to Him, Mr. Pentecost supposed a questioner to say, "Do you not love God then?" The reply was: "Certainly; I cannot help loving Him; but I do not love Him in order that He may love me. 'We love Him because He first loved us.'" Over the Niagara Falls thousands and thousands of tons of water descend into the stream below; at the same time a column of spray rises up from the falls. God's love to us is like the mighty thunderous torrent, the downflow of which nothing can stay or interrupt:, our love to Him is like the thin spray, which is itself a part of the water in the falls, returning to its source.

Mr. Stebbins' great gift of sweet skilful song found ample exercise during the services of last Sunday, in conjunction with Mr. Sankey. When their voices blend in some melting and impressive strain, as, for instance, in "The Three Calls," from The Christian Choir, sung in the great hall in the evening to a crowded congregation of men, the effect is peculiarly thrilling and solemnising.

On Monday morning a highly important and representative meeting was held in the inquiry-room of St. Pancras Hall to discuss the situation and to make arrangements for carrying on the work. There were present Revs. Shorto Douglas, Nevill Sherbrooke, Dr. O'Brien, J. C. Harrison, Newman Hall, Dr. Dykes, J. P. Chown, Samuel Beard, J. Denham Smith, and many other clergymen and Nonconformist ministers. It was arranged that meetings should be held during the present week, in the Presbyterian Church, Regent-square (Dr. Dykes'), by Rev. G. F. Pentecost and Mr. Sankey, and next week in Tolmer-square (Rev. F. Hastings), by Mr. Pentecost and Mr. Stebbins. An earnest desire was expressed that a Mission should be held in St. Pancras Parish Church, to follow up the present work in the Midland Terminus Hall; it is hoped that Canon Spence will return a favourable answer to the requisition which will be laid before him to this effect.

Messrs. Whittle and McGranahan.

The regrets that were so deeply felt as to the shortness of the visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to New Cross are in some degree being assuaged. In the first place, the wondrous results of their Mission are becoming better known. Then the effective following up of the work by Messrs. Whittle and McGranahan at Greenwich goes on under very favourable circumstances.

The past week, during which the services were held in the Wesleyan Church, will be remembered by many as their special time of blessing. The place was nightly packed, the centre being reserved for working-men. Owing to the structural condition of the building, some difficulty was at first found with regard to the after meetings, but Major Whittle happily solved it by sending the women into a hall close by, and making the church itself the inquiry room for men only. Large numbers acknowledge to having found the Saviour. The last one of a family circle of four brothers and two sisters-in-law was brought into the light on Sunday evening. Hitherto they have not been churchgoers. As a workman rightly dividing the word of truth, Major Whittle finds the greatest help in having the text "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" in very large letters on the wall close behind him, that he may constantly refer to it.

One of the after-meetings was thrown open for testimony. It was as music to the heart to hear one after another rise to confess the Saviour, and to tell the text or sermon which had been the instrument of their deliverance. Here a mother with baby in arms, there a youth of seventeen years, who says he feels as if it were holiday all the time, a husband and wife, a grey-haired old man, an old woman, whose full heart will not let her tongue speak, yet all seem to know what she would say. We do not know that we ever heard the Christian life more beautifully epitomised than it was by one who said "I believed in Jesus, and I keep on believing." One young man had listened to Mr. Moody's sermon unmoved, and refused the invitation of a lady to go into the inquiry-room. However, he could not dismiss from his mind the impression of her tender voice and kindly face; he felt that in saying "No" to her he had lost some blessing. He went home convicted of sin, and he could not go to sleep until at his bedside he had made the publican's prayer his own, and found forgiveness. One and another testify that they gave their hearts to Jesus at Mr. Scroggie's overflow meetings. Nor are testimonies awanting as to the power and grace of God manifested during the preceding week's services at St. Mark's Church.

One of the remarkable channels in which blessing has come is in the families and friends of the gentlemen who acted as stewards in the hall. We hear of this, that, and another of whom it is said: His son, his daughter, his shop-assistant, were brought to the Saviour during the Mission. In such large measure does the Lord repay small service! Nor is the goodness of the Lord acknowledged only by word. We know of two shopkeepers who have placarded their premises, "We do not open on Sundays," who up till now have done a large trade on the Day of Rest.

Owing to the success of the Clapham Male Choir, Mr. James Knowles, organist of St. Mark's Presbyterian congregation, has very cheerfully taken up a proposal by Mr. M'Granahan that a similar organisation should be started in Greenwich. A very fair beginning has been made, and during his stay in Greenwich, Mr. M'Granahan is giving Mr. Knowles the advantage of his experience in conducting.

Friday, the 14th, closed the second week of the Mission, and Messrs. Whittle and McGranahan have now taken up quarters at the Baptist Chapel, South-street, Mr. Charles Spurgeon's.

As we have referred in our columns to clergymen in this district who had serious objections to the method of work of the American evangelists, we gladly state that more than one of them have withdrawn their opposition, after having been to the Hall. One who had carried his opposition to some length, went to Mr. Moody and expressed his full approval of his preaching and of the work done in the inquiry-room. We regret, however, to learn that opposition still exists in some degree; this has shown itself in the inhibition of Rev. Gardner Smith, of All Saints, Hatcham, whose zeal in the work is known to all, from conducting a thanksgiving service at the Brockley Presbyterian Church.

Giving Thanks at Wandsworth.

The friends in the Wandsworth district are determined not to lay themselves open to the reproach of being unthankful. "Were there not ten cleansed? Where are the nine?" is a question that cannot be applied to them. On Monday evening, last week, there was a full muster at the Town Hall, Wandsworth, of friends who took part in the recent Missions in the South-west. Many patiently stood throughout the two hours of the meeting, and many others, we believe, failed to get in at all. Under the genial presidency of Mr. M. H. Hodder, the proceedings passed off very smoothly and pleasantly. Some members of the Clapham Male Choir were present, and delighted the audience with their singing of several pieces from "The Gospel Male Chorus Book." Mr. Hodder remarked that as the South London Choir had been one outcome of the previous visit to London of the evangelists, so this Male Choir had sprung from the present Mission. It was a growing movement, he said; if all these singing brethren will bring to their endeavours the same skill and heart and enthusiasm as the Clapham Choir, it is bound not only to grow, but to scatter blessings on its path.

The meeting was largely devoted to testimony, both personal and relative. There were, of course, many songs of praise and prayerful thanksgivings offered in the course of the evening. A good many of the individual testimonies were of the ordinary kind, giving expression to the fact that through attending some of the late meetings either at Wandsworth or Clapham the testifiers had been led to see their sinful state and to rest in Christ as their Saviour and Friend. The first one to stand up in the body of the hall was an elderly man, who said he was converted at the Wandsworth meetings. Since then, when he read his Bible it seemed as though he were walking in a beautiful garden from which he had kept away for years. A woman thanked God for the conversion of a son and a daughter at Wandsworth. Another old man praised God that ever he came within the sound of Mr. Moody's voice. One said it was Mr. Moody's sermon on "that beautiful text," "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," that led him to decision. Another was awakened by Mr. Sankey's singing of the hymn, "Step over the line." For some time these testimonies, brief and to the point, flowed on in close succession. Among the last was one from a young man who was converted during the visit of the evangelists to London nine years ago; this time, a sister of his had been brought in. All the Sunday-school teachers in the school where he taught had been greatly quickened, and as an indirect result of the meetings, five of the children had already confessed Christ.

A remark was here interpolated by Rev. Marcus Rainsford, that he remembered introducing Mr. Moody to fifteen young people belonging to one house of business in the neighbourhood; probably some of them were present. Dr. Redford, of Putney, said the most of these young persons had joined his church; he believed all of them were enrolled in the membership of some Christian congregation. Another gratifying interlocutory observation fell from the Chairman, to the effect that many of those who had been prominent in helping on the work of the late Mission in the south-west were the fruits of the Mission nine years ago.

The second half of the meeting was taken up with testimonies from the platform. Dr. Redford told of two interesting cases he had visited, where the reading of Mr. Moody's book, The Way to God, had been greatly blessed. Some of the young converts were not only reading it themselves with much profit, but were lending it to others. Mr. Sinclair, who was one of the most constant attenders and earnest workers at the Wandsworth Hall, bore happy testimony to the blessing the meetings had been in his own household. He had met with the converts of the Mission in his Bible-class and Society-class. One who had written to tell him of her conversion, spoke of having received a copy of The Way to God, which had been blessed in removing many difficulties that had presented themselves to her mind. Rev. J. Cunningham, of the Wandsworth Presbyterian Church, said that those who joined that Church at the last communion were entirely the fruits of the recent Mission. In his daily intercourse with the people he observed an extraordinary change had come over them, in that it was now so easy to converse of spiritual matters; the icy reserve had been broken up.

Mr. Shaman said he had attended every meeting at Wandsworth and Clapham with but one exception. His heart was greatly rejoiced at what he had himself witnessed in the inquiry-room. He gave the details of some deeply interesting cases of conversion of which he was cognisant. Mr. McLaren said he had casually met a gentleman at Wandsworth who told him of having been aroused at the meetings in Edinburgh ten years ago, by hearing Mr. Sankey sing. He was then led to accept of Christ, and was now a medical man of large practice not many miles from Wandsworth. Rev. J. Park, of the Congregational Chapel, gave a very hearty testimony to the good results of the meetings, not only those held by Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey, but later by Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan. He had met with a considerable number of young men who had been blessed. All the workers in his congregation had been greatly stimulated and revived. Rev. Mr. Buckmaster had also many encouraging things to say, though, as he observed, he was rather a cautious man and was waiting to see how the converts would develope.

Several other friends having added their quota to the pile of testimony, some closing words were spoken by Rev. Marcus Rainsford. He declared that in the course of the recent meetings he had met with some of the most interesting evidences of God's working he had known during his long ministry. Addressing a few brief exhortations to the young believers, he said: "If you have got life, you must feed it. If you do not feed on the Word of God your spiritual life will die out. God loves you better than any mother, and He has provided for you the sincere milk of the Word. But that is not enough; you must have exercise, and pure air and rest, if you are to grow in the Christian life. The pure air comes to you as you pray to God to make his truth really nourishing to your soul. If you would have exercise, try and win someone else for Christ. There are those whom you, and perhaps you only, can influence. In watering others you will be watered yourself. If you would have rest, confide in the Lord Jesus Christ; tell Him all your troubles; make his bosom your resting-place, his love your home.

In leading the petitions and thanksgivings of the assembly, Mr. Myers said eternity would scarcely be long enough to utter all the praises due to God for what He had done. Then was sung—

"To the work, to the work."

As a practical commentary on this exhortation, the Chairman invited all who wished for prayer on behalf either of friends or of themselves to rise. The goodly company who did so were commended to God in the closing prayer, and the gathering soon after dispersed, making a thanksgiving "offering" as they went.

Men's Meetings at King's Cross.

At the close of the great meetings in the Midland Terminus Hall, Mr. Henry Thorne has each evening conducted meetings for praise and testimony for men only, in Tonbridge Chapel, Euston-road. The first of these meetings was held on the evening of Sunday, the 9th inst. The building was well filled. About forty men testified to the way in which they had been led to the Saviour, and at the close a considerable number rose for prayer. Subsequent meetings have been preceded by services in the open air conducted by members of the Exeter Hall branch of the Young Men's Christian Association.

At the indoor meetings the testimonies have been varied and interesting. One young man said that he had spent all the previous Thursday night in drinking and gambling, but he had attended the meeting in the Midland Terminus Hall on Friday evening, and found the Lord there. A working man was led to the Saviour by his little girl—a bright seven year old—who put to him the question, "Father, don't you love Jesus?" Another bright fellow had been led to Christ by the earnest entreaty of a fellow workman in a shipbuilders' yard where he had been employed.

Last Thursday evening was a time of great blessing. Quite a number of men rose for prayer, and at the close of the meeting many remained to be conversed with concerning the Way of Life.

Mr. Thorne remained at King's-cross till Sunday evening, and on Monday he commenced a series of special services at Brockley-road Chapel, in continuation of the wonderful work at New-cross. Several of the churches in the neighbourhood are uniting in this effort, and the district is being thoroughly canvassed by ladies with a view to securing the presence of non-churchgoers. Mr. Thorne will be aided by a large contingent of the New-cross Hall choir.

Mr. Moody at the Polytechnic.

In addition to his daily abounding labours at the St. Pancras Hall, Mr. Moody during the bygone week held four evening meetings for men at the Polytechnic. As our readers will be aware, this building, so long known as a place of public entertainment, is now the headquarters of "The Young Men's Christian Institute." These evening gatherings have been held in the large hall, capable of holding over 2000, and on each occasion it has been crowded. The audiences have been chiefly composed of the members of the Institute, though the meetings have been free to all young men. The hour fixed was 9 p.m., but it was generally some time past that hour before Mr. Moody could arrive from St. Pancras. The time of waiting was not wasted; opportunity was found for the singing of many of the Gospel songs, either as solos or in concert.

On Friday evening, after earnest prayer by Dr. Oswald Dykes, Mr. Moody spoke to his interesting and deeply interested congregation on Confession. When, at the close, he made a practical application on the subject by asking for a public confession of concern about salvation, nearly 120 young fellows responded to the call. The after-meeting was a large and helpful one; quite a number appeared to have come out boldly and decidedly on the side of Christ.

The meetings are continued four evenings this week, though Mr. Moody could only pledge himself to be present one evening. He said that Mr. Mowll, and probably Mr. Sankey, would be there on several of the evenings.

The Mizpah Band in London.

At the close of the Mission in the Stratford district a Mizpah band of some 200 members was formed. This has gone on doing effective work in strengthening and encouraging those who by the power of divine grace have obtained deliverance over their appetite for strong drink. Since its formation, the band has considerably increased in numbers. A very efficient choir has been formed, which is rapidly improving under the instruction of a devoted Christian teacher, and rendering valuable help in a series of evangelistic services, conducted by the band every Sabbath evening, for non-churchgoers. These services have been greatly blessed in leading several souls to the Saviour.

At the close of the Mission in New Cross district a band was formed, as we announced at the time. On the following Saturday evening another meeting was held, at which it was unanimously resolved to begin operations in the centre of Deptford, where both open wickedness and drunkenness prevail. A very suitable place of meeting has been secured right in the centre of drinkdom. It will be opened and consecrated by prayer to the service of the Lord next Saturday evening. From the devoted Christian character of the brethren who have banded themselves together in this much needed work of seeking the salvation of helpless drunkards, we have the highest expectation of their success.

The Coming Croydon Mission.

A highly successful meeting was held in the public hall at Croydon on Friday last to inaugurate proceedings in connection with Messrs. Moody and Sankey's meetings there in May. The vicar, Rev. J. M. Brathwaite presided, and after calling upon Rev. Mr. Hanna, Presbyterian minister, to pray, expressed warm sympathy with the object of the meeting. Mr. H. Matheson detailed the principal features of the work requiring to be done, and specially urged the need of prayerful preparation on the part of those who were to help in the inquiry-room. He also dwelt on the importance of all who joined the choir being decided believers in Christ.

Rev. J. F. Kitto, of Stepney, followed, giving interesting information as to the recent Mission in his own district. He dwelt forcibly on the duty of mutual forbearance and Christian confidence among the workers gathered from the various sections of the Church. He also defended the work from the charge of excitement which is often brought against it, asserting that there is an excitement which comes from God, and which we should, therefore, be careful not to despise.

Mr. John Macgregor (Rob Roy) then gave an intensely practical address, particularly enforcing the need for prayer on Mr. Moody's behalf, and entreating all who would help as stewards to cultivate patience and urbanity, in relation to the trying duties they would have to perform. A resolution, pledging the churches represented to give the evangelists a warm welcome, was moved by the Vicar, seconded by Rev. J. A. Spurgeon, and carried by acclamation.

The large hall was well filled, and it was generally felt that the forthcoming meetings could scarcely be prospected under more favourable auspices; unity, numbers, and earnest devotion, combine to give the work a most encouraging start.

The Y.M.C.A. in Ireland.

THE National Council have deputed Mr. W. Hind-Smith to visit the Y.M.C.A.'s in Ireland, with a view to their extension and organisation.

BELFAST.

The annual meeting of this Association was held in the Ulster Hall on the 6th inst, the Mayor in the chair. The report, read by the Secretary, Mr. Robert McCann, showed that the Association was in great prosperity. Addresses were delivered by Revs. William Park, J. Hudson Taylor, and Mr. Hind-Smith. The meeting was preceded by a social tea, provided by the ladies of Belfast. Several meetings of the members and others have been held for the purpose of co-operating with Mr. Hind-Smith in the organising of the Associations in the north of Ireland into a District Union.

CARRICKFERGUS.

The representatives of the Y.M.C.A. in this ancient town met on the 7th inst. to hear an address from Mr. Hind-Smith, and to confer with him as to the contemplated District Union of Associations. It was unanimously resolved to give every possible support to the effort. As a result of this visit we hear of new and extended premises being looked after for the Association.

MOUNTPOTTINGER.

A large meeting was held here on 10th inst. to hear an address on the work and agencies of the Y.M.C.A. by Mr. Smith. This Branch is a vigorous outgrowth of the Belfast Association.

DUBLIN.

The members of the Dublin Committee gave a hearty welcome to Mr. Hind Smith, and spent an evening in conference and prayer as to the best method of improving the work of the Y.M.C.A. in Dublin and the south and west of Ireland. The idea of forming a District Union, also of co-operating with the National Council, was thoroughly approved of. Arrangements are being made for a visitation by the national representative to each of the large towns in the south and west.

LONDONDERRY.

The Y.M.C.A. has been established twenty-nine years, and has a spacious and well-situated building of its own. On 11th inst., the Committee and friends of the Association held a social gathering for the purpose of giving a welcome to Mr. Hind Smith, who, after a conference, addressed a public meeting in the Hall of the Association. The Committee have resolved to support the District National Organisation of the Irish Associations about to be formed and to engage a secretary. Mr. Hind Smith has also paid interesting visits to Ballymena, Portadown, Armagh, and Dungannon.

A NONCONFORMIST CONFERENCE to consider the condition and claims of the London poor will be held in London on April 2 and 3.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING FEMALE WELFARE.—The eighteenth anniversary of this Society was held in the reception rooms of the Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G., at his residence in Grosvenor-square, on Saturday week, his Lordship presiding, when there was a crowded attendance. In the course of his address, his Lordship said he was sorry to notice the growing dislike amongst women for domestic service. He heard of it everywhere. It was very sad, and so was the constant changing of places. The proposed system of this Society, of reward for length of service to combat with this, was excellent. It had been successfully tried in the Ragged-schools, and proved a strong inducement to the recipients, who had kept their places eight, ten, and twelve years. The more they looked into it, the more they realised the importance of preventive effort. There were scores of young girls who earned only 2s. 6d. a week. They would give a shilling to share the bed of some old woman, and try to live on the eighteenpence. Yet these poor things had hearts to be worked upon and souls to be saved. Whitechapel and its neighbourhood was swarming with these girls, whose consciences might be opened and their hearts touched.

For the Young.

LESSONS FROM LITTLE GARDENS.

Dear Young Friends,

I WONDER how many of you have little gardens of your own! I was thinking to-day of my own garden in our pleasant country home. It has long since been dug up; I could perhaps scarcely find its place again; and yet how clearly I seem to see it before me. The trim border of box, the gooseberry bush and two currant bushes on one side of the tiny gravel path, and on the other pinks, sweetwilliams, pansies, and the red daisies that grew so as to form the initial letters of my name. There are many sweet memories clinging round my garden, and I do not think I shall ever forget it. No doubt many of you live in the country, and if you have no gardens of your own, yet you love flowers and take some interest in every garden you see.

If you have tried, you know that it is no easy thing to keep even a small garden tidy. There is first of all a good bit of digging and hoeing to do; then the plants must be put in, and the seeds sown. In the hot dry weather they must be watered, and last though not least, the weeds must be rooted out. And very troublesome these weeds are to most young gardeners. I used to wonder where they came from, and often mistook some of them for flowers and watered them carefully, thinking they were some of the seeds I had sown. Then when they grew bigger, of course I was disappointed.

I asked the gardener to tell me who sowed all these troublesome ugly weeds. "Ah, Missie, weeds never want any sowing, they come up of themselves fast enough; and if you don't weed them out, they will soon spoil your garden."

These weeds do indeed seem to come of their own accord, and the highest wall will not keep them out. Some, like thistle and dandelion seeds, come floating through the summer air, borne up by their little feathery plumes; others are brought by birds, and some you may have noticed, are furnished with little hooks that catch in your dress, as you ramble after flowers in the woods, and wayside hedges.

Now weeds will always prove the strongest if you leave a garden long uncared for. Do you wonder why? Because they are the natural inhabitants of the soil; and the sweet pinks, lobelias, fuschias, and most of your garden pets, are little strangers from foreign lands that require a great deal of care to enable them to hold their own.

Have you ever seen a neglected garden? Oh, it is a sad sight, for the richer the soil the more luxuriantly the weeds will grow, really choking the poor flowers. Can you remember what Solomon wrote about a neglected plot of ground, that he passed one day as he was walking in the country? It was the field of an idle man, and he says he found it "all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall was broken down." Then Solomon goes on to say, "I saw and considered it well; I looked and received instruction." If this great and wise king was not above learning a lesson from an untidy field, let us see if we cannot find something in our gardens to think about.

You may not all have a little garden of your own to dig up and plant seeds in. Yet you each have a little garden to take care of, a little garden that may become beautiful with sweet flowers or overrun with weeds. Have you guessed already what I mean? I think your minds and hearts are like little plots of ground prepared by loving hands to receive good seed, that may grow up and yield a rich harvest. What pains are taken with them; how patiently your kind parents and teachers try to prepare you for the life that lies before you.

And yet, when they have done their utmost, little weeds may be growing up unseen by them among the other plants. Evil birds may have dropped seeds that will spring up into bad habits and choke many of the sweet flowers and fruits of the Spirit; such as love, joy, gentleness, and faith.

I told you that when a garden was left to itself the weeds there grow very rank in the rich soil. It is a solemn thing to remember that if the great enemy of your soul finds an uncared-for garden, he is sure to plant weeds there; and then, oh how sad the harvest will be! How quickly weeds spread! It is said: "Ill weeds grow apace," and if weeds are allowed to grow up in one little garden, they will quickly fly over into the next, and from that spread further still. Thus you see no one has a right to think they may grow what they like in their own garden, without its making any difference to others. For it does matter a great deal, every one has an influence either for good or bad on all who come near them, and none can say where this influence will stop.

We read in the Bible that Adam had a garden entrusted to his care. When he sinned and was turned out of that sweet garden, the earth was cursed through his sin and brought forth thorns and thistles; what a picture of his own heart, where he had allowed evil thoughts to spring up into evil actions, destroying all his peace and happiness. Ah, if we had only our own strength to trust to, we might well look hopelessly over our little gardens, knowing how quickly the weeds grow and how strong they become.

But there is one Friend always near who is both able and willing to do what we cannot. You know who this mighty Friend is? Where Jesus comes, even the desert places in our lives will blossom as the rose. He will teach us how to get rid of the weeds, and will help us to tear them up at any cost. He will water the good seed with the refreshing dew of his Holy Spirit, and shine on it with the sunshine of his love.

Dear young friends, when the great harvest home comes, you would not like to have nothing but leaves to lay down at his feet who gave his life for you! Then go to Him now in this the early spring-time of your life and ask Him to take your heart and life, and make them what He would have them to be. We do not always know the weeds from the flowers, but we can trust Him to make no mistakes. Welcome this dear Saviour into your hearts, and then amid all the sin of this world's wilderness He will make and keep each heart "a little spot of hallowed ground," bearing much fruit to his honour and glory.

DOCK LABOURERS' MISSION.—Arrangements have been made for the extension of this work by opening a Mission House near the Royal Albert and Victoria Docks. Gifts of books and tracts are requested as well as funds, by Mr. Charles Coleman, 32, Chamber-street, London Docks.

JEWISH "ROBINS."—Some 280 Jewish children were entertained to a "Robin Tea," at Mildmay, the other evening, through the kindness of Mr. Bullock. After the welcome and much enjoyed repast had ended, the youthful Isaacs and Ephraims, and Rachels and Miriams, were treated to a magic lantern entertainment, the pictures chiefly illustrating the lives of Joseph and of our Lord. Gospel hymns were sung and much prayer offered for a blessing on the engagements of the evening.

A CRY FROM BRAZIL.

DEAR SIR,—The following extract from a letter received from a friend in Brazil will, I hope, so impress your readers with the urgency of the appeal that they will aid me in my endeavour to meet the need. I propose to raise a fund sufficient to send an experienced evangelist to work amongst the English population in Rio de Janeiro, and if possible, also a seamen's missionary, to work in the harbour amongst the shipping, as the writer of this letter so strongly recommends.

I cannot but think that if the way could first be opened by a Gospel Mission, of, say, two months' duration, there would be then a prospect by God's grace of causing the residents in Rio to take up the support of the evangelist and seamen's missionary, at all events that considerable local help will be forthcoming towards this expense.

A Mission would cost at the least £300 for speakers to go out and return, besides the local expense of hall, &c. I cannot give an estimate as to the cost of the Mission without obtaining further information; but it has been laid on my heart that this will be the first most effectual step to take, and the most conducive to carrying on the Lord's work in that distant land, as opening out a way for persistent and continued evangelistic work.

I commend this appeal to your many Christian readers; any information shall be supplied to those who require it, from my friend in Brazil, and I shall be glad to receive personally any contributions for the Brazilian Mission Fund, which has been started by a contribution of £20 from the writer of the subjoined extracts.—Yours very faithfully, W. J. Evered Poole.

Enfield House, Southampton.

EXTRACTS.

"The population of Rio de Janeiro is about half a million. There are only seven Protestant ministers in the whole city—viz., two Brazilian, four American, and one English. There are only four Protestant churches. I grieve for the English people here, who are like sheep without a shepherd. When Mr. H. M. W. was here several came to hear him, and liked him very much; and I believe if we only had such a man here always, much good would be done.

"England sends missionaries to all parts of the world except Brazil; I think Mr. Vanorden, of Rio Grande du Sul, is the only one from England; there are none in Rio, unless you count the English Episcopalian minister one.

"Nearly all the shops are open here on Sabbath day. Sabbath is the great day for horse races and bull fights, regattas, cricket matches, and athletic sports. Sunday is the day for all grand exhibitions or important business; Sunday work is quite common amongst the English clerks and merchants here. Thousands whose souls are as precious as ours are marching merrily on the broad road to everlasting ruin. Thousands whom God loves and yearns over are walking blindfold into eternity, sowing the seeds of corruption, to reap a harvest of weeping and gnashing of teeth.

"Surely, amongst the hundreds converted under Mr. Moody's preaching, there are some who will leave home and friends to come here, and others who will be only too ready to assist them by paying the expenses. I would suggest that the work should commence amongst the English. It seems so strange to me to read in The Christian about all the Gospel preaching in other countries, and no mention made of Brazil. I think the people here would be easily reached, for they have very little respect for their own spiritual advisers, the priests: in fact most of the people are neither Roman Catholics, nor Protestants, nor Atheists, but simply worldly people, who never think of religion.

"I will be glad to get any information for you that you may wish about Brazil, and hope soon to hear that steps are being taken to send some one 'to the help of the Lord against the mighty.' It is high time something were done.

"Your sincere Friend and Brother,

Notes and Comments.

THE coffee-tavern movement is so good, and so calculated to counteract the bad influence of the public-house system, that we should be sorry for anything to stand in the way of its continued success. The Globe, in a short leader on philanthropy and profits has been administering some words of counsel to the promoters of these useful institutions, and thus refers to them:—

"It is perfectly legitimate that a coffee tavern should earn sufficient to pay a reasonable rate of interest on the capital invested in the undertaking. Only by adhering to strictly commercial principles will the movement—a most praiseworthy one in itself—secure a permanent footing in the country. But we have heard grievous complaints about the quality of the beverages sold at some establishments, and, if that be the result of large dividends, philanthropy would seem to be giving place to money getting."

It is not only legitimate, but necessary, that these establishments should pay, and we are not disposed to charge their promoters with making large dividends the primary aim. But the quality of drinks and viands served should be of first consideration, for only then can the real end be obtained—the supplanting the use of intoxicants by non-alcoholic beverages. Every effort should be made to render these places as attractive and satisfying as possible, and that done there is no reason to fear they will be other than successful, both from the standpoint of philanthropy and profit.

A people's church, capable of seating 2500 persons, has just been opened in Boston, United States. It is to be worked on broad unsectarian lines, the membership of the church to be open to all evangelical believers, and ministers of various denominations to assist in its services. The state of things religiously in Boston, according to American papers, is far from cheering. One journal, commenting on the opening of the new church, says:—

"The tendency in Boston is to agnosticism, or unbelief, on the one side, and to ritualism on the other. Even the Unitarian churches are falling off, many of their members or natural attendants either giving up church-going altogether or transferring their attachment to the Episcopal Church, with its liturgy and its appeal to æsthetic taste and religious emotions. Meantime the Roman Catholics are gaining rapidly in Boston."

The same journal says, in view of such a state of things, a new church is like a fifth wheel to a coach. We may rather hope that an earnest, united effort of this kind will effect what other means have failed to accomplish, and lead to a revival of holy fervour.

The work of nursing the sick poor, and arresting infectious diseases by proper sanitary measures, is a most praiseworthy one, and those who engage in it from motives of charity and philanthropic concern deserve all the encouragement and support that can be given them. Dr. Kerr, speaking of the Nursing Association at Edgware-road, says: "It is impossible in words to convey my sense of the value of your work. Life after life I have known to be saved by your nursing. Your exertions save the rates. But for you and your staff there would be many imperfect recoveries, and through the crippled state of the patient he would come on the parochial roll." By this one institution, with its staff of five nurses, 519 persons—labourers, charwomen, and others earning daily wages—were nursed through serious illnesses last year. Such work involves much self-denial, but is pre-eminently Christian, and worthy of commendation.

The General Baptists of Lincoln are about to rebuild their place of worship, and have decided to identify the movement with a name long connected with their community, that of Mr. Thomas Cooper. He has been widely and honourably known for many years as a lecturer on Christianity, and the story and results of his conversion from infidelity to faith have powerfully affected the religious thought of multitudes for half a century past. The proposal to call the new edifice the Thomas Cooper Memorial Chapel is by no means out of place or ill-timed, and will probably enlist not a little sympathy with the project outside the society chiefly concerned.

A correspondent calls attention to the prevalent and flagrant violation of laws which have been made for the regulation of the liquor traffic, and gives as illustrations the frequency with which little children are seen going to public-houses to buy ale and spirits, although the law forbids their sale to any under fifteen years of age. He suggests the formation by our various Temperance institutions of a society for seeing that the laws providing for keeping the liquor trade within certain bounds are carried out. The mischief done by sending children to public-houses and gin-palaces is incalculable, and it is certainly important to insist on the enforcement of any law tending to the prevention of so dire an evil.

The same correspondent, who signs himself "A Young Man from Home," also urges the need for greater vigilance for the enforcement of laws for the prevention of immorality. He speaks of the dangers young men are exposed to by the importunity of vile characters in the open streets, which, though punishable, is yet tolerated and passed over. He represents many others when he says "God only knows how some of us struggle against our passions and plead with Him for grace to subdue them, and yet attempts to draw us from the paths of virtue are allowed in the eyes of the police." Vigilance associations such as he pleads for are assuredly wanted, and should be widely formed and upheld.

The "nation scattered and peeled" continues to drink of the bitter cup of persecution. Says a telegram from New Stettin, on March 10:—

"The anti-Jewish riots which occurred here on Saturday evening, on the return of the four Jews acquitted by the Konitz tribunal of the charge of setting fire to the synagogue here, were renewed last night by the mob, who smashed the windows of several houses, and insulted the Jewish inhabitants. The gendarmery charged the rioters with drawn swords, and ultimately restored order."

The Spectator has an article on the prodigality of the rich, in which the writer attempts to justify the lavish expenditure on selfish indulgence to which the wealthy often resort. One illustration employed is as follows:—"Two thousand pounds is a large sum for the flowers to be used for a single night; but, the means being granted, is it so very sinful to spend one's surplus in producing a dreamily beautiful effect, which can by no possibility hurt anyone, and enables florists to ransack earth for their objects of beauty in a way otherwise impossible?" Our contemporary lays stress upon the necessity for the money to be come by without oppression, cheating, or sharp practice, and then concludes that there can be no moral evil in spending any amount of one's fortune in luxurious self-gratification.

It is commonly claimed that any man may do as he likes with his own, and on this principle prodigality on the part of the rich would be said to be justifiable. But there is a higher law than that, and one too readily forgotten and set aside. Men hold their possessions as stewards responsible for their use to Him who is Lord of all. He who has made both rich and poor, expects that the necessities of the latter should be the care of the former, and for men to waste on foolish extravagances, no less than on sinful lusts, what would relieve the sufferings of thousands who are their neighbours, is morally evil in God's sight. Blamable follies, which The Spectator speaks of as distinct from moral evils, are, after all, morally and socially reprehensible.

A correspondent writes, in reference to a recent note on the Sunday delivery of milk, stating that he is sure, from practical illustrations he has himself seen, that it may be avoided to a very great extent if only the milk owners and heads of households will act on principle about it. One man he knows in Middlesex, who gets his living by the sale of milk, resolutely refuses to send round on Sundays. He makes a special delivery at nine p.m. on Saturdays, and so keeps his customers, the Sabbath-day, and the Sabbath milk. God has honoured this course in his case, and always will have regard to those who revere his name. In the interest of the numerous milkmen employed on the Lord's Day, we gladly revert to the subject.

Will our readers help our Tract Fund? Applications for grants of tracts are continually reaching us. The following is one of them:—

"You have been kind enough on two occasions to make to me a grant of tracts for distribution, and I feel greatly indebted to you. In several cases they have been most instrumental in calling wanderers into the narrow way. I hope you will help me once more. I have lately been appointed Missioner to the ships frequenting the Bay of Gibraltar, and sail on April 9 next. It is estimated that no less than 103,380 souls in steamers and 1523 in sailing vessels visited the Bay last year, and no less than 700 total abstinence pledges were signed. All is under the direction of the Bishop and Archdeacon of Gibraltar. I should very much like to take out with me some suitable tracts for distribution, and I feel sure you will not refuse me when I ask for help in our blessed Saviour's name, and may I also ask for your prayers. My work will not be confined to the ships alone, I shall have to visit the sick in the hospital, the prisoners in the prison, the sick and infirm on the Rock, conduct Bible-classes, prayer and temperance meetings. Apologising or troubling you.—Yours sincerely,

"85, Portland-road, A. D. Sylvester.
"Notting-hill, W., March 8.

Several representatives of evangelistic work on the continent of Europe are now in London, or expected here at the close of this month; we bespeak for them from London Christians the sympathy and encouragement due to earnest workers in difficult and adverse circumstances. Signor Antonio Martinez, from Spain, and Pastor Brocher from Belgium, are already here; Mr. McAll, of Paris, with his fellow-worker at Marseilles, M. Saillens; and Professor Christlieb of Bonn in Germany, will arrive soon. Evening meetings are arranged at Mildmay Conference Hall for Mr. Martinez on Tuesday, March 25, for Mr. McAll and M. Saillens on Tuesday, April 1, and for Professor Christlieb on Monday, April 7. Dr. Christlieb will also preach in the Conference Hall in German on Lord's Day afternoon, April 6, at 3.30, and in the evening of the same day at seven, in English.

A party of young emigrants from "Dr. Barnardo's Homes" will be commended to the Lord at the Noonday Prayer-meeting, Aldersgate-street, on Monday next, the 24th instant.

Our esteemed and venerable brother, Rev. Dr. Somerville, has accepted an invitation to hold evangelistic services in Londonderry, commencing Sunday, 30th inst. We commend him to the prayers of our readers that he may have strength for this new undertaking.

We are sincerely thankful to find that our note on the death of Professor Länge in a recent issue was in one point a mistake. The Professor Länge whose melancholy death by drowning had been reported in several papers was not the celebrated professor of Bonn, but another of the same name at Hamburg.

A most interesting and important document is that issued last month from the Marine Department of the Board of Trade. It is headed "Loss of Life from British Ships," and was drawn up by Sir T. H. Farrer. It gives the number of lives lost from 1871 to 1882 inclusive. The average yearly number of sailors afloat during that time has been about 210,000, and the average loss by drowning one in eighty-two. The Wreck Commissioner has said that the loss of one-half of the vessels which founder or are missing is due to preventable causes, for which the owners are more or less responsible. The amount of overlading, undermanning, unseaworthiness, and insufficient equipment, which is proved to exist by the reports of Commissioners appointed to investigate, is a scandal and a shame.

It is therefore a cause for general satisfaction that the Government is set on redressing some at least of the wrongs endured by our seamen. The Merchant Shipping Bill certainly lends needed aid and protection to that class of the community who are exposed to much peril and hardship for want of better regulations on their behalf. Nefarious shipowners who desire to profit by heavy insurances on unseaworthy vessels will of course complain of provisions which restrict their power in these directions; but humanity and justice both urge such legislation as imperative. England owes much to the hardy tars who man her vessels and sustain her commerce, and must and will insist on their safety and welfare being ensured.

"The Reports of Revivals," says The Methodist, "which fill our weekly newspapers are most cheering. Gospel Temperance and Christian Evangelism are evidently reaching the masses. A large number of ministers and laymen are developing great power in these lines of work. Christian women also are coming under the influence of the spirit of this Christian age. We anticipate great spiritual results in the immediate future. But our evangelistic successes will involve the churches in the most serious responsibility. A vast amount of spiritual material is being prepared for what we may call higher manipulation. The evangelist must be followed by the pastor and by the teacher. The men who gather people into the Church cannot always keep them. The Timothy who is full of 'natural care' is needed to do that. There are fine opportunities just now for all men and women who excel in quiet and persevering power of toil."

We trust none of our readers will overlook the intensely, though somewhat painfully, interesting record of rescue work in the East-end, on another page, from the pen of Miss Steer. If they but knew the Christlike devotion and self-sacrifice shown by this brave sister and her helpers, we are sure there would be no lack of the means by which to sustain and extend this "life-boat work" on a perilous and rock-bound coast.

Dissatisfaction is increasingly prevalent on the important question of overwork in our public schools, and it must be so while cases of death and disease continue to be directly traceable to it. Dr. Forbes Winslow has been strongly denouncing the present system, asserting that he has ample proof that many children become hopelessly demented, and others unfitted for the serious duties of life, in consequence of the strain laid upon them. Such testimonies ought to awaken general attention to the subject, and lead to strenuous opposition of what threatens to have a most baneful effect upon the future well-being of the nation. "All overdoing is undoing," is a maxim some departments have evidently overlooked.

Two Bills, affecting the vital question of Sabbath desecration, are about to be brought before our Legislature. On Friday, March 21, Lord Thurlow will move a resolution in the House of Lords in favour of the opening of the public museums and picture galleries. The Bill is much more skilfully drawn than was Lord Dunraven's last year, and so it may command more support. It is getting in the thin end of the wedge to uphold this measure, and friends of Lord's Day observance should be awake to the need of resisting vigorously such encroachments on ground we cannot hold too tenaciously. It is desirable to spread information on these points as widely as possible, many failing to see the results of such a measure becoming law.

On Wednesday, April 2, Mr. Stevenson's Bill for the Sunday Closing of Public-houses in England stands first on the Order List for second reading. The passing of this Bill would be one of the greatest boons Parliament could confer upon the nation. There is no more fruitful source of evil and desecration of the day of rest than the having such places of resort open on the Sabbath. Only the enormous influence of the brewers' interests can prevent so invaluable a reform being effected forthwith. Not only Temperance advocates, but all social reformers, should support by all means in their power a movement which would bring salvation and joy to thousands of homes and hearts.

Rev. Joseph Cook, in one of his recent lectures, gives a dark picture of the lawless state of society in America when he says that while out of every 10,000 deaths in Europe only seven are murders, in the United States out of 1000 deaths twenty-one are caused by murder. Among the causes for the lawlessness which prevails he enumerates the animosities which obtain between races and religions and political parties; intemperance; irreligion; atheism; the failure of the Church to reach the masses; illiteracy; and the weakness of the Government in protecting the rights of citizens and of the States. On both sides the Atlantic there is evidently a great work to be done ere we see the triumph of righteousness secured. Most of the evils Mr. Cook enumerates would be lessened at once if only the Church of Christ rose to the true height of her calling and privilege.

We are glad to know that the project of erecting a Conference Hall at Stratford is proceeding favourably. The building will form a centre of very varied operations, such as that of the Mizpah Band, work among railway men, policemen, and others, Y.M.C.A., Open-air Mission, united prayer meetings, &c. We understand that a considerable sum is yet needed to make up the amount that must be expended on the building; we trust those who are specially interested in the East of London will help in this matter. The hon. treasurer is Mr. C. Boardman, Magnolia House, The Green, Stratford.

Referring to some remarks on the second coming of the Lord Jesus, recently quoted in these columns, a correspondent mentions the following words of the late John Angell James:—

"Bride of the Lamb, Church of the Saviour, where is thy looking, longing, waiting for thy Lord, like the Primitive Church?"

With regard to the restoration of Israel, it is God's commanded prayer that we should "give Him no rest" till answered (Is. lxii. 7).

Plain words and home truths are wholesome, if sometimes unpalatable to those who are wounded by them. Dr. Parker goes to the root of things, when he says, in reference to the Outcast London controversy, "When a woman is compelled to work all day for fourpence it is a mockery to build her a Mission hall and invite her to hear prayers from the people who ought to have paid her a better price for her labour. 'It is iniquity, even the solemn meeting.' When ladies grumble to pay half a crown for an article upon which some needy sister has spent a week of continuous toil, and then on Sunday give away tracts and ring the bells of heaven as if they were favourite angels of God, they ought to be told that their blasphemy and their benevolence are alike despised."

These are scathing words, but the Doctor is right when he adds, "The people to whom I refer do not want first to be robbed and then to be pitied by their robbers. They are honest people, downright hard-working, but who have never had a chance to show their real quality, and all they ask is a fair day's price for a fair day's labour." When, however, he says, "Better agitate for a new political economy than build Mission halls to mock the poverty we first created," we reply: By all means agitate for the new political economy; reprove, rebuke, exhort Christian employers, above all, to be just and righteous in their treatment of the poor who serve them, but build Mission halls as well, and make them centres of light, strong enough to let it be seen that the Gospel not only saves the sinner, but condemns all manner of injustice, and is ever on the side of all who are oppressed.

The district of Algoma, Canada, offers a wide and important field for Gospel effort. The Marquis of Lorne, at a meeting at Willis's Rooms the other day, expressed regret that Roman Catholic emissaries were more often to be met with in the outlying regions of the Far West, than those of the Protestant Church. The Indians who people the country north of Lake Superior are mostly heathens, but are said to be very accessible to the doctrines of the Gospel, and afford an encouraging sphere for labour. Another feature mentioned by Lord Lorne as calling for special zeal in these parts is the fact that some 9000 navvies are engaged in the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

A GERMAN PASTOR ON MR. SPURGEON.

[A Swedish lady, resident in London, has translated and sent to us a chapter from a newly-published German book, by Pastor R. O. Funcke, of Bremen, in which he records his impressions of London. This apter, the greater portion of which we quote, is devoted, as will be seen, to the description of a visit to the Metropolitan Tabernacle.]

"HAVE you heard Mr. Spurgeon?" "Of course you will hear Mr. Spurgeon?" "How fortunate for you Mr. Spurgeon has just returned from the Highlands; you will find him in very good health." The foregoing remarks were addressed to me on the very first day of my visit to London, not only by professed Christians, but even by some to whom religion was a matter of indifference. For Mr. Spurgeon is a phenomenon, who may fairly claim the notice of any civilised member of society.

Great bursts of song were already issuing from the vast building when I arrived, and alas! outside were hundreds of people who, like myself, were too late, and apparently vainly desirous of getting in. I had been told that hundreds continually had to turn back, and I felt greatly distressed at the thought of having sacrificed my Sunday quiet to no purpose. Close to me was a gentleman of a peculiarly prepossessing appearance. I addressed him in my miserable broken English, and tried to explain my difficulty. He understood me, but shrugged his shoulders. However, when I told him that I was a German clergyman, this statement immediately wrought a change in my favour. "You shall and must get in, if nobody else does." He asked if Mr. Spurgeon had friends even in Germany, and was delighted to hear that many of his writings had been translated into German, and were much read. He thereupon proceeded to intercede for me with one of the officials. This man expressed his regret at being unable to procure me a seat, but through a back door he admitted me into one of the galleries, where there was at least standing room, and where I was not far removed from the platform.

Thus I found myself in the midst of that vast assembly, of which I had so often heard. It is stated that the Tabernacle will comfortably seat 6000 people. If so, there must at the least have been 7000 present, for of persons standing, like myself, there were hundreds, and hundreds again who were seated very uncomfortably. To anyone within the building the sight of so many people gathered together for worship cannot fail to be most impressive. I felt thrilled through and through when those thousands rose to their feet and sang a hymn. It struck me as worthy of imitation that Mr. Spurgeon first read the verse that was to be sung. Not because the congregation were not provided with hymn-books, for with the exception of myself they all seemed to be; but in this way they were made to understand and apprehend the contents of the verse before they commenced singing, and thus they did not merely sing one word after another, but they sung out of the spirit of the verse, hence with far more energy and feeling than they would otherwise have done.

In this temple of the Baptists there are, of course, no stained windows, no altar, and no ornaments of any kind. A very large baptismal font (for immersion) was the only thing, however, that would remind you of being among the Baptists. There was nothing in the sermon to make you aware of the fact. It was quite an ordinary evangelical address, with no sectarian features whatever. You could hear remarkably well in this mighty hall, and the preacher did not give you the idea of exerting himself unduly in order to be heard by those thousands of listeners.

But let us have a glance at the man himself. He stood there in his plain coat, without priestly vestment of any kind, with nothing of a clerical cut about him. That morning he appeared to be well, but I learnt that he had been a sufferer for many years. Several things in his sermon were suggestive of his having experienced physical weakness and pain. At the first sight of Mr. Spurgeon, I was struck with his resemblance to the late Mr. Blumhardt (so famous for the miraculous cures wrought by his laying on of hands). But on closer examination I found that there was a vast difference between that simple, studious mystic, and this fearless, vigorous, practical Englishman. In the short, stout figure, the kindly eye, and the hearty, frank, genial manner, the two were perfectly alike. But whereas the contemplative mind of the German was filled with the idea of the "restoration of all things," and with expectations of the speedy return of our Lord, the Englishman is devoting his zeal and energy to the practical end of bringing lost, wavering souls to decide at once for Christ, and to rejoice in their salvation.

Mr. Spurgeon is the type of a man of a thoroughly noble and winning disposition. We recognise in him, even as he is this day, the man who has not been brought up in the school of professors, philosophers, and scribes, but has been trained through God's immediate dealings with him, as was John the Baptist of old. It would require no great stretch of imagination to see in him the man who once stood on the bleak common addressing the assembled multitude. He shows himself just as he feels, and that he may safely do, for his frankness is linked with true humility. Christian courage and holy self-reliance seem to emanate from his whole being. "Every inch of him a man," has been said of him, and my impressions exactly tallied with that description. He inspires you with the reassuring conviction that he would be ready at any moment to lay down his life for the Gospel he preaches.

A greater contrast can hardly be imagined than that between Mr. Spurgeon and those Church of England clergymen whom I saw officiating at Westminster and St. Paul's Cathedral. There everything is made up of show and ceremony. The clergy are continually changing their vestments, their position and bearing, nay, even their tone of voice. Choir boys, candles carried in front and behind, various processions, long litanies and a wonderful music were the principal features of those services. Everybody's attention was engrossed with the music, but to all appearance the hearts were but little stirred by the sermon, which was read in a monotonous manner from the paper. Those High Church clergy put you only too vividly in mind of Roman Catholic formalism and drill.

As to the manner of Mr. Spurgeon's delivery, he would at times speak for five minutes without moving head, hand, or foot. While speaking he would lay both hands on the rails of the platform, or put his right in his bosom, or cross his arms on his chest, or even on his back. But anon he would elevate his frame, as if to holy combat. It was like unto an earnest struggle between God and man. He would raise his hands beseechingly towards heaven as if entreating God to come down, and then again turn to his fellow-men, addressing them in such a sweet, pathetic, and impressive tone of voice that it thrilled you right through.

Mr. Spurgeon's text on that Sunday was the fortieth Psalm. My imperfect knowledge of the language caused me to lose a good deal, but notwithstanding I felt mightily edified by the sermon. Even yet it is sounding, not in my ears, but in my heart. How he repeated three times following: "Lord, make haste to help me!" Of course this is not the place for giving an extract of the sermon. But not till that Sunday did I fully realise the man's peculiar power. It soon proved itself to me that those sermons ought to be heard, not read, and heard even thus—in the midst of this wonderful, vast assembly.

Infinite tenderness and love of souls, and a burning desire to bring every one that comes within reach of his voice out of the bondage of sin, are the characteristics of his manner. I had before this read a good many of Mr. Spurgeon's sermons; even at the risk of offending his friends, I must confess that I certainly thought most of them very good, but neither in form nor thought superior to many other printed sermons which are not received with anything like the same amount of favour. But having heard and seen the man himself, I was enabled to appreciate him at his worth, and to understand why he is trusted and looked up to by tens of thousands. I no longer wondered at his attracting thousands upon thousands Sunday after Sunday from any part of London to his Tabernacle.

Some of my German brethren in the ministry will perhaps want to know whether Mr. Spurgeon carefully studies his sermons, writes them down, and commits them to memory. I have not been able to ascertain, but I will guarantee that such a man not only works in earnest on his knees, but even with his brains and his pen, and does not trust to immediate inspirations, or to his happy genius. All his utterances had evidently been duly weighed and pondered. He never hesitated in his delivery, and never made a slip. At the same time he had made himself so thoroughly master of his subject, that he was quite independent of manuscript. And this, I take it, is precisely what all public speakers should aim at.

In conclusion, I will add a few words about the character and conduct of the congregation such as it struck me on that particular morning. It was apparently made up of all ranks of society, and the number of men quite equalled that of women. The middle class was most largely represented, but you would also see individuals of such moral and physical wretchedness as could not be found throughout the whole length of our country. On the other hand, there were ladies and gentlemen attended by powdered footmen. Nor was the black man wanting, and I made out a Chinaman and a native of India whom I had seen in the Home for Orientals on the preceding day.

In the gallery I noticed a number of gallant soldiers with white puggeries round their hats, showing that they were on the point of embarking for Egypt. To many of those it may have been the last public worship they were privileged to join in on earth. The Lord only knows how many of them are buried in the sand of the desert at this moment. Sailors of all descriptions, in their becoming costumes, were conspicuous in the centre. Once more, after a long time of tossing on the waves and knocking about in strange lands, they were enabled to praise the Lord in a large congregation.

Poor young mothers with babies had to leave because their little ones protested too loudly against the sermon. More than one lady was taken out, whitefaced and near upon fainting. I only wondered that such cases were not more frequent, as the atmosphere within the building was fearfully oppressive on that hot summer's day. Thousands of fans were in constant motion the whole time, and they were not used only by ladies. It made me quite nervous, and the smell of musk, used as an improvement on the atmosphere, affected me very unpleasantly.

There were no doubt hundreds upon hundreds of the audience who had only come out of curiosity. Mr. Spurgeon appears to be classed with the other "lions" of the metropolis, and strangers are advised to hear and see him as such a one. Thus many will go to Mr. Spurgeon's as they would go to the play, and they make use of their opera-glasses just as freely. But such as go to hear him in the same way as you would hear a celebrated violinist, or a reciter, will scarcely come with a praying heart and in a devout frame of mind. Some appeared to be busy counting the congregation, and others were drawing. It cannot be denied that such things in a measure mar the enjoyment of the service.

But the overwhelming majority might certainly be characterised as following the preacher with rapt attention. In many faces I read the most profound emotion, and tears were streaming from many eyes. It was forcibly brought home to me, that numbers of the men and women sitting there would then and there be pricked in their hearts, and eventually be able to trace to that hour the beginning of a new life. I shall never forget the beautiful expression in the face of a working man close to me, who found the text in his Bible and then pointed it out to me. In doing so he put his finger on the first words of the Psalm, saying, with an inexpressibly happy smile, "The Lord inclined unto me," at the same time looking into my face, and apparently feeling satisfied that I was one who would know what this meant.

It was pleasant to see the kindly relations existing between the members of the congregation, and how heartily they shook hands at the close of the service, as if making a compact on the foundation of the sermon. It was no doubt also a praiseworthy practice that nearly every one had brought his Bible, which he made diligent use of. I noticed that the places were generally found very quickly, showing familiarity with the Word of God. The hymns, with but few exceptions, would not bear comparison with the German ones for beauty, power, and grandeur. The general tenor of English hymns is too sentimental, and they move within an extremely limited sphere of thought.

The service was over by half-past one. It concluded, to me, quite unexpectedly, as I fully supposed there would have been a farewell hymn. I should have preferred it thus. It seems to me that the congregation ought to have been allowed to lift up their voices at the conclusion. But this, of course, may be a matter of taste.

I made my way to a slightly elevated part of the street, and stood looking on while the mighty multitude dispersed in all directions. Who can say how many seeds of eternal life may have found a fruitful soil in the hearts of those many thousands? That day will reveal it.

By and by I found myself once more beneath the beautiful, quiet trees of Bromley, where I read Psalm xl. over again in my Bible, and determined to make it my text on the first Sunday of my return to my own flock; and if that sermon proved to be an edifying one to my hearers they were in no small degree indebted for this to the worthy Mr. Spurgeon.

Mr. Joseph Cleworth in Macduff.

THIS earnest evangelist held a series of meetings in the town of Macduff from Feb. 17 to March 9. From the beginning the meetings were well attended, but during the last week the numbers rose until on some of the week nights not fewer than 1000 persons were present, a large proportion being young men and women. On the last Sabbath evening the Established Church, the largest building in the town, was completely filled. There could not have been under 1400 present. The population of the town is about 3700. No evangelistic services have ever been so largely attended in this place.

Many in these large audiences were Christian people, who experienced a great refreshing; a considerable number of others went into the inquiry-room, and of these several professed to have found peace in believing. Christians of all denominations heartily united in helping the Mission. A large choir was formed and trained for some weeks before the Mission commenced, and their singing of Gospel hymns contributed in no small degree to interest the audiences and to awaken and deepen religious feeling. The whole community felt very grateful to Mr. Cleworth for his services, and would welcome him back if he ever had it in his power to pay them another visit. G.

THE GOSPEL FOR IRELAND.—In sending to us a contribution for the Society to which he refers, a correspondent writes as follows:—"While it is freely acknowledged that the best relief for Ireland's need is in 'the glorious Gospel of the blessed God,' it would surely be well to see more frequently in monetary acknowledgments the names of such unsectarian agencies as the 'Irish Evangelisation Society.' The humble contribution to its funds now enclosed has been stimulated especially by finding no Irish agency named in a list of seventy other worthy objects, presenting, however, no greater needs."

Colportage in Northampton.

THE Christian Colportage Association for England has just issued the first number of an occasional paper entitled Stray Leaves, from which we extract the following:—

In the year 1880, at the urgent request and by the liberal aid of a number of the Lord's people (many of whom sent their contributions anonymously through The Christian) we sent first one and then a second colporteur to Northampton. These men have proved well qualified for this post, and their labours have been attended with much success, and their hearts gladdened by many tokens of the Lord's blessing in the conversion of souls. They are able to visit the whole town of Northampton once a month, besides one or two of the surrounding villages. They have also a weekly stall in the market, where they sell large numbers of Bibles and Christian books.

Last summer the two colporteurs made a fortnight's tour, visiting many of the more distant villages, hawking from house to house during the day, and holding Gospel services every evening. They were generally well received, and sold a large number of Scriptures and Christian books, finding many opportunities of speaking to the people individually concerning salvation.

When we consider that 2,243 Bibles and Testaments, 26,474 carefully-selected Gospel books, and 4,323 magazines, besides about 8,000 Scripture cards have, by this means, been sold in the town of Northampton, and the surrounding neighbourhood, who can estimate the value of the work done? So highly has this work been prized in the town itself, that many have contributed towards its maintenance, and have formed themselves into an Association for this purpose. They have, however, been unable to give more than sufficient for the support of one colporteur; and the society's funds being otherwise severely strained, unless help is obtained elsewhere, the other of these servants of the Lord doing this invaluable work, may have to be withdrawn.

[The Secretary of the Christian Colportage Association is Mr. H. D. Brown, 37, Farringdon-street, E.C.]

CHRISTIAN POLICEMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

THE first annual meeting of this Association was held on Tuesday, March 11, at Exeter Hall. The meeting was to have taken place in the lower hall at five o'clock, but shortly after commencing, the crowd outside, unable to find room, made it necessary to adjourn to the large upper hall, where there was ample accommodation for the policemen and their wives, numbering in all between two and three thousand.

The chair was taken by the Right Hon. the Earl Cairns, who expressed his pleasure at meeting such a large body of the Force on such an occasion, and at finding such a bond of union with them as the Christian Policemen's Association supplied.

Mr. J. H. Tritton announced that letters, expressing the greatest sympathy with the Association and the regret of the writers at their inability to be present, had been received from the Commissioner of Police, Sir E. Y. W. Henderson, Mr. Howard Vincent, Director of the Criminal Investigation Department, and Canon Wilberforce.

From the report, read by Mr. Tritton, we learned that the success of the Association has been most encouraging. Although it has only been in existence for a year, there are already nineteen branches, and over 700 members, many of whom speak warmly of the help it has been to them, especially in emboldening them to make an open confession of their faith. There are over sixty Bible-classes held in London and the neighbourhood in connection with the Association, besides many classes in provincial towns. The report also mentioned the monthly paper, On and Off Duty (published at Messrs. Marshall Bros., 3, Amen-corner, Paternoster-row. price 1d.), the subscribers and contributors to which are principally members of the force.

After a few earnest words by Mr. A. C. P. Coote, on the importance of believing with the heart and confessing with the mouth, addresses were given by Rev. Evan Hopkins on "Fight the good fight of faith," and by Mr. Stevenson Blackwood, who reminded his hearers that the second European conversion recorded in the Bible was that of an anonymous constable in charge of the prison cells at Philippi. Through the conviction of the Holy Spirit he had left on record the question which all should ask, "What must I do to be saved?" and called forth the plain, simple direction, which, if followed, brings peace to the longing soul, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

Rev. Archibald Brown, who followed, addressed himself especially to the unconverted, entreating them to decide for Christ before leaving the hall; he also urged those who were already Christians to more perfect trust in God, as the only means of receiving that perfect peace which ought to result from a knowledge of our salvation.

Mr. J. E. Mathieson, of Mildmay, spoke on the need of spiritual power. After a few words of testimony from Superintendent Turner, the meeting was brought to a close by a short, pointed address from the Rev. Wilson Carlile, of the Church Army. Then followed prayer, during which at least 200 responded to the invitation to ask the prayers of God's people for their salvation.

The singing during the meeting was led by a choir of members of the Force, kindly conducted by Mr. Hales, leader of the Blue Ribbon Choir at Richmond.

At 7.30 the greater part of the audience left, many having some distance to go and a night of "duty" to follow, but a large number remained till a late hour at an experience meeting, which was addressed by Mr. Coote, Mr. Tritton, Mr. George Clarke, and several members of the Force. There is reason to believe that not a few decided to accept and follow Christ.

THE CHRISTIAN EVIDENCE SOCIETY have made arrangements for the delivery of lectures at the Hall of Science, Old-street. The first will be given on Wednesday evening by Rev. Edward White, of Camden-town, on "Miracles of the Bible; or, the Reason of the Supernatural in Christianity."

DISCHARGED CONVICTS IN NEW YORK.

I FEEL certain your thousands of readers on this as well as the other side of the water will be interested in hearing some news of the Home of Industry and Refuge for Discharged Convicts, located at 40, Hauston-street, in this city. As the sixth anniversary of this institution recently took place, I send you a few items of interest concerning its history.

The work of saving the ex-convicts of this city and country was begun over six years ago by Michael Dunn, an ex-convict. Mr. Dunn was born in Manchester, England, in 1826. He was taught to steal when a child, and was transported to Van Diemens Land at twelve years of age. He served thirty-five years in eleven different prisons, two terms of which were in solitary confinement. His back bears the scars of many a severe flogging. When liberated the last time, his keeper said, "Michael, I will keep your cell for you six weeks, as you will be sure to return by that time." But the Lord had other work for him. By mere accident he wandered one evening into Jerry McAulay's Mission, 316, Water-street, and there heard for the first time men and women tell how the Lord Jesus had saved them from being thieves and drunkards. To use Mike's own words, "I went to the front and knelt down and asked God to take the desire of thieving out of my heart, and I have never stolen since." He had been a bigotted, ignorant Roman Catholic, but his eyes were opened at last, and he learned to trust the Saviour.

He began to feel an earnest desire to help men of his own class, who when liberated from prison had no other channel open to them but to return to their former life, so he rented an old house down in Water-street, and in the most humble way opened a home for convicts. For a while their struggles and privations were great, and they were nearly starved out more than once. They made shoes, sold pencils, and made shawls, till finally good Christian men and women began to have confidence in their sincerity, and gave them substantial aid. Mr. A. S. Hatch, now president of the Stock Exchange, John H. Boswell, R. F. Cutling, James Talcott, W. E. Dodge, and other well-known Christian men of wealth, took hold of the work with Mr. Dunn, and incorporated the "Home of Industry and Refuge for Discharged Convicts." Mr. Boswell is now its president, and a most earnest, zealous friend of the ex-convict.

The present "Home" is a large, commodious building, in the very heart of the city, and well adapted to the purpose for which it was chosen. The property is worth some 40,000 dollars, and is owned by the "Home." Several branches of industry are carried on here. The finest brooms sold are made there, also scrubbing-brushes, baskets, shawls, door-mats, and carriage-rugs. Articles of bric-a-brac and mechanical genius adorn the walls, all made by the inmates in their leisure hours.

Though the industry is considered an important branch of this work, the saving of men's souls is the real object for which the Home was opened. The most attractive feature about the building is the chapel. Here services are held Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday, and Sunday evenings, and a Bible-class Sabbath morning. Song, reading the Scriptures, prayer and testimony, is the style of the meeting; but the latter creates the most interest. Here you can listen to men who have been in prisons all over the world, relating how they came to the Home, just out of prison, homeless, friendless, and penniless. They were taken in and here they found Jesus as their Saviour. They had no fears now that He was their Friend. Since the home opened its hospitable doors, some 1200 men have found a refuge there. The number of them who have proved steadfast, honest, and faithful is very encouraging. Many occupy positions of trust, while several are missionaries in the city, and some of the most earnest Christian workers we have are converts from this Home.

For some years Mr. Dunn has been urged to go to the Pacific slope and start a similar Home there. As the one here is in splendid running order, Mr. Dunn finally accepted a call from the California Prisons' Association, and has gone to San Francisco to aid them in the great work of saving the criminals. After Mr. Dunn's resignation was accepted, Mr. Charles Stewart was chosen by the trustees to fill his place, and the present condition of the Home is such as to make its friends thank God and take courage.

Manchester Boys' and Girls' Refuges.

THE annual meeting in connection with the Manchester and Salford Boys' and Girls' Refuges and Children's Aid Society was held in the hall of the Manchester Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday, the 11th inst. The Mayor (Mr. P. Goldschmidt) presided, and during the evening the Mayoress distributed prizes to the children, who with their friends filled every part of the hall.

From the annual report we find that an important extension has been entirely completed—the Orphan Homes and Girls' Homes branch; and a new feature of the work, "The Seaside Home for weak, pale-faced city children," has been established at Lytham. The year 1883 began with 255 children under the care of the Refuge and branch homes. During the year 346 fresh cases sought their aid, 255 boys and 91 girls, nearly all ragged, neglected, and uncared for. Some were deemed unsuitable for admission, others received temporary help or were restored to friends, while 21 were passed on to other institutions, leaving 372 children in the Home during the year.

The Mayor said the work of the institution was most valuable, and deserved the support and encouragement of all members of the community. Looked at merely from a charitable and philanthropic point of view, the Refuges must command the hearty sympathy of all whose hearts were open to the pleading of suffering and sorrow, especially when it was remembered that the hard lot of the little ones was not due to any fault of their own. But apart from those philanthropic and what some might call sentimental views, there were other reasons why the Refuges ought to command ready and active support. The waifs and strays of humanity that were gathered under their benevolent shelter and protection would, but for such an agency, in all likelihood drift along currents of vice and crime which would lead them to destruction, both moral and physical; they would then, in such a case, eventually prove sources of trouble and danger to the community. In his opinion it was not only the shelter and protection and bodily care that the children received by means of the Refuges, but the education and training they there received, fitting them to earn their own living in an honest and honourable way, which made the Refuges entitled to the hearty support of the community.

Other friends spoke in hearty commendation of the work.

BRIXTON ORPHANAGE.—The eighth anniversary of the Orphanage for Fatherless Girls, Barrington-road, Brixton, S.W., was held on Monday, March 10, at the St. John's Schools, Canterbury-road, Brixton. The Lord Mayor presided. The meeting, which was well attended, was addressed by the Revs. Burman Cassin, Canon Hussey, C. J. R. Cooke, N. A. Garland, J. P. Gledstone, William Herbert, Mr. Locke, Marmaduke Osborne, and other ministers and gentlemen. The annual report, submitted to the meeting, stated that the institution had made rapid progress. Seventy orphan girls had been admitted into the institution during the past year; 180 orphans are now being maintained, clothed, and educated in the Home, and trained for domestic service. The average cost of maintaining, clothing, and educating each child is under £12 per annum. Destitute orphan girls are admitted (irrespective of sect or nationality), so long as there is room, without votes or payment of any kind whatever, and are trained as domestic servants. The home is now nearly full, but numerous applicants are waiting admission. The trustees are endeavouring to extinguish the debt of £750 still remaining on the new premises.

How Women may help Women.

ALL thoughtful people must be aware that snares and great temptations await every woman and girl who arrives friendless at a large railway station in a large town. Thoughtless, self-willed girls are in the most danger, as they usually wander from their homes from a desire to see more of life.

To meet this obvious danger the Committees of the Manchester Railway Station Lodging-houses have opened two houses in public thoroughfares, close to the London-road and Victoria stations, where board and lodging can be obtained at a cheap rate, and where womanly counsel and help in obtaining employment are given, to all who are willing to be advised.

At these houses a reference is expected after the first night, and in necessitous cases, where the applicant has a good character, small loans are made.

Are there any such houses under the personal superintendence of large-hearted, judicious, Christian ladies, near to the terminal railway stations in London? If not, why not? The difficulties surrounding such schemes are great, but "the Lord loveth the stranger," and so ought we, and we also should aim to prevent mischief. (There is a kindred scheme at 21, Conduit-place, Paddington.)

A second need for help among women has drawn forth an appeal from the Manchester Women's Christian Temperance Association, on behalf of their police-court branch. Women appear time after time before the magistrates, from the effects of their insatiable craving for drink. This fearful mania drives them into the commission of many sins. Women are known who have suffered punishment over forty different times, for acts done when under the influence of alcohol. If these victims, too often, of hereditary tendencies, could be legally committed to certified Inebriate Homes by the magistrates, both society and these poor degraded ones would be benefitted. The need for some such institutions, where women must submit to legal restraint, is recognised by all engaged in rescue work. Who will help? Of course fresh legislation will be needed, as at present, unless habitual drunkards are willing to enter such a home, nothing can be done for their restoration.

CRIME IN MELBOURNE.—A sort of cataract of crime has broken on the community. Melbourne larrikins have been fired by the example of Sydney youth, and a respectable woman has been seized and outraged in the streets by a gang of roughs, the victim owing her life, apparently, to the circumstance that her assailants were disturbed by some passers-by. Both Geelong and Prahran have been the scenes of singular brutal murders, the story of the wife-murder at Prahran being specially sad. Husband and wife had lived together happily for many years, and brought up a large family. About two years ago the husband fell into drinking habits. Idleness and misery came on the heels of drink; endless quarrels arose, these hardened into hate, until hate begot murder. The story, like all such stories, illustrates the limitless mischief and misery which break in on human life when God's laws are forsaken.—Southern Press.

THE DUBLIN RAGGED SCHOOLS AND HOMES.—By the kind permission of Earl and Countess Cairns, the sale of work which usually takes place at this season, for the benefit of the Schools and Homes in connection with the Irish Church Missions was held on Thursday and Friday last, at 5, Cromwell Houses. There was a good attendance of visitors, and the stalls of the kind friends who have now for the fourth year engaged in this labour of love were plenteously furnished with the articles usually seen on such occasions. On the first day the business of the sale was preceded by prayer offered by Rev. H. W. Webb Peploe, and on the second by Rev. Nevile Sherbrook. Twice a day Rev. Horace W. Townsend gave addresses, illustrated by dissolving views, showing the Society's field of operations in the four provinces of Ireland. It is to be hoped that the pecuniary result will be as favourable as in former years.

Mission Coffee Halls.

DEAR SIR,—May I thank your readers for their kind response to my appeal? They have sent me £600, part in gifts and part as loan, with interest to be paid. For the letters I have received and sympathy shown, as well as for these liberal subscriptions, I offer most grateful thanks. At the same time I am obliged to say that without more than double this sum we cannot make a beginning. To start well in a good position and on a suitable scale, so as to produce a Model Mission Coffee Hall, with a margin over to meet the first year's expenses, we require a larger sum, and therefore venture to make this one more request for further contributions, either as loan or in gifts. I will receive gladly any sum sent to the address given.

—Yours faithfully, Lady Hope.

Mr. T. E. Murphy at St. Helen's.

FAREWELL VISIT.

ON Thursday evening, March 6, a meeting was held in the Mission Hall, Waterloo-street, St. Helen's, for the purpose of bidding farewell to Mr. T. E. Murphy, previous to his returning to America. The hall, which is capable of holding about 1,000 persons, was crowded to excess, many being compelled to go away unable to obtain admission.

Rev. Canon Carr, Vicar of St. Helen's, had been announced to preside, but, unfortunately, sickness prevented him from being present. A letter was read from him expressing his great regret at being absent, and wishing success to the meeting and the cause. The chair was taken by Rev. R. J. Ward, Congregational Minister, who reminded the meeting of the very successful Blue Ribbon Mission conducted by Mr. T. E. Murphy in St. Helen's at the close of 1882. It was well known that that Mission had been a great blessing to the town, and that very much of the good which was then accomplished still remained, and was spreading more and more. The Rev. W. Chaplin (Episcopalian) also addressed the meeting, and referred to his own Temperance society of nearly 700 members, which was largely the outgrowth of the Mission.

Mr. Murphy delivered an address of considerable length and great power, and at the close the audience passed a very enthusiastic vote of thanks to him for all his services at St. Helen's, and then united in commending him to God in prayer.

We have received from Rev. Adam Scott, of Sale, an interesting sketch of "A week with Mr. Murphy" in the neighbourhood of Manchester; we are sorry not to have space for it. The meetings described were held at Sale, Rawtenstall, and Stretford, and were all marked by much enthusiasm. Steps are being taken by the friends in the various places to give permanence to the movement. Mr. Scott says, in closing:—"Mr. Murphy has left us, but he will live in many grateful memories; should he ever find his way back hither, his friends and converts will accord to him a thousand welcomes. Meanwhile they follow him with their earnest prayers and best wishes."

LONDON CITY MISSION.—On Tuesday week, on the invitation of the Lord Mayor, the third social gathering was held at the Mansion-house of the subscribers and friends of the City and Central Poor Districts Auxiliary to the London City Mission. Between 700 and 800 guests assembled. An interesting report was read, which stated that the Auxiliary had recently made an effort to obtain the necessary support for at least one missionary of the Society, to labour in what was called "outcast London." The New Stock Exchange Association had already responded by contributing £120, a sum sufficient to meet the guarantee of the Auxiliary for two missionaries. One of these would labour in the Cowcross district, in Clerkenwell, and the other in Bethnal-green. The meeting was addressed by Rev. H. Huleatt, Bethnal-green; Mr. Sheriff Clarence Smith, Mr. F. A. Bevan, and Rev. Dr. Thain Davidson, all of whom bore testimony to the beneficial effects of the Mission.

Consecration Thoughts.

HAVE I received Thee, O my Lord?
Thy truth embraced, obeyed thy Word?
And by thy Spirit's quickening might,
Passed out of darkness into light?

Am I of that great gift possessed—
My soul's Redemption, Refuge, Rest?
That life divine, all gifts above,
Sure token of a Father's love?

If thus, then let me bow no more
At self's high altar to adore;
Nor on the world those powers bestow,
That now with heavenly ardour glow.

To Him who died, and rose, and reigns,
Be what of mortal life remains,
All consecrated, calm, and bright—
"At evening time let there be light."

Submissive to his gracious will,
Be every restless passion still,
And into holy bondage brought
Each anxious wish, each wayward thought.

On pleasant plains, or lonely steeps,
Where gladness smiles, or sorrow weeps,
His perfect life my pattern be,
My joy through all, his "Follow Me."

Temperance Items.

On Saturday last Mr. E. P. Weston, the temperance pedestrian, completed his unprecedented feat of walking 5000 miles in 100 consecutive days, excluding Sundays and holidays.

The Glasgow United Evangelistic Association have strongly memorialised the magistrates of the city as to the prevalent drunkenness and the need for stringent preventive action.

Mr. Gough's House.—The house in Sandgate, in which Mr. J. B. Gough was born, and to which many an enthusiastic teetotaler has made pilgrimage during recent years, has been demolished, to make way for improvements in the pretty little Kentish town.

In reply to a largely-signed circular, presented by 713 ministers of religion in Liverpool and the Hundred of West Derby, Mr. Gladstone, through his secretary, states that the Government are most anxious to proceed with a prudent reform of the licensing laws.

A meeting of elementary school teachers, School Board officers, private schoolmasters, and other members of the teaching profession, convened by the National Temperance League, was held on Saturday week in the Albert Memorial Hall, Manchester; about 250 were present.

The Vicar of Burton-on-Trent and His Curates.—Our readers will remember the recent dismissal from his curacy of Rev. W. J. Spriggs-Smith, Christ Church, Burton-on-Trent, by Rev. Charles Guest, his vicar, under pressure of the brewers. We now learn that similar action has been taken by the vicar in connection with Rev. W. B. Dearden, fellow-curate with Mr. Spriggs-Smith. Mr. Dearden, having recently published a pamphlet entitled "Why I am a Teetotaler," has received notice to quit his curacy.

Honolulu.—Intemperance and other evils are making fatal ravages among the Hawaians. "It is evident," says the Honolulu Friend, "that the fight with intemperance is a combat with fearful odds against us. Greed, sensuality, and perverseness are a triple alliance it is no holiday diversion to meet in combat. If prohibition is too radical a measure for immediate success, cannot some legislation be devised that shall be not exactly self-operative, but in some measure self-supporting, directing and strengthening public sentiment?"

Temperance Reform in Canada.—The prominence given in the Canadian press to matters relating to temperance and the liquor laws testifies to the keeness of the interest with which the war against whisky is being waged. In Toronto the Temperance women are organising opposition to the sale of liquor in grocery shops. A popular vote has declared by a majority of 360 for the abolition of the grocers' licence. Retail druggists are being carefully watched against infringement, some of the number having already been heavily fined for contravention of the law. In Montreal the number of liquor licences has been reduced, and Brantford City Council, besides diminishing the licences, has increased the price charged for them.

THE RATCLIFF BRIDGE OF HOPE.

WE trust that the sympathy of the readers of The Christian is already enlisted in behalf of the Ratcliff "Bridge of Hope." From time to time, since the commencement of the work, we have given to them a little account of its progress, that they might follow it as it grew from year to year.

It began in the little room where Miss Macpherson and her fellow helpers first gathered in a few of the outcast women in the neighbourhood, to tell of the love of Jesus even for them. Now there are always forty inmates in the Refuge and Training Home, while the usual number passing through the Refuge weekly averages from eight to nine. When the house in Princes-square was offered to us, we felt that in taking it we were placing ourselves as it were in the midst of the enemy's ground. Immediately behind us, our back windows facing theirs, was a street, which many of our readers would find it impossible to imagine. In that street were thirty-five houses of the very vilest character; every house well known to us, as there was not a room in which one or other of us had not held out a helping hand to the poor lost girls living in them.

Many of our friends told us it was Utopian to imagine we could gather in the girls in the midst of such surroundings, but we resolved, God helping us, to set up a witness for Christ in the very stronghold of Satan. Very soon after we had settled in the Refuge the difficulties greatly diminished, for one day (how it came to pass we could never quite understand, but we believed it to be an answer to prayer) we found the houses empty; the attention of the owners having been directed to the condition of the property, they had found a good reason for ejecting all their tenants. Those houses have remained empty and desolate ever since. We saw at once what a desirable addition it would be to our premises to take those immediately in our rear. But for awhile legal difficulties came in the way, and it has only been within the last two or three weeks that we have been able to enter into any negotiation about the property. A considerable outlay will be necessary in order to make the premises convenient, but my Council will see that the matter is wisely arranged, and that we get a fair return for the money spent.

For some three years we have worked on, struggling with every kind of inconvenience, arising from want of space. Putting aside the utter discomfort to the workers, and looking at it simply from a sanitary point of view, it is absolutely necessary before the summer comes to make some change. We therefore feel constrained to lay before our friends the urgent need which has arisen, and to ask them again to express the sympathy they have so often shown by helping us to raise the sum of £1000.

Of course, from some comes the suggestion to curtail the work, and so solve the difficulty; but God forbid that our lack of faith or any inertia on our part should hinder work we believe to be the Lord's. Our past experience has given us confidence for the future; when we entered the empty house in Princes-square our rent alone was guaranteed, not a single subscription promised, and only £3 10s. in hand. But our Father knew the need, and sent the wherewithal. Two days after we came in, £20 was sent for the "Bridge of Hope" from New Zealand. I cannot say that since that time there has been no anxiety with regard to funds, but I can say there has been always daily food for the ever-increasing household, and we have been able to obey the command, "Owe no man anything."

Nor have we been left single-handed; earnest and devoted fellow-helpers have come forward from time to time, taking part in the different branches of the Mission. We have strengthened each other by prayer as we have worked shoulder to shoulder, and through the tender mercy and loving kindness of God health and strength have been sustained, and notwithstanding the unavoidable depression attending such work, the bow has been ever seen in the cloud.

During the past winter there has been more general interest shown in the work. What has been written and said about the condition of "Outcast London" has drawn the attention of many to this neighbourhood, and led us to visit much more among the very poor, which has naturally drawn larger numbers to our classes, and increased the claims upon us. We have worked under great disadvantages, having had to hire a room which could not always be obtained at convenient times. One of the houses for which we are negotiating was formerly a public-house, of such ill fame that even in this neighbourhood it was closed on account of its notoriety. Attached to it is a large, lofty room, capable of seating from 150 to 200 people, formerly the dancing saloon.

Will it not be a glorious metamorphosis to re-open this room, where amid ribald songs and obscene language the devil long held his own, and consecrate it to the service of God, and gather there the outcast girls to tell them of the Saviour who died to save them, and invite the poor tired mothers and give them helpful words to cheer their toilsome lives, and welcome the children who are only too willing to come to our classes. We have this great advantage, they know us as neighbours; we are always within call; they come to us from the first thing in the morning to the last thing at night.

While we wait upon God, and our expectation is from Him, we commend this simple statement of our needs to the prayerful consideration of the Lord's people.

Personal Notes.

Rev. H. W. Beecher is reported to be on the eve of paying a visit to Europe.

Mrs. Lucas has concluded two series of lectures on Temperance in Aberdeen and Edinburgh.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse preached with great acceptance on Wednesday, 5th inst., in King-street Chapel, Derby.

Mrs. Joseph Cook, wife of the celebrated Boston Monday lecturer, has herself entered the lecture-field. One of her subjects is "The Temples and Tombs of Hindooism."

Mr. Francis Murphy's recent Gospel Temperance campaign in Grace Church, Boston, U.S., was most successful. About 2500 signed the pledge, and many of these are seeking salvation.

Mr. R. T. Booth met a very cordial reception from the friends of Temperance at Melbourne, Victoria, on his arrival there in January last. He was to labour for four weeks in Tasmania.

Rev. J. S. Inskip, of Philadelphia, well known for his advocacy of Holiness movements, has been stricken with paralysis. According to latest reports received, he was not expected to recover.

Mr. H. R. Williams, an indefatigable worker for the last forty years in the cause of Ragged Schools, was presented with his portrait last week. Lord Shaftesbury made the presentation in the name of the subscribers.

Mrs. Booth, in a recent discourse, said the public opinion of England would demand that time shall be found for the drink question. We may do what we like for the poor, but while there are drink shops at every corner and sometimes at every dozen doors, no wonder that we have such constant records in the papers of deplorable murders and thefts and robberies. The Government tell us they cannot find time to legislate on the drink question. The people of England will rise up and say that they shall find time.

THE IRISH BIBLE AND COLPORTAGE SOCIETY has made a new start in Dublin. It proposes to attack the South and West more especially. The peasantry of Ireland are becoming readers. It is proposed to supplant the low literature which is at present so abundantly supplied to them by other of a more solid and interesting type. By means of the Society a colporteur can be supported for £40.

Obituary.

REV. Q. W. THOMSON.

Intelligence has reached the Baptist Missionary Society from West Africa of the somewhat sudden death of Rev. Quintin W. Thomson, missionary at Victoria, Camaroons, at the age of about fifty years. Mr. Thomson laboured nearly twenty years for the Baptist Missionary Society, and was well known throughout the churches in England.

BARONESS LIONEL DE ROTHSCHILD.

The death of this lady, "whose charity and kindness of heart have long been household words in the Jewish community," was announced last week.

MR. JAMES WHITE, OF OVERTOUN.

This well-known and much esteemed Scottish Christian philanthropist died on Saturday week, after a brief illness. An Edinburgh contemporary says: "All Scotland will recognise that a patriotic benefactor has been withdrawn from its midst. Mr. White's name was a household word in the land, as that of a merchant prince who honourably gained wealth and wisely used it. Though Glasgow was the sphere of his public work, the whole country was not unfrequently its witness and the conscious sharer of its influence. He loved to do good, but took pains to prevent it from finding fame. In his later years he associated himself along with Mr. James Stevenson in the establishment and conduct of the Livingstonia Mission."

A Work of Grace in Dunkeld.

A REMARKABLE work of grace has been going on in the Dunkeld district. Two years ago Major, now Lieut.-Col. Oldham, of the Indian service, conducted a series of meetings which were greatly blessed. The converts were chiefly young men and women attending the Free Church of Dunkeld. Subsequent to this several class and prayer-meetings were got up in addition to those connected with the several churches. Early last year Col. Oldham came with his family to reside in one of the villas at Birnam. Besides other meetings, he held one all through the summer in the open air at the close of the church services every Sabbath night. These were largely attended, but nothing special occurred.

In the beginning of February Mr. A. M. Scott, better known as the "Jailer Evangelist," was, on the recommendation of several eminent ministers of the Free Church, invited to visit Dunkeld, and assist at the services that were going on. A week of special prayer was observed in this connection. On Sabbath, February 3, he conducted the first of a series of meetings in the City Hall. His address made a powerful impression on the crowd that filled the building, and from the first it was obvious that a work of grace had begun. Night after night the hall was filled, and at the after-meetings numbers made profession that they had passed from death to life, or owned their desire to get peace through Christ. Other meetings were held during the day in class-rooms and elsewhere. The night meetings were frequently transferred to the hall of the Birnam Institute on the other side of the Tay, and still the work deepened and extended. As the result it may be stated that hundreds among the young and old profess to have been converted or greatly refreshed and revived. A thanksgiving service was held in the Free Church on Thursday, February 22, when the place was crowded. Rev. D. Macpherson delivered an address to the several classes of those who had come under spiritual influence. It was listened to throughout with the deepest interest.

Mr. Scott has returned to Edinburgh to fulfil an engagement there, and in the meantime the meetings are being carried on by an increased band of helpers. It is earnestly hoped that, in answer to the prayer of faith, the work will continue and increase.

Mr. Haslam at Newark.

A MOST interesting series of services has just been concluded in Christ Church, Newark. From March 1 to 11 Mr. W. Haslam and Mrs. Haslam have laboured amongst us, and we desire to record our hearty thanksgiving to God for the blessing vouchsafed through the preaching of the Word. After the first two days the church was overcrowded with eager and attentive congregations. The after-meetings were largely attended, and every night many remained for further inquiry and conversation, most of whom are now rejoicing in Christ. There are also many signs of real awakening amongst believers, many of whom testify to having received greatly increased light and blessing, and deep thankfulness is expressed for the privileges God has given.

Mrs. Haslam's addresses to the women in the drill hall, which was filled to overflowing, made a deep impression. In response to a special request she addressed a meeting for men only, when the Gospel message was earnestly given to a most attentive assembly.

The thank-offering on the last day of the Mission amounted to £20, and has been given to the Church Parochial Mission, with which Mr. Haslam is connected. Prayer is earnestly requested that God's blessing may rest on the work thus begun. H. A. Jukes, Vicar.

Letters to the Editor.

THE FUTURE OF PALESTINE.

Dear Sir,—There appears to be a great deal of spiritually unhealthy sentiment abroad on this subject. Your correspondent "V" asks two questions. (1) "Is there any assistance which churches can give in reinstating the land of Palestine?" The answer is, "Yes." If Christians will subscribe money enough (I say money, for money answers all things), it might be made like the garden of the Lord.

(2) "Have they any duty to render such help?" The answer is, "No." Every Jew who returns to Palestine as the Land of Promise distinctly rejects Christ, for a believer has nothing to do with Palestine as such. It is distinctly within the revealed purpose of God that the Jews shall be restored to their own land, which has yet a glorious future before it. Into the process by which this will be accomplished I cannot now enter. It is sufficient to say, "I, the Lord, will hasten it in its time."

Let it be remembered that in the same purpose of God Christ was slain from the foundation of the world. But would any believer say that he could have had any "duty" to have helped forward such a catastrophe?

Jews rejecting Christ now perish. Jews accepting Christ now become partakers of better promises.—Faithfully yours, Eboracum.

CHRIST CHURCH, BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Dear Sir,—As I was so long and so closely connected with Christ Church, Burton-on-Trent, many of my friends have wondered that I should have preserved silence during this prolonged dispute between the vicar of that church and his curates. Hitherto, as a total abstainer, and one who mourns as much as any man the blighting effects of drink, I have feared to say a single word by which I might seem to defend the drink traffic. But I feel that silence on my part is becoming sinful, and though I shrink from rushing into print, I must ask your permission to place before the people of God, in defence of the truth, a few facts connected with Christ Church and its vicar.

For eight years I was privileged to work with Mr. Guest, during the whole of which time I scarcely think there were eight nights on which there were no Gospel gatherings. From year's end to year's end, in church, school-room, Mission-room, or street, some effort was being made in the Christ Church parish to reach the unconverted with the Gospel. There was a noble band of evangelists, twenty or thirty in number (many of them total abstainers), who were preaching the Word of God or circulating Gospel tracts every evening of the week. These had their own horse and cart; they subscribed quarterly for tracts to be distributed on the Sabbath among people in the parishes round who were not attending a place of worship. After they had distributed their tracts, they would stand back to back by the roadside and preach the pure Word of God. I say without hesitation that hundreds have been saved through their instrumentality.

Then, in our large Sabbath-schools, all the teachers were believers, as well as the many district visitors who, under the superintendence of Mrs. Guest, were in the habit of taking Gospel tracts wherever the people would receive them, and dealing personally with all those who cared to accept their ministrations. We were once permitted to carry on a School-room Mission for 145 successive nights, the speakers being almost exclusively working men; and from the beginning of June to the end of November have we held evangelistic services in our tent, continuing them in the school-room when driven by the cold from the tent. Hundreds of souls have been saved at these services.

Without regard to sect or party, all true servants of God have received a welcome at Christ Church and its vicarage. Now, we had with us the veteran missioner, Mr. Haslam; now, Mr. Sholto Douglas; now, Mr. Charles Graham, Mr. John Wilkinson, Mr. S. Field, Mr. Grattan Guinness, and now friends from the Evangelisation Society. I had forgotten to say that we had a girls' Sabbath school, in which nearly every girl could stand up and give a clear account of her conversion.

And yet there are people of God who, in ignorance, are aiding men, ambitious of notoriety, to break up a church like this, and to worry its pastorate into resigning his charge. I believe that Mr. Smith had placed himself in antagonism with Mr. Guest before ever the drink question, as a cause of strife, had been dreamt of, by fiercely attacking, in his vicar's absence, the British and Foreign Bible Society. It would be well to inquire, before condemning Mr. Guest for persecuting him, how this gentleman has worked with other vicars, at Wakefield and elsewhere. Both he and his fellow-curate must have known what was the trade of Burton before taking their curacies, and, after their assumption of office, they must have seen that nearly all the members of their congregations, if not brewers, were employed in breweries. What was poor Mr. Guest to do? The end of their writing and preaching on the Temperance question was just calculated to drive people either from the church or the town—from the church if not becoming abstainers, from the town if receiving their doctrine; and as it was not likely that many were about to give up their situations and leave the town, was Mr. Guest to sit still and see them empty his church? Let any minister of any denomination whatever, who reads this letter, imagine himself to have been in what has been Mr. Guest's position, and ask himself what he would have done in like circumstances.

Yours in the Lord Jesus,

Pavenham Vicarage, Bedford, March 10. John E. Linnell.

P.S.—The Christ Church evangelists would be glad to receive pure Gospel tracts for distribution, from any readers of The Christian. Address: M. Jewsbury, Sheffield-street, Burton-on-Trent.

IS SIN UPROOTED?

Dear Sir,—While acknowledging with many thanks the great kindness of manner in which, in your issue of to-day, you have dealt with a letter of mine, though differing so much from its contents, I must yet earnestly beg of you to make room for one further extract from it to prevent misunderstanding of those already given:—

"In speaking above of praying to be preserved from all sin outward and inward, and believing that we receive what we pray for, it is not intended that we thereby acquire a stock of goodness or power in ourselves (Acts iii. 12), by which to live free from sin. Such a thought is excluded by the concluding words of the two prayers above quoted, 'through Jesus Christ our Lord,' 'through Christ our Lord;' these do not mean merely 'for his sake,' but actually through Him, and by union with Him, as the branch receives the sap by which it lives and bears fruit, through and by union with the vine. If thus really united to Him 'as He is, so are we in this world;' He 'dwells in our hearts by faith,' and our lives are the fulfilment of that word, 'The pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand.'

"'Surely shall one say, In the Lord have I righteousness and strength: even to Him shall men come; and all that are incensed against Him shall be ashamed. In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified and shall glory.' 'Of Him are ye in Christ Jesus who of God is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption: that, according as it is written, He that glorieth let him glory in the Lord.

"To trust in any goodness or power of our own—even though asked of God ever so sincerely in the first instance 'for our Lord Jesus Christ's sake,' and believed to be so received—apart from this abiding vital union with Him, must lead sooner or later to disastrous failure; as indeed we know it already has done in many sad cases."—Ever yours in the Lord Jesus, J. P. Wilson.

2, Lake-terrace, Wandsworth-common, S.W. March 13, 1884.

[We insert the above at our friend's request, but we really do not see that it greatly affects the case. The last sentence, alluding to "disastrous failure in many sad cases," sufficiently shows the danger. —Ed.]

Notices of Books, &c.

"You're Me and I'm You." By S. G. Prout. 1s. Nisbet & Co. Simple talks with the little ones, written in that free and conversational style which always interests children.

God's Witnesses. S. W. Partridge & Co. 6d. per dozen. An address to Christians, admirably calculated to stimulate and encourage the full consecration so much to be desired on the part of all Christ's followers. We have pleasure in commending it for wide circulation.

New Biographical Sketches. Religious Tract Society. 1d. each. The lives and portraits of such men of note as Luther, Calvin, Melancthon. Concise in form, and well adapted to be within the reach of all who wish to become acquainted with the great facts and leaders of early religious reform.

A Help to Family Worship. By Rev. F. Bourdillon. 2s. Religious Tract Society. A useful book for those who find a difficulty in conducting household devotions. It contains short forms for morning and evening prayer, extending over four weeks. The manual is intended rather to suggest thought than to be slavishly adhered to.

Lectures to Children. By John Todd. 2s. 6d. Religious Tract Society. This new and complete edition of a well-known work will be welcomed by many who feel the importance of laying a good foundation for Gospel truth in children's hearts. It is well illustrated both by picture and anecdote, and in simple language expounds many important doctrines of the Bible.

Helon of Alexandria, with Preface by Dr. Adolph Saphir. 1s. 6d. Religious Tract Society. This is a story of Jewish times, more than a century before Christ. Biblical instruction is combined with an interesting narrative, which gives a good idea of the religious life in Israel, while the illustrations bring the scenes vividly before the reader.

Starlight Stories: Short Tales for the Younger Ones. By F. M. Holmes. F. E. Longley. This little book contains a series of short, well-written tales, well adapted for Sunday-school libraries. It will both interest our young people and improve their minds. The lesson of "Love your enemies" is excellently brought out in many of the stories, and all show that the bravest thing is to do the right, whatever it may cost.

Rays of Sacred Song. By Dawson Burns, D.D. S. W. Partridge & Co. This chaste volume is appropriately dedicated to the late Mrs. C. L. Balfour. The point that strikes one most forcibly in regard to the poems is their exceeding fulness of matter. Dr. Burns has something to write about and writes with all his heart; the result is soul—inspiring thoughts expressed in tuneful numbers—the theme the everlasting Gospel. His studies from Scripture are very suggestive and the hymns which he generously offers to the use of compilers are well worthy of consideration; being mostly written for special occasions, they may fill a niche in many collections.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for the ensuing week:—Mar. 23, John xii. 1—19; Mar. 24, John xii. 20—36; Mar. 25, John xii. 37—50; Mar. 26, John xiii. 1—11; Mar. 27, John xiii. 12—30; Mar. 28, John xiii. 31—38; Mar. 29, John xiv. 1—15.

DEGRADING LAWS.—The strong religious feeling against the State regulation of vice received another illustration at a public meeting, held on Wednesday of last week in the West London Tabernacle, under the presidency of the Rev. W. T. Moore. The speeches of Mr. Henry Varley, Mr. Alfred S. Dyer, and others, met with a deeply sympathetic response from the audience, and a resolution, calling upon the Government to bring in a Bill this session to repeal the degrading laws in question was adopted without a dissentient.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—For blessing on meetings at Rhyl, North Wales, held by Mr. F. E. Marsh.

PRAYER.—For a Mission to be held at Broadwater by Major Frank Graves.——For a fortnight's Mission by Henry March (Evangelisation Society) among the miners and potters of Adderley, Staffordshire.——For an outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the services of Messrs. Fullerton and Smith, at Edinburgh.——For blessing on meetings at Pennaenmawr, Colwyn Bay, and Corwen, North Wales, by Mr. F. E. Marsh.——Lord Radstock asks for prayer for blessing on a special effort to reach the upper classes in Rome. The "Sala Dante," a hall holding 700, has been taken for six meetings in French.——A Christian minister desires prayer for the conversion of a young man just leaving home and friends for Canada, and also for a safe passage.——That a young clergyman may be led to see the need of conversion, and then guided to accept Christ.——For blessing on services at Runcorn by Mr. George Hefford.——For much blessing on the Mission at Mitcham.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Mr. Denham Smith has just concluded some five months' labours in London. His engagements are: Harristown, co. Kildare, March 23; Limerick, March 30; Dublin, the whole of April.

Mr. Charles Inglis has been holding special meetings during the past few weeks in Glasgow, Dublin, and Manchester. Many have come out to hear the Word of life; not a few backsliders and unsaved ones have been blessed through the Word preached.

Children in Glasgow.—A series of meetings for children has been held in Cunningham Free Church, with good results; one of the teachers saw the conversion of most of his class before the meetings closed.

Edinburgh.—The Gospel services held by Messrs. Fullerton and Smith in the Free Assembly Hall during the past week, have been very largely attended. The Word, both spoken and sung, has been with much power and demonstration of the Spirit.

Banbury.—Thomas Houston, the blind evangelist, has been holding a ten days' Mission in the Temperance Hall at this place. The meetings were well attended. Several have thankfully acknowledged that they have been brought to Christ through these services.

Combs, near Stowmarket.—A series of successful services has been conducted here by Mr. John Harris, as well as occasional services at Stowmarket, Stownpland, and Battisford. All the meetings were well attended, and the Gospel addresses were listened to with great interest.

Our Soldiers.—Some good work has been done amongst soldiers in Glasgow during the past few months by means of Bible-classes, tracts, and personal visiting. Many who have been thus reached are now carrying the good news with them to Gibraltar and other garrison ports on the Mediterranean.

Battersea Park Tabernacle.—The wonderful blessing resting upon our labours here has caused our hearts greatly to rejoice. Since the visit of our dear brethren, Messrs. Moody and Sankey, we have had over thirty in one night, and within a very short space of time over a hundred have professed to find peace in Christ. The chapel is crowded with hearers, and so great is the change in one part of Battersea, that in nearly every house there is a blessing.

Our pastor's (Mr. Lardner's) hands are very full: the work of building a large tabernacle, seating over 1200 people, and seeking help towards £1000, soon to be met, taxes him to the utmost. I should like to see him set free from this, in order that he might give the whole of his strength to guide and continue this great blessing falling upon us.

35, Hindon-st., Pimlico, S. W. Henry Ruff.

Mildmay.—There has just closed a ten days' Mission in Iron Room, King Henry-street, Mildmay-road, conducted by Mr. W. Spencer Walton, which has been accompanied with marked results. Not only have many, it is hoped, during the last few days "received Christ Jesus the Lord," but others have learnt fresh lessons of what it is to "walk in Him." The hall has been well-nigh full each evening, and considerable numbers have given in their names as having received definite blessing.

Miss Booth's Anniversary.

THREE meetings were held at Exeter Hall on Monday last, at which Miss Booth gave accounts of the progress of the Salvation Army on the Continent during the last twelve months. It has now extended to Paris, Valence, Nimes, Geneva, Neuchatel, and many smaller towns and villages in France and Switzerland.

M. Convert, a wealthy supporter of the Army, from Neuchatel, testified of the good done in that city in spite of the opposition of the authorities.

Miss Booth stated that "a small Eagle" had been purchased in Nimes, which had formerly been used for amusements of a most degrading character, and some very striking cases of conversion have resulted.

Forthcoming Meetings.

CITY WAIFS.

DEAR FRIENDS,

Let me very sincerely thank all those who have shown such kind Christian sympathy with me, and have helped to sustain the Homes, &c., at Southwark, Greenwich, and Ramsgate in my absence. Through mercy I am much better for the rest already, but do not feel fit yet for active service.

There are still liabilities to be met, amounting to about £300. I cannot tell you what a relief it would be to my mind (especially under present circumstances) to clear off every claim, and be quite free of debt.

"An Old Subscriber" sends £5, and promises another £5 if every claim can be met.

"A Friend" offers £10 if 9 others will give a similar sum by 13th April.

One little incident has greatly cheered me. A gentleman (who some time ago gave up smoking on conscientious grounds and sent us £37 odd, the proceeds of sale of cigars, &c.), recently asked prayer for City Waifs and Strays, mentioning our boys in particular. A dear old Christian man (a road-scraper) wrote on a sheet of paper now before me, as follows:

"Mr. —— asked God's believing children to pray for the distressed children of London, that God would raise up "friends to help them. It is no use to say, 'Be ye warm and filled' if you do not give to them. Their souls have "been redeemed by the same precious blood as ours. All souls are God's. He hears the young ravens cry, and He "hears those children need bread, and none to give to them. I thought we would get them a trifle to help them.—T. E."

Then follow twenty-two amounts, headed by those given by himself and his wife, making up a collection of £2 0s. 6d.

This hearty effort has been a real comfort and joy to my soul. Will you, dear friends, in the same earnest spirit, remember the daily needs of our 230 "Nobody's Children"?

Yours faithfully,

J. W. C. Fegan

Please address letters to me as usual, to
"The Boys' Home," 95, Southwark Street, S.E.

HON. TREASURER—C. BOARDMAN, Magnolia House, The Green, Stratford, E.

AT a Meeting of Clergy and Ministers held at the close of one of the afternoon meetings at West Ham Hall, Mr. Moody proposed that a building be erected for active Evangelistic Work.

The recent Mission of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, at which nearly 4,000 souls were dealt with in the Inquiry Room, shows that a large proportion of this class are not only willing to be spoken to, but are deeply anxious to know what they must do to be saved. Since the close of the Mission it has become still more apparent that an under-current of anxiety about spiritual things is spreading more or less throughout the whole neighbourhood.

It is intended to provide a Home for the recently formed Stratford Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, which already numbers 250 Members, though the largest room of their present quarters will only seat about 60. It is proposed, therefore, that the Building should be constructed with different Stories, one for the Young Men's Christian Association and one for the Preaching of the Gospel.

A very large number of Working Men spend all their spare time at the corners of the streets, or round the public-house doors, and never enter any place of worship. Experience has shown that this class is amenable to affectionate personal persuasion, and one feature of this work will be the organisation of a band of discreet God-fearing Working Men, who shall go out some time before the Services and endeavour to bring in these people to hear the Gospel. It is believed that this work will re-act for good on the souls of those so employed, and tend to impress upon them their own responsibility before God for the souls of their fellows.

It is proposed to provide accommodation suitable for other Christian Agencies, such as the Mizpah Band, Great Eastern Railway Servants' Christian Union, Christian Policemen's Association, Open-air Mission, United Prayer Meetings, the Local Auxiliaries of the great Missionary and other kindred Societies.

We have received letters of sympathy from nearly all the Ministers of different denominations in the district, two of which we here append:

"St. John's Lodge, Forest Gate, Feb. 29, 1884.

"Dear Sir,—I have pleasure in saying that the Hall proposed to be built in Stratford, in connection with the 'Young Men's Christian Association' has my full sympathy, and I shall be very glad to assist in Gospel services therein when invited by the Committee to do so.

"I trust it may be made a great blessing to many souls.

"Yours very sincerely, Raymond P. Pelly (St. John's, Stratford).

"I shall be very glad to give £3 3s. to the Fund."

"Stratford, March 4, 1884.

"Dear Sir,—I give my hearty commendation to the scheme for providing suitable accommodation for the Young Men's Christian Association, and also for providing a Conference Hall in which undenominational services may be held. Evangelistic Services conducted by the Ministers of the district as far as possible in such a Hall will, I am sure, prove a great blessing to this vast population. I shall have great pleasure in cordially co-operating in so good a work.

"I am, yours very sincerely, James Knaggs
"(Minister of the Congregational Church, The Grove, Stratford)."

Upwards of £1600 has been already promised (principally by residents in Stratford), and as the district of which Stratford is the principal centre, contains over 140,000 inhabitants, nearly all of whom are of the working and poorest classes, it is clear that the necessary funds must be sought for elsewhere.

To erect a building at all in keeping with the need, at least £5000 will be required, apart from the cost of site, and the Committee have decided that the strictest economy, consistent with solidity and due efficiency, shall be studied in carrying out the design. They, at the same time, are determined that the building shall only be proceeded with as the funds are forthcoming, in order that it may be opened free of debt. Mr. Moody has expressed his desire to open the building before his return to America.

In the name of the Divine Master we appeal to God's Stewards for prompt aid to carry on the work which He has laid upon our hearts.

C. BOARDMAN, } Hon. Secs.

"In the Volume of the Book;"

Or, The Profit and Pleasure of Bible Study.

BY GEORGE F. PENTECOST, M.A.

With Introductions by Rev. JOSEPH COOK and Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D.

SEVENTH EDITION.

"The Author is well known in this country as well as in America as an able and successful evangelist and preacher. The book is a well-arranged product of a fresh and vigorous mind, steeped in biblical thought and spirit, and fitted in no ordinary measure to give clear views of the scope and purpose of the Bible, to confirm faith in its Divine origin and authority, and to guide to such a use of it as may build up the reader, both in holiness and comfort, and in zeal and usefulness unto Eternal Life. While admirably fitted for young converts, no Christian can read it without both stimulus and profit."—The Outlook, Feb. 1, 1884.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

"INCURABLE" BRONCHO-PHTHISIS

CASE of MR. DAVID CHERRETT, THE SHRUBBERY, NEWTOWN, POOLE, DORSET.

This patient went into the hospital in January, 1883, and was discharged in three months as beyond recovery. Seeing a notice in the Baptist Messenger he procured my book, and at once commenced my treatment. In six weeks he was much better, after which he progressed to recovery, and wrote me a few weeks back as follows: "I am thankful to say I am quite well, with God's blessing on your medicine. Make what use of my case you please."

CASE of Mr. LAWRENCE BUCKLEY, GATESHEAD.

Was referred to me October 13. Cough violent night and day. Expectoration very difficult and mixed with blood; breathing affected, hectic fever and flushing, reduced in flesh, the wasting having gone slowly on for four years since first unwell.

This patient so rapidly recovered that he writes me December 1: "Your medicine has done me wonderful good. I am a new man in every way. I will do all I can to get fresh cases for you. Publish my case in any of the papers.—L. B., 2, Ord-street, Gateshead, Durham."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

Your attendance and that of any friend is requested.

IRISH SOCIETY, FOR Promoting the Scriptural Education and Religious Instruction of the Irish-speaking population, chiefly through the medium of their own language. Established 1818.

The Society's financial year will close on March 25.

FUNDS ARE URGENTLY NEEDED.

For sixty-five years the Society has been doing a noble work which has borne fruit in many lands. It places the Irish Bible in the hands of the Irish people, and is thus a Bible Society. Throughout all the counties in which Irish is spoken, it has a unique system of teaching the people to read the Scriptures in Irish, and is thus a Scriptural Education Society. Its work is carried on quietly and unobtrusively on the principle of faith in the power and efficacy of God's Word—"The entrance of Thy words giveth Light."

The Old Achill Mission is now included in the Society's work. Let every reader of this Appeal send a contribution, however small, to Miss Bleasdale, Hon. Sec., Mount-villas, York.

OFFICE—48, PATERNOSTER ROW.

The Title of this book has been altered from "The Gospel Choir" to "THE CHRISTIAN CHOIR." After the former had been adopted, it was found to be already in use as the title of another publication.

THE CHRISTIAN CHOIR.

A QUARTO VOLUME OF MUSIC AND WORDS,
BY
IRA D. SANKEY,
AND
JAMES McGRANAHAN.

Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

This Volume is issued in response to numerous requests for many of the pieces it contains. It is largely composed of New SACRED SONGS, DUETS, CHORUSES, and ANTHEMS, which have met with much acceptance at the hands of the public. The Authors hope that in this collected form the volume will prove useful in Christian work.

NATURE'S BENEFICENT FORCES.

It has often been the subject of remark by the scientist, as well as by the theologian, that the most powerful forces in nature, and some of them the most beneficent, such as light, heat, air, are the least observable in operation. Amongst such imperceptible arrangements perhaps none is more potent, permeating, silent, or beneficent in its operation than Magnetism, because it possesses properties admirably adapted to the restoration of the true balance of the physical economy, and is at the same time, of all the physical or psychical forces, the least appreciable by the senses.

In health the sensibilities are all quiescent, except the pleasurable consciousness of life; even this consciousness is in abeyance during sleep. The unconscious sleeper is in an equilibrium, and does not suffer pain; but upon being awakened the Magnetic conditions are re-established, and if they are disturbed he is conscious of it. Whether the change from a state of equilibrium be productive of pleasure or pain depends upon the healthy functional action of the organ excited. In a healthy state there is a sensible warmth at the stomach after eating. This is a positive pleasurable condition, but in how many instances pain and distress arise after eating, or exercising other bodily organs in the ordinary way. Pain reveals some abnormal or unnatural condition of an organ. We rarely meet with patients who can account for their sufferings. Yet our task is not difficult, as we have recourse to the only solution of the phenomena. To us pain and disease are simple terms, and easily understood to proceed from a Magnetic derangement of the human system. Every particle of the body is Magnetic, and Magnetic harmony at all points is in the highest sense a condition of rest and equilibrium—health. When polarities are thus equalised or normal, we are not conscious of any unpleasant sensation; but when any such impression is felt in any organ, the sensation is conveyed by an unbalanced polarity to the brain, with undue impression from the affected part, the sensation becomes disagreeable, and, when extreme, produces the phenomenon of pain.

Some time since we received the following statement from

Mrs. ROBINSON, Folly House, Washington Station, Durham.

"I have found a great deal of benefit from your appliances, and I am thankful to say I am quite restored to health. The Nervousness has left me, and I sleep well. After suffering so much and so long I cannot be too thankful for such a restoration. My doctor, who has fifty years' practice, said mine was a bad case to deal with. Mr. Parker, my son-in-law, who wrote for me, is very thankful for my recovery, and wishes me to say how glad he is he ever heard of you."

On March 4, 1884, the patient confirmed this as follows:—

"I have many times thought of writing you about the appliances I had from you by your advice in '79. Since I adopted your treatment I have never had an ailment, not even a cold, even if in a heated chapel I never feel worse. Oh, what a blessing your treatment has been! I shall never forget its effect for good; nothing I can get could ever supply its place."

The above instance, together with our list of 850 patients who have recovered from various chronic maladies, by Magnetic treatment, and to whom reference is permitted, will show that the best energies of many years devoted to the perfecting of such a remedy have not been spent in vain. The aim has been to place our treatment by Magnetism in its proper place as a Therapeutic agent.

Full particulars of the treatment may be obtained free on application to B. Corson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

Opinions of the Press.

"The distinctive character, and, as we think, the great practical value of this book lie in the collection of what we may call Jewish evidence and illustrations, in the Jewish standpoint from which it is written, and in the Jewish atmosphere with which it is imbued. A Jew by birth, nurtured in the best Jewish learning, and with a large acquaintance with Jewish literature and customs, Dr. Edersheim is a Christian convert and minister, strongly evangelical in his views, and imbued with a devout feeling."—British Quarterly Review.

"We have in these volumes a realistic and copious description of Jewish life in the time of our Lord, as to its social conditions, manners and customs, sects, and religious ideas, such as we have not met with in any other work of its class. . . . . We hail Dr. Edersheim's contribution to the literature of the Life of Christ with devout thankfulness, and give to it our cordial commendation. It is manifestly the work of one who is a master in Israel, and eminently qualified for the task he has performed."—The Christian.

DEFENCES OF THE FAITH.*

FREQUENT notices have appeared in this journal of books written in reply to modern scepticism. We can scarcely wonder that on the part of excellent Christian men, the opinion should be expressed that the controversy has been carried far enough. There are, however, advantages. In the last century the answers sent forth to the works of Deistical writers were very numerous, but while they did much to silence the Deists of the period, they powerfully acted on the mind and heart of Christians. The defence of the Truth was followed by a time of clear and powerful evangelical preaching, and by the formation of those great Religious Societies which, ever since, have had such a mission of blessing in every part of the world.

It may, indeed, be admitted that the works of Christian advocates at this present time will have an inadequate effect on the upholders of modern infidelity. Many of these opponents are intolerant, and maintain a sort of infallible attitude; while others are malignant and are hardening their hearts against Christ. On the other hand, however, when the waves and billows of unbelief beat so fiercely against the ark of God, it is of supreme importance that Christian writers should defend the firm basis of the hope that is in them, and should make manifest to the age that they have no misgiving in relation to the truth and certainty of our holy religion. The waverers must not be allowed to drift to the wrong side; churches must be recovered from their paralyzing doubts; and preachers must be confirmed, for the usefulness of their sermons will be in proportion to the strength of their faith.

Only a seer can tell the things that are at hand. Signs there are that we are on the eve of great events. Venerable systems of lies are breaking up, and gigantic wrongs are coming up for judgment. A time is fast approaching when we shall have need to recall our Lord's words at a similar period, "Take heed that no man deceive you." "Deceivableness" has been always Satan's weapon, and will be more than ever in the days that are coming. We accept the fact with thankfulness, therefore, that the Spirit of Christ is moving upon the minds of men whose scholarship, and strength of conviction, are enriching Christian literature as it has never been enriched before, and who are resisting the adversaries in a way that must protect from misgiving the disciples of Christ.

Among works of the nature we have specified, must be placed the two below, and both of which are published by the same enterprising firm. Dr. Fisher is the Professor of Ecclesiastical History in Yale College, U.S.A. He lately sent forth a series of articles on Christian Evidences in the Princeton Review. These papers drew to them considerable attention, as they appeared in that leading theological Review. The handsome volume under notice contains this series of articles, which have been largely re-written, and a considerable amount of new matter. The book contains nothing out of date. It deals with the scientific, critical, and literary scepticism of these living times. The field of thought it traverses is as wide as the occasion demanded. In nineteen chapters it meets atheistic and free-thinking infidelity along all its lines. It sets forth the grounds for Christian faith firmly, and at the same time with a fine tone of fairness and courtesy.

After reading much of the volume the conviction has come over us, very strongly, that no honest person can follow its course of argument without great personal advantage. It is a book so cautiously liberal, so thorough, so scholarly, and so comprehensive, as to produce an overwhelming impression of the perfectly satisfactory and accumulative proofs with which Christianity is surrounded, and of the strength of the arguments against the Materialism, Positivism, and Agnosticism that have been troubling this age.

The second book, the title of which is given below, is cast into a more perfectly philosophic mould. But it is so as an answer to philosophical theories. It is, in every page, a treatise of marked ability, and it is scarcely too much to say that every sentence is pregnant with profound thought. The book admirably meets and exposes the false reasoning of the author of "Natural Religion," and most usefully sets forth the moral uses of the mystery of evil. The three chapters on the Hebrew, Greek, and Christian solution of the conception of God are exceedingly valuable as leading up to the revelation of the Divine in Christ. Altogether the volume worthily sustains the reputation of the series of the "Theological Library," of which it forms a part.

* The Grounds of Theistic and Christian Belief. By G. F. Fisher, D.D., LL.D. 10s. 6d. Is God Knowable? By the Rev. J. Iverach, M.A. 3s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton.

OUR SOLDIERS.—Twelve months' work at the Curragh Camp has been productive of good results. The first annual report shows that numbers of men have received blessing at the Soldiers' Home, and the letters which they write from distant lands shows that they have not "believed in vain." Help will be gratefully acknowledged by Mrs. Perry Lumville, Curragh Camp, Kildare.

Y.W.C.A.—On Wednesday evening, last week, a third social gathering was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Denny, 11, Bryanston-square, for the young women in the refreshment rooms and restaurants. More than fifty accepted the invitation, and expressed their grateful appreciation of the kindness and attention shown them by Mr. and Mrs. Denny and family. Several lady workers were present, among whom were Mrs. E. W. Moore, Y.W.C.A., Miss Erskine, and Miss Haslam, Women's Union, C.E.T.S. An earnest address was given by Mr. W. T. Paton. Miss Gough, 5, Theberton-street, N., will gladly receive the names of ladies willing to lend their drawing-rooms for the continuance of this good work. Help towards the needful expenses of this excellent movement will also be thankfully received.

THE EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.

WE see with regret that the proposed Conference of the Evangelical Alliance at Stockholm has had to be abandoned, and that through the opposition of representatives of the Lutheran Church in Sweden, led on by the Archbishop of Upsala. Mr. A. J. Arnold, one of the secretaries of the Alliance, in a letter to the Times, calls attention to the fact that thousands of members of that Church were in favour of the Conference being held, three of its bishops having promised to take part. Great disappointment is felt and expressed in Sweden and elsewhere that the scheme has had to be set aside. We are glad, however, to learn that the Council are not without hope that an Alliance meeting will still be held in some other Scandinavian city.

The Times of the 20th inst. devoted a leader to the subject, in which a case is made out for the Swedes that they are an eminently contented race, and only desire to be let alone, preferring things as they are to any problematical gain. This may be so, but having regard to the cold and formal condition of the Lutheran Church, and the need there is of evangelical revival, many will look with mingled sadness and surprise at the spectacle of a Protestant Church declining to receive a body of Christians made up of representatives of all the Evangelical Churches of the world, and refusing to co-operate with an effort to awaken an entirely unsectarian but directly Christian spirit of earnestness in the work of Christ.

VULGAR LUXURY.

IT is well to remember that intemperance in eating is as sinful as to excess in drinking; many seem to be oblivious of the fact. The Lancet has lately had some caustic words on modern luxuriousness in living. The writer says: "It is beyond a joke to be invited to a dinner now-a-days, with its interminable number of dishes. Some physical evils are certain to overtake those who indulge in them—gout, rheumatism, and dyspepsia are some of the train of consequences." When our contemporary proceeds to speak of vulgarity as a proper stigma to be put upon the sumptuousness of many repasts, and to point out the unseemliness of such waste while thousands are visibly starving and underfed, we think nothing but sober truth and common sense characterise its words. Society is heavily weighted with what may be termed the curse of modern gourmandism and luxury.

We would not plead for asceticism; it is not the spirit of Christianity; but there is a self-restraint in reference to the body which Christians should be careful to maintain. The body is redeemed as well as the soul, and with it we are to glorify God as truly as with the spirit. The Apostle was not speaking as a monk or a recluse when he said, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should become a castaway." Without needless austerities such as punish the body and are alien from the teaching of Christ, we may yet cultivate a spirit and practice opposed to the self-indulgence which tends to give the flesh power over the spirit. We only require to carry out the injunction, "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

WHAT IS THE GOSPEL?—4.

By Mr. G. F. TRENCH.

IN 1 Timothy the Gospel of the glory of the blessed God presents Him in his majesty, as the only potentate, eternal, invisible, dwelling in light unapproachable, and yet willing the salvation of all men, here and hereafter.

On the other hand, it presents man sunk to the lowest depths of atrocious crime and abominable corruption, and by the law (when lawfully used) convicted of sin in the presence of the incorruptible God.

But then it also proclaims the man Christ Jesus (blessed be his name!) as the one Mediator between such a God as this, and such men as these; and tells how in exceeding abundant grace He came into the world to save sinners, even the chief, and gave Himself a ransom for all, that those who should believe on Him might obtain mercy and life everlasting. Of this grace to the guiltiest, the Apostle points to his own salvation and employment in Christ's service as an example.

The exhortations relate mainly to Ministry and Rule in the Church, to conflict for the faith against error, to contentment, modesty, charity, and perseverance until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ.

In 2 Timothy the Gospel is a message, a proclamation to the effect that according to God's purpose of electing grace in Christ Jesus He has appeared and abolished death, and in his resurrection brought to light life and immortality, as the portion of all who have the wisdom of faith.

It brings us the promise of eternal life and glory in Christ Jesus, and of the kingdom and the crown, at his appearing as the Righteous Judge of quick and dead.

It is also a holy calling, requiring departure from every wicked work and doctrine, and as the evils of the last days abound, demanding endurance under opposition and persecution.

The evangelist is to use sound words and to labour manfully for the truth, maintaining the authority of the Scriptures against every assault, open or disguised.

Paul writes as one nearing the end of his course of service and conflict, in full view of the glory and reward awaiting him.

In Titus the Gospel reveals God as our Saviour, full of kindness, grace, and love, bringing salvation within the reach of all men through our Saviour Jesus Christ, who gave Himself for us, foolish, sinful, hateful, and hating as we were, that being justified by his grace, not by works, we might be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

The special aspect of this grace of God here, is its intention and power for sanctification, the purpose of Christ being to acquire in us a special possession for Himself, a people thus zealous to adorn the Gospel by good works, unworldliness, sobriety, purity, truth, while we ever look for the blessed hope and the appearing of the glory of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ.

The rebellious slave, injurious and a debtor to his master, is graciously received by his master's partner and friend, who (himself a prisoner in bonds for the Gospel's sake) loves him, becomes responsible for his crimes and debts, adopts him as his son, makes him one with himself, and now as mediator, beseeching for him a welcome of pardon and grace, restores him to his master; no longer a slave but a brother beloved, to serve him in love henceforth and for ever.

The Cow Cross Mission.

THE eighteenth annual report of this Mission is a record of earnest plodding work in one of the worst districts of London. Mr. Catlin, the superintendent, preaches much in open-air, and continues to receive encouraging "letters from converts." The distribution of temporal relief is discontinued except in cases of sickness, and among the "household of faith." The Gospel services, Sunday-school, Mothers'-meeting, and Band of Hope are stated to be prosperous.

During the past winter months, Sadlers Wells Theatre has been secured for Sunday services, afternoon and evening; this effort has been attended with some very remarkable signs of divine favour. The report tells of the conversion of the "most notorious drunkard in Clerkenwell," also of "the young blackguard of the streets." Some of the employés of the theatre have even been wrought upon, the stage manager gives a contribution to the funds, and one of the freeholders of the property sends a donation of £5. A Bible-class has been started specially for the young converts of the theatre services, at 17, Claremont-square, Pentonville.

Copies of report, price threepence, post free, may be had of Mr. Catlin, at the above address.

Mr. Joseph Cook on Revivals.

IN the interlude to one of his recent Monday Lectures at Boston, Mr. Cook answered the following questions:—

"What are the prospect for revivals East and West?"

My travels bring me into intimate relations with a large number of preachers. Wherever I find a man holding three specific doctrines I expect a revival through his labours. What are these doctrines? The necessity of immediate repentance; the Atonement, as held by the evangelical churches; the supreme religious authority of God's word. Wherever I find a man in whom these doctrines are not a creed but a life I usually find a revival going on in a slow or a swift way. I solemnly believe that it is the divine will that we should teach the necessity of the new birth in this life, the necessity of the Atonement in its biblical form, and the authority of God's word in precisely the terms and tone in which the Bible teaches these truths. Wherever I find a man doubtful on either of these highest matters, I usually find a torpid church, or one that may, perhaps, be drifting into disintegration or into some foppish liberalism adapted to the wants of an easy-going age. Such an organisation may be called a church, indeed, but is really little more than a club house.

"What measures do most to promote revivals?"

Secret prayer in the closets of the congregation; family altars throughout the whole extent of the Christian population; home training in evangelical truth; pastoral visitation carried not merely to death-beds but into the daily secular life of parishes, and watching over the cradle itself; inculcation from the pulpit of the distinctively evangelical truths; organisation of lay religious effort in such a method as to bring church members face to face with the unconverted; after-meetings for conversation between church-members and the religiously irresolute; whatever addresses the will and brings it to a decision to give up itself wholly, affectionately, irreversibly to all the truth the soul perceives; an atmosphere of devoutness in the community at large; the opening of the dome window of human populations, and the streaming through it of that divine light which is beating for ever outside the damp vapours of our unbelief and worldliness, asking admission. Wherever the clouds are thrust aside above a population, and the sunlight of God admitted through an obscured spiritual atmosphere to the heart and will, there must be growth, or, in other words, a revival.

Mr. Aitken at Mitcham.

THE fortnight's Mission at the Parish Church here was brought to a close on Monday, March 17, thanksgiving services being held throughout. At the evening service Mr. Aitken gave some practical counsels to young Christians, urging them to make all they could of the means of grace, to be diligent students of the Bible, and that they should bring in others.

After prayer by the Vicar, Rev. D. Wilson, he gave his farewell address, taking as the basis of his remarks Isaiah xii. 1—3. Such, he said, will be the song when the ransomed ones shall be brought home, and it is now the song when the ransomed soul is brought to Christ. He enlarged on the three discoveries about God—(1) God my salvation, (2) God my strength, (3) God my song. In conclusion, he dwelt on the words, "With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation." Not duty but love should be the motive power in the Christian life. A large number remained to the Lord's Supper at close.

Mrs. Crouch, who is working with Rev. W. Hay Aitken and Rev. J. Stephens, held meetings for women in some of the Mission-rooms, and at the Upper Schoolroom; also two Drawing-room Meetings at "The Cranmers." Much blessing has resulted from this Mission. Some who were wavering have decided for Christ, some have been awakened and led to decision, while Christians have been revived, strengthened, and consecrated more fully to the Master's service.

Workers at the Home of Industry.

THE workers' meeting last week was one of peculiar interest. Good-bye was said to the sixty boys who sail by the Circassian on April 3. Many earnest prayers were offered on their behalf, asking that they might all be gathered into the fold of the Good Shepherd ere they leave our shores.

Mr. R. C. Morgan gave some very helpful thoughts on "The Kingdom of God," taking as the foundation Col. iv. 11: . . . "fellow-workers unto the kingdom of God."

Miss Child, of the "Welcome Home," in a few words told of the encouragement in the work among sailors. Some who have been converts, while still following their calling, have become missionaries by having Gospels in Chinese and other languages distributed in the various ports. A man who went into the "Welcome Home" to have a cup of coffee was spoken to by a worker about his soul, at which he laughed. Eleven months afterwards, on returning from a voyage, he went again and made himself known. He said that when he went out after laughing he thought it was like laughing at the Lord Jesus; for a fortnight he was very wretched, but he sought and found the forgiveness of his sins.

Miss Barton spoke of a mothers' meeting consisting of Jewesses held at the Home of Industry. About sixty Jewish mothers meet together on a Thursday afternoon singing hymns and learning a verse of Scripture. A short portion of Scripture is also read and explained, and some have been led to see that the Jesus of whom they sing is their Messiah.

At the close of the meeting a band of a dozen young ladies from a West End Y.M.C.A. presented Miss Macpherson with the results of their spare hours—some twenty little frocks which they had made for the girls who go in the May band.

TRACTS FOR EAST LONDON.—We are now in sore need of funds and tracts to carry on this work in a poor neighbourhood near the docks of London. We give free meals as far as our funds will allow. 34, Cawdor-street, Poplar, E. Geo. Fuller.

TRACTS WANTED.—The writer will most gladly receive from any Christian friends a supply of evangelistic tracts. They are needed by a Mission band of very poor but very earnest Christians who work out of doors a great deal, and who would like to give a tract and at same time speak a kind word of personal entreaty. Address John Line, Broad-street, Reading.

For the Young.

THE BOYS FOR JESUS.

["One Sunday evening recently, after a good deal of discouragement—I had been pleading with the Lord for a class of lads in whom I am deeply interested—I felt the Lord led me to write the following lines, as a fresh pledge of his faithfulness in fulfilling his promises. They may be a cheer to some other worker."—Letter from the writer.]

THE boys—the boys for Jesus!
I breathe it with a sigh!
But the sigh is upward winging,
And the sigh shall change to singing,
For 'tis heard beyond the sky.

The boys—the boys for Jesus!
I weep it out with tears—
But a rainbow through them glinting
Makes them flash with rainbow tinting!
Heaven's rainbow 'mid my fears.

The boys—the boys for Jesus!
The cry goes forth in prayer,
And where the white robes glisten
The Father stoops to listen,
And I read my answer there.

The boys—the boys for Jesus!
Now Faith shall urge her plea,
For 'tis writ in letters golden
In the Word of God enfolden:
"Believe and thou shalt see."

The boys—the boys for Jesus!
'Tis patience tunes the tone—
"Thou weak one, cease thy grieving,
And haste not, but believing,
Wait God's time, not thine own."

A little ship is tossing
On a dark and stormy sea,
And behold! a radiant angel
Stands to bring the glad evangel—
"Lo, all are given to thee."

So I wait to see the landing
Upon the other shore.
'Mid the choruses of heaven,
And the throng of the forgiven,
I shall see my boys once more!

THE LOST CHILD.

Some weeks ago, a poor little girl about eight years old, a stranger here, strayed from her home, and was not heard of for some days. The case excited great sympathy, and every effort was made to trace her out. Our dear children, Eva and Douglas, were greatly excited and so unhappy about it. Morning and evening they prayed most earnestly for the poor lost one. Late one evening we got the news that the dead body had been found on the shore, under some rocks.

Eva and Douglas were safe in bed and asleep when the sad news came, for which we felt thankful, but their mother seemed apprehensive of the effect upon them when they must come to hear it in the morning. I saw the difficulty, but was too tired and sleepy to suggest anything. However, she solved it, for next morning early, two bright and beaming faces were at my bedside, "Oh, grandma," cried Eva, "the little girl has been found—she is safe in heaven;" and Douglas, bursting with excitement, struck in, "The bright angels came down to the beach and carried her up—up," acting it all with his podgy arms. Then Eva, with a little sigh of envy said, "How happy she must be!"

MISSION TO THE KABYLES.

DEAR SIR,—The Mission to the Kabyles of Algeria was originated, as you are aware, by Mr. H. Grattan Guinness and Mr. and Mrs. George Pearse. It is now managed by a small Council, and has widened its aims so as to embrace not only Kabylia proper, but Oran, Constantine, and Morocco. The Berber races occupying these countries are all closely related, one nation in fact, though in subjection to different conquerors. They are a fine, intelligent, manly race, by no means as fanatical and bigoted as Mohammedans usually are; a race offering a most hopeful sphere for the Gospel of Christ. Our work among them will in future be known as The Mission to the Kabyles and other Berber Races of North Africa.

Mr. and Mrs. George Pearse, who have now for some years lived in Algiers, have a warm affection for the portion of this race occupying Kabylia proper, whose language they have in a measure acquired. Mr. Pearse kindly acted as honorary secretary and director of the Mission at the beginning. He has now resigned the post, preferring to be free for actual evangelisation amongst the Kabyles. At the unanimous request of the Council, I have undertaken to succeed Mr. Pearse in the somewhat arduous and responsible post of honorary secretary to the enlarged Mission. Under these circumstances I want to enlist the sympathy of your readers on behalf of the Berber races of North Africa, who, though descended from nations that were, in the early centuries of our era, Christians, have utterly lost all trace of their original faith, and now for many centuries have been subdued by conquerors who impose Mohammedanism on all subject races. To the number of six or eight millions or more these Berbers are living and dying, within a few days' sail of our shores, without God and without hope in the world. Our Council is neither large nor rich. We cannot do the work by ourselves. We want spiritual and material aid from multitudes of our fellow Christians. If each reader of The Christian would only help a little, how much might be accomplished.

I may mention briefly what we have done and what we are hoping to do. We have in Kabylia proper one station with three missionaries: a married man and his family, and two single ladies. They have been much occupied in learning the language, which is not an easy one, and in getting the station into shape and working order, but they have also had some success in making Christ known among the people. We have a second station at Tlemcen, in the province of Oran, a town of some 23,000 souls, where there is an Arabic college and many students. Our missionary there is a Frenchman, M. Bureau, who has visited most of the towns in the province of Oran distributing the Scriptures, and who is now studying Arabic seven hours a day, besides working among the French people.

We are about to open a third station at Tangier in the empire of Morocco. This empire is nearly twice as large as Great Britain and far larger than France, and totally unevangelised, one missionary to the Jews being the only witness for Christ throughout its entire extent. Half of its inhabitants belong to the Berber tribes, and dwell among the valleys of the Atlas mountains.

Difficulties would exist in the way of sending missionaries into their midst just at first, and our Council are consequently planning to train, as native agents, lads from the different Berber tribes in Tangier. A house admirably suited for the headquarters of the Mission was on sale at the time we came to this decision. Two members of our Council and two missionaries carefully examined it, and being strongly impressed with its remarkable adaptation to the work and with the special providence in its being available at this crisis, have been led to secure them provisionally, hoping that the Christian public will aid them to obtain possession of the buildings and open in them the first Christian Mission in the dark empire of Morocco.

The buildings stand on about two acres of ground, most of which slopes towards the sea, extending to within one hundred yards of the water. It is thoroughly well built in stone, and as good as new, well planned and well fitted. At a little distance from the house is another well-built structure, containing stabling for three or four horses, and four other rooms, with good laundry, bakehouse, &c.

The premises can be easily adapted for Mission purposes, and are not more than ten minutes' walk from the city. A dispensary, medical Mission, and school could be established in the out-buildings, while the house would be for the residence of one or two Mission families, besides affording accommodation for other branches of Mission work.

The Council of the Mission would have been thankful to rent these premises, but, as the owner wishes to sell them, they feel constrained to ask the friends of the Gospel to help in purchasing them. The price fixed is £2250, towards which the owner himself kindly gives a donation of £250. A deposit of £200 has been paid, leaving £1800 to be paid on or before March 25. Gifts and promises of seven or eight hundred pounds more have been received. Help may be rendered either by gift or by loan on the security of the house itself. The Council are quite willing to pay as rent five or even six per cent. interest for a portion of the purchase money, until the Mission would be able to repay the principal.

Dr. Witten, of Brighton, who has been appointed medical missionary to the Mission, is prepared to start for Tangier as soon as the purchase is settled and funds sufficient to furnish the house have come in.

Either the Treasurer of the Mission, Dr. Eccles, of Lyndhurst, Church-road, Upper Norwood; or Mrs. H. Grattan-Guinness, of Harley House, Bow, E., would be glad to receive any donations.—Yours faithfully, Linton-road, Barking. Edw. H. Glenny.

Young Women in Ireland.

THE Irish Branch of the Young Women's Christian Association has made great progress during the past year. God is abundantly blessing the important work it has undertaken. It began its work in 1860, and we are thankful to know that many young women of all ranks have been helped during the past year through its various agencies.

A large gathering recently assembled in the Molesworth Hall, Dublin, where nearly 400 members assembled for a tea-party, given by Colonel Hatt Noble and his young wife, who is president of the Irish Branch. Mrs. Noble, in her address, stated that there are now ninety-six branches in Ireland, with 3655 members, and fresh members joining daily. The head of the total abstinence department reports that that there are 1700 members who are total abstainers. The institute at 5, Molesworth-street, Dublin, forms a centre of work amongst young women of all ranks; classes are held for music, drawing, nursing, cooking, besides meetings for prayer and the study of the Word. Ladies coming to Dublin, for the small sum of 2s. 6d. per year can have refreshments at the rooms, see servants, or have their parcels sent there for them.

A suitable lady superindentent has now been found for the Institute, and funds are much needed for carrying on its work. Help will be thankfully received by Mrs. Jones, Secretary, 43, St. Stephen's-green, Dublin.

SOUTHBOROUGH.—A most enjoyable and delightful evening was spent in the Parochial Hall of this village, on the evening of the 18th inst. Rev. H. J. Bigsby, one of the vicars, presided; the church choir, with ladies and gentlemen of the place, sang, while Rev. William Guest gave sketches of the life of Mr. P. P. Bliss. These were illustrated by the singing of the poet-musician's own songs and music. Rarely could entertainment for the poor and a true religious emotion have gone more hand in hand.

THE REVIVAL IN LONDON.

The St. Pancras Meetings.

[FROM "THE PRESBYTERIAN."]

A BLESSING in a district that needs a blessing. Such is the verdict, all but universal, of those who have been brought into contact with the work of these servants of God in Somers Town. We had followed with interest the progress of our brothers in other parts of the great city; we had united our voices in supplication that we too might receive some measure of impulse, some outpouring of the Spirit, and we have now gratefully to acknowledge that the blessing has come.

Mr. Sankey's singing, whether of the pieces in the earlier book with which we have become familiar, or of the newer hymns in The Christian Choir (which promises to take rank as no unworthy successor to Songs and Solos), is listened to with breathless interest, as of old, and continues to prove soul-stirring in the real sense of the word. At the 8 o'clock meeting of workers on Sunday week, the key-note was aptly struck in the happy choice of his solo, "Tell it out among the heathen," which rang from end to end of the great hall. Mr. Sankey has found an able coadjutor in Mr. George Stebbins, whose name is well known as the composer of many of the hymns in Songs and Solos; and a quartette, in which two of the ladies of the choir were supported by these gentlemen—"My Jesus, I love Thee"—was sung in a way that touched the hearts of all present.

As for Mr. Moody, what shall we say that has not already been said? When his critics have assured us that as a public speaker he is more than equalled by any average platform orator, that his appearance and manner are exactly the opposite of what one looks for in an ideal prophet, and so on in the same strain, they illustrate most admirably the preacher's own saying: "It is so easy to find fault; it requires neither brains nor heart;" but they leave quite untouched the explanation of mighty influence he exerts, in fact the more he personally is decried and run down, the more difficult does it become to account for what is going on before our eyes. There is certainly a singular fascination about this preacher. His tender and gracious presentation of the good news to an audience of women only, when so many stood up to be prayed for that he was unable to count them, was followed on the same evening by a vigorous and outspoken address to men only, which crowded the inquiry-room at the close of the meeting with young and old alike. We have already referred to last Sunday morning's service. It was indeed a striking gathering, completely filling the hall even at that early hour. The speaker seemed to get inspiration from his audience, and to feel impelled to give his very best to this eager throng of Christian workers. "I try to do the best I can," he said, putting the matter in a nutshell, "and if you all do your best, we'll get a good deal of work done." Weighty words of counsel and stirring appeals to greater consecration and devotion to the Master's service were intermingled with sketches and descriptions almost playful in their manner; while the concluding incident was told with a natural and unaffected pathos, Mr. Moody's own voice trembling as he spoke, which, coming from the heart, went straight to the heart. From that one address, with its store of illustrations, apt as Mr. Moody's illustrations generally are, it would have been possible to gather the preacher's leading characteristics; the wide experience, keen observation, unerring memory, ready adaptation, coupled with a plain, unadorned utterance, and simple-minded earnestness, which go far to make him the man he is.

Night after night has the vast hall been crowded to its utmost capacity, and the afternoon meetings are fairly well attended. The district has been carefully mapped out, and certain portions of it allotted to each church and chapel; and a thorough visitation has been made, the distribution of tickets being for the most part confined to those who live in the immediate neighbourhood. An interesting feature has been the invitation of special classes of people. One evening we noticed a large group of cripples from the Cripples' Home, while another evening a portion of the hall was set apart for the blind people from Somers Town Blind Aid Society, who attended in considerable numbers. Railway-men, postmen, and telegraph boys have been brought together in the same way, and several Bible-classes have attended en masse, in some instances coming from a long distance.

The work in the inquiry-room is of a hopeful character, and while we do not know of many cases of a startling or unusual nature, there is much serious concern manifested. Here is an illustration of what is taking place. Four young men from the same country village had been successively brought to a knowledge of the truth during the progress of the Mission, and last Sunday evening they brought with them a companion from the same place, "whose heart the Lord opened." We rejoice to see so many ready and anxious to be of service in dealing with inquirers; but we cannot help pressing upon those engaged in this difficult part of the work the necessity for extreme delicacy and tact. A case is within our own knowledge, in which two young men who were under a measure of conviction were all but driven away by the well-meant but unnecessary and injudicious comment made in passing by a fellow-worker on the success of him who was taking the men to the inquiry-room.

Large overflow meetings are being held in Christ Church (Dr. O'Brien, vicar), and also in Somers Town Presbyterian Church (Rev. Mr. Woffendale), to each of which Mr. Sankey goes after singing at the first meeting. In the former, among other clergymen, Mr. Mowll, of All Saints, Langham-place, has been giving addresses with marked result. We hear of an interesting case of an inquirer there who had come all the way from Lambeth, having been brought by a sister, herself a thorough Christian and anxious that her brother should share in the blessing. At the Presbyterian Church there is going on, Mr. Woffendale informs us, a remarkable work of grace. Not a night has passed without several professing to find their Saviour, while many more have been conversed with. Here the singing has proved very effective in melting the heart. We are told of a young lady who was deeply moved by Mr. Sankey's singing of the hymn, "Christ receiveth sinful men." She was spoken with at the close of the meeting without apparent effect, but came back next evening rejoicing in Christ. Men came into the meeting careless and indifferent, being impressed by the singing, and remained to the after-meeting in much anxiety of soul. The whole district Mr. Woffendale believes to be touched; and he states that the open-air meeting held at the Midland Arches on Sunday after morning service, with the view of reaching the working men, has had an attendance twice as large as usual since the meetings in the large hall began.

[FROM "THE RECORD."]

The correspondent of The Record, in describing "Two Sundays with Mr. Moody at St. Pancras," says of the meetings of Sunday week:—

"I may here recount a fragment of personal experience. An hour before the eleven o'clock service for non-churchgoers, I took fifty or sixty tickets of admission to it and went down a neighbouring street, where a roaring Sunday market was in full swing. I began gently and timidly offering a ticket here and there to some of the people who looked a little quieter and more respectable than the rest. Everyone, without exception, thanked me with all civility, and the majority accepted the cards. But presently, as the street became aware that there were tickets for Moody to be had for the asking, I was surrounded by eager applicants, men and women, of the humblest class; and some started off instantly for the hall to get in in time. In a few minutes I had not a ticket left, and I could have given another hundred away if I had had them. There could not be a more significant illustration of the importance of not waiting for the people to come to us, but rather of going to them.

"Mr Moody's address at this service was exceedingly powerful. The text was, 'And laid Him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn.' At the close he asked, as usual, any who desired to be prayed for to 'just rise' and then take their seats again. This is the part of his method which so many good men doubt. I can only say to them, 'Come and see.' I confess I did not like it in 1875; but Mr. Moody seems to me to have grown in tact and deepened in tenderness since then. Anything more quietly reverent and solemn and winning than his manner as he encourages this 'just rising' it is impossible to conceive. And as one after another does 'just rise' and sit down again, in perfect stillness, without a sign of 'excitement,' he must be a hard man whose prejudices do not melt away beneath the solemn sense that the Lord and the Giver of Life is Himself at work upon the hearts of many. On Sunday morning the process took some little time. Mr. Moody was not in a hurry; he quietly waited, putting in now and then a word of sympathy, and counting the rising figures one by one, until no less than 200 men and women had by that one silent but courageous act intimated their desire to be prayed for. Then he poured forth a brief, earnest prayer in their behalf; then gave out a hymn to be sung while the bulk of the assembly were departing; then beckoned to his workers to dive down into the crowd and come to close quarters with those who were waiting for counsel. Many of those who had stood up, and others, were conducted by the workers to the inquiry-room, where for more than an hour the personal work went on. It was noteworthy that almost all the 'workers' were unmistakably ladies and gentlemen, and many of them are well known as leaders in every good word and work.

"The work must be seen and examined if it is to be understood and appreciated. That such examination will satisfy any unbiassed mind that it is of God I have no doubt whatever."

A First Visit to Messrs. Moody & Sankey.

How slow many people are to appreciate contemporary history! Christians who get their hearts warmed by reading of great revivals of religion under the preaching of Whitfield, Wesley, Rowland Hill, and others, which have now passed into history, are yet slow to take in the fact that events of the same character, destined to have an equally great, if not greater, influence on the religious life of the present generation, are now transpiring at their very doors

Believing that everyone who can should hear these Evangelists for themselves, and privileged with platform tickets, we found ourselves at Ossulston-street, St. Pancras, a few minutes after seven on Monday evening week. At that early hour thousands had already assembled, and there were few vacant seats left on the platform. We succeeded in getting near the centre, capitally placed for seeing, but rather too close to the singers to enjoy the full effect of the music. It is often remarked that people go to these meetings chiefly to hear the singing; but, judging by the increased and eager attention with which the preaching was listened to, it did not appear that the singing was by any means the exclusive attraction. But one would have no fear of the results were Mr. Moody to try a week's preaching without the appendage of choir and solo singing, although it would perhaps be scarcely worth while to try the experiment simply for the sake of silencing cavillers.

One could not doubt the power and life of the Spirit of God being over the assembly. Prayer was offered at the commencement by a grand old man, with massive head and snow-white hair. It was a prayer for the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, which, by its simple, direct earnestness, seemed to go straight to heaven.

Having read the Ten Commandments, Mr. Moody announced his text: "Tekel: thou art weighed in the balances, and found wanting." Into a pair of imaginary golden balances let down from heaven, the preacher dropped the Ten Commandments, one at a time, with terse explanation and application of each in its turn. "Thou shalt have no other gods before Me," to which he remarked, some make a god of the whisky bottle, and others of their church or their minister. "Remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy," and "Honour thy father and mother," were particularly emphasised. But perhaps the Commandment most dwelt upon was the seventh, which Mr. Moody said he would rather have passed over altogether but for the terrible need at the present day to "cry aloud and spare not" in this particular. He read part of Proverbs iv. and vii. Seeing a young man in the audience laughing, he stopped, and exclaimed, "That young man there who can laugh at such a sin is nearer hell than he thinks." This interpolation drew forth an appreciative assent from the audience.

Having got all his weights in order, Mr. Moody next invited his hearers to step up and be weighed. He reminded them of the oneness of the law of God, how those who have offended in one point are guilty of all: he then proceeded to show how with Christ in the balances guilty man might face his Maker.

To the after-meeting about one-third of the audience remained, and during a solemn season of silent prayer one hundred and sixty stood up, at Mr. Moody's invitation, to indicate their anxiety about their souls. Most of them afterwards proceeded to the inquiry-roem.

A Friend.

The Last Sunday at St. Pancras.

Once more, and for the seventh time during the London Mission, we have to chronicle the termination of the large district meetings. On Sunday morning, in making the announcements, Mr. Moody remarked that he had heard of a man who once intimated that "the revival would close on such and such a day." His task was a more agreeable one. There had been so much interest manifested, he said, in connection with the St. Pancras meetings that the Committee have made extensive arrangements for the continuance of the meetings in various churches. This week Dr. Pentecost will give afternoon Bible-readings at the Regent-square Presbyterian Church (Dr. Dykes') from Tuesday to Friday, and will preach the Gospel in the evenings at Bloomsbury Chapel (Rev. J. P. Chown's). Mr. Stebbins will sing at both places. At the same time Mr. Mowll will conduct evening meetings at St. Mary's Church, Seymour-street, Euston-road. The friends at Regent-square will continue the evening meetings there also, with the assistance of various local friends.

Thus, though the evangelistic operations will be more diffused than during the three bygone weeks, it is hoped that the flow of blessing, far from being stayed, will rather be multiplied. In making these arrangements publicly known, Mr. Moody strongly urged the Christians who had been attending the large meetings to use their best efforts in drawing their friends and neighbours within the circle of spiritual influence, at either of the churches referred to. "You have not been doing much for the last three weeks but coming to these meetings; but it is time for you to go to work and bring others in." If he could imbue all his hearers with but a fraction of his own quenchless faith and zeal, still greater things would be seen in the days to come than have been witnessed in the days that are now past and gone.

We scarce know how to describe last Sunday's meetings in language different from that which has already been used in these pages on successive occasions. There were, of course, the same "eager, anxious throngs" morning, mid-day, afternoon, and night. The messages of the evangelist were taken from the same "old, old story." In the telling of them there was the same holy unction, and there came the same unfailing response.

The song messages were somewhat varied by the much regretted absence of Mr. Sankey, who is again indisposed. We hope a day or two's rest will bring our beloved singer back to his post. Happily the presence of Mr. Stebbins has enabled the breach to be filled; he has had the willing and efficient help of the Misses Beauchamp and Mr. Fulkerson, the choir leader, so that there has been no stoppage in the flow of Gospel harmony. The Christian Choir is now in frequent use in this department, and the congregations are becoming familiar with the sweet compelling strains, of the comforting assurance not only that

"Let the Saviour in;"

"Christ receiveth sinful men,"

but that

"He is abundantly able to save;"

the ringing echoes of the glorious hope that

"We shall know each other better
When the mists have rolled away," and many other well-worn truths clothed in new and pleasing garb of richest melody. On Sunday morning we heard for the first time, and from the lips of Mr. Stebbins, the anthem, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." Mr. McGranahan's musical setting of these "wonderful words" is worthy of himself, and it was rendered by Mr. Stebbins in really thrilling and rapturous tones that could not but yield a rare delight to all whose ear and heart were in accord with the sentiment and the song.

To the large early gathering of workers Mr. Moody discoursed on "The Bible; and how to Study it." This very practical address will shortly be published in separate form considerably enlarged. As a powerful plea for the preservation, unimpaired, of "the good old Book," with many suggestive hints as to its systematic study, it deserves the widest circulation. In the afternoon Mr. Moody addressed himself specially to young converts, on "Nine New Things," also a most valuable and helpful utterance. In the evening he answered the supremest of questions, "What must I do to be saved?" illustrating it by striking Bible cases of sudden conversion.

We are not able to furnish a report before going to press of the closing meeting at St. Pancras on Monday evening, for young converts of the various London Missions. In our next issue we hope to do so at adequate length. Before the eye of the reader falls on this page the eighth district—Addison-road, Kensington—will be enjoying the privilege of the ministrations of Mr. Moody, and also, we trust, of his singing companion and fellow-labourer.

A numerously attended and representative meeting was held on the afternoon of Monday week at St. Matthew's School-room, adjoining Addison-road Station Hall. Among those present were Rev. Chas. Graham, Rev. H. Webb-Peploe, Sir Wm. Muir, Rev. F. Page, Rev. Mr. Shaw (Chelsea), Rev. Henry Miller, Rev. J. Hancock, Vicar of St. Matthew's. A free conversation ensued as to methods adopted in working the Mission. Mr. Moody explained his views as to the work in the inquiry-room, and invited questions, which he answered. A very cordial spirit prevailed, auguing, we trust, a successful Mission.

THE CHILDREN'S MEETINGS.

The Saturday afternoons at St. Pancras have, as heretofore, been well occupied by a children's service. The meetings were conducted by Messrs. Hutchinson, F. Hodgson Jones, and J. W. Jordan, some 3000 being present on each occasion. The after-meetings had a goodly attendance of quiet, thoughtful children. After a short pointed address, many friends engaged in conversation with them.

Dr. Pentecost and Mr. Stebbins.

W in London owe hearty thanks to the Congregational Church, Tompkins-avenue, Brooklyn, for the kindly response they have given to the urgent request of Mr. Moody, that their Pastor, Dr. G. F. Pentecost, M.A., and their musical director, Mr. G. C. Stebbins, should come over and take part in the present revival in the metropolis. The Church is a very influential one, and both in pastoral and evangelistic work Dr. Pentecost is a power in Brooklyn and New York.

We have a very lively recollection of the valuable help which he gave to the Northfield Convention in 1881, in conjunction with Mr. Moody, Dr. Andrew Bonar, and others who were there for a shorter time.

Dr. Pentecost, as we intimate elsewhere, is this week giving afternoon Bible-readings on the Exodus from Egypt, at Regent-square Church; these will be published at this office with as little delay as possible. On Sunday, April 13, he will commence a Mission at the Conference Hall, Mildmay Park. A Bible-reading on the afternoons of Tuesday to Friday, and an evangelistic meeting every evening except Saturday.

We trust our readers will do all they can to secure for themselves and others the instruction of these Bible Readings and the benefit of the Gospel preached at night.

Mr. Stebbins is already well known and appreciated in London by thousands who have heard his singing at St. Pancras' Hall and the overflow meetings during the regretted absence of Mr. Sankey.

Messrs. Whittle and McGranahan.

By Pastor C. SPURGEON.

It was with the greatest possible pleasure that I hailed the coming of these friends to Greenwich. Knowing them previously by co-working with them in America, I rejoiced that such able servants of the Lord had been secured for the after-meetings in this district. The five churches representing the Presbyterian, Wesleyan, Congregational, and two Baptist bodies have each been visited, and in all great good has been accomplished.

It would be invidious to say that the last week has been the best, for in each of the separate churches the services have been grand. On Monday week the South-street Baptist Church was crowded with the right sort of people. The same faces are to be seen at every meeting, and these are the young converts eager to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of their Lord and Saviour." Amongst the many features of interest in this after-mission has been the following-up of impressed cases. Convicted ones have been dealt with on one evening, as such, and then each subsequent night the work of conversion has been advanced until the "I will" has come out of a full heart. Stones of stumbling have been picked out of the road by the different workers, and so "all the way long it is Jesus."

The Gospel preaching of our dear brother Whittle cannot be too highly spoken of; for it is full of loving earnestness and powerful with the Word of God. Meetings for young men have been held in the upper hall of the church, and here the testimonies of those lately led into the light have been given, while fresh souls have also been brought to the knowledge of the truth. The spirit of prayer prevails in all the meetings to a very marked degree, and the individual requests are numerous; not unfrequently, however, mixed with them there will be hearty thanksgiving for blessings received.

The singing of our friends Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan is touchingly powerful as well as tenderly pleasing. If selection may be made out of their "Gospel repertoire" we should say that "God so loved the world," and "I am the resurrection," are the best liked; while the "Two Lives" find many admirers. In fact, now that we have commenced to commend we hardly know where to conclude. All the songs seemed "filled with the Spirit," and what is not for one comes home with God's blessing to another. We dare not forget the zealous labours of the choir. Right nobly have these stuck to their posts all through the Mission—with heart and voice served "The King." "The singing men and women" of the sanctuary will not go unrewarded. Without any antagonistic rivalry, the Greenwich Male Choir is progressing to the perfection attained by the Clapham contingent, and bids fair to succeed.

God be thanked for the Bible lectures which Major Whittle has given in the afternoons of the Mission weeks. Grace of no mean quality has been granted to him to set before the people of God a table of truth, bearing many precious viands. Personally we can say (and we but speak for others), soul-fattening by the Word has been our experience. "Things full of marrow and wines on the lees well refined" have been brought forth from the "King's bounty," and the board has been well furnished. All through the meetings we have been wonderfully favoured with fine weather. In a land like ours, which has given up the old-fashioned idea of having a climate, we cannot be too thankful that the weather has been propitious. We started with a rainy night, and our faith took it as a token for "showers of blessing;" God, however, altered the sign, for He has caused "his face to shine upon us" in the sunlight of fair days. The mercy has been of this order, too, for none can tell how many a heart and home has been illuminated by his love during the past three weeks.

On Friday the first overflow meeting in connection with the services took place, when some four hundred were accommodated in the schoolroom of the church, and it was our pleasure to preach the Gospel to these friends.

The gatherings on Sunday crowned all. In the afternoon, for women only, and in the evening, that for men only, overfilled the chapel, and many were the decisions made for Christ. The singing of the piece "I will" produced a wonderful feeling, and led numbers to rise in profession of faith towards Jesus.

Every night some 250 men have had seats reserved for them, and it has been a grand sight to watch the ever-changing features of these "hardy sons of toil," as the preacher's words have told upon their minds. Many sparkling cases might be brought forward to show the power of God's message in checking sin and in converting sinners. The same tale is told by all, though the circumstances and surroundings differ. They are all lost, and needing a Saviour; they have been led to trust in Jesus through these meetings. Most affectionately do we commend our beloved friends to the people of God everywhere, and assure them of our earnest prayers at all times. As they leave us in Greenwich for labour at the Town Hall in Bermondsey the good wishes of many out of the five churches will follow them.

THE BERMONDSEY MISSION.

A meeting for prayer and conference on this Mission was held in the Town Hall, Bermondsey, on Saturday last. Among those present were Revs. Wm. Allan (Vicar of St. James's), Dr. Leary (Avondale-square), W. Hensley (Bishop Sumner Church), B. Brigg (Baptist), J. Farren (Congregational), T. Kench (Methodist), G. McAll (Congregational), W. Maltby (Wesleyan), also Captain Charleton (London City Mission), Dr. McKilliam, Mr. C. B. Ker, Col. R. W. Brooke, Gen. Anderson, Mr. Jno. MacGregor, Mr. W. Olney, jun., and other well-known active workers.

A statement was made as to the steps which had been already taken for making the Mission widely known. Most of the gentlemen named bore testimony to the need of such a work in the district; it was stated that for a population computed at 95,000 the church and chapel accommodation provided for not more than 24,000, while the actual average attendance did not exceed 12,000.

The Mission will be conducted in the Town-hall, Spa-road, Bermondsey, from March 25 till April 11, excepting the intervening Mondays and Saturdays, and Sunday, April 6, when Major Whittle will hold services in Haddon Hall, Bermondsey. Several ministers offered their churches for overflow-meetings, to be conducted by Mr. Henry Thorne and others. The proceedings were of a most cordial character. Large attendances and much blessing are confidently anticipated.

Mr. H. Thorne at New Cross.

A series of united services was conducted last week by Mr. H. Thorne at the Brockley-road Chapel, New Cross, in connection with the recent services of Messrs. Moody and Sankey in that district. There were afternoon Bible-readings and a Gospel service in the evening. Neighbouring ministers of various denominations took part. The meetings were times of great refreshing for Christians, and the power of God was manifested in the salvation of many.

Mr. Thorne commenced work at Bermondsey, in conjunction with Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan, on Tuesday, the 25th inst.; he has arranged to conduct Bible-readings daily at 3 o'clock (Saturday and Sunday excepted). Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan will sing.

The Stratford Choir.

The choir which rendered such good service with Messrs. Moody and Sankey at Stratford has now been organised on a permanent basis to carry on evangelistic work in that district. Mr. J. W. Godfrey continues as conductor, and the Hon. Secretary is Mr. Thomas, 19, Ham Park-road, Stratford, to whom applications for membership and requests for services should be sent. A prominent feature in the work will be the "Male Choir," commenced during the Stratford meetings, and now largely strengthened and increased.

Dr. Barnardo's Little Emigrants.

MONDAY'S Noon Prayer-meeting at the Y.M.C.A. derived special interest from the fact that forty-eight lads from Dr. Barnardo's London Homes were there who are to sail to-day from Liverpool for Canada. Twelve others from the country will join them in Liverpool, making sixty in all. Dr. Barnardo delivered a brief address, particulars of which we hope to give next week. Earnest prayer was offered by many present that every one of these little fellows might become the Lord's servant. The most sceptical must have been touched by the bright faces of these lads. In sending them from overcrowded London to healthy Christian homes in the Dominion, Dr. Barnardo is not only offering a very practical solution of a social problem, but is conferring upon these young fellows an inestimable and life-long boon.

That £10 can effect so much as seemed manifest from some of the cases of rescue and emigration mentioned, should certainly be suggestive to all who may have it in their power to co-operate in carrying it on. We believe Dr. Barnardo is hoping to emigrate not less than 350 boys and girls this year.

BIBLE FLOWER MISSION.—We are glad to observe from the Report for 1883, lately issued, that, in spite of many difficulties, chiefly owing to the scarcity of workers, the number of bouquets, &c., distributed, each with a Scripture text attached, amounted to no less than 372,725. This is one of the most attractive, and, therefore, efficacious methods of spreading God's Word. Thousands of poor sufferers in our great hospitals and infirmaries, and also thousands in their own wretched homes, have the Gospel message delivered to them. In many cases it is certain that the accompanying bright or sweet-smelling bouquet gives an opening that would otherwise have been closed. Help towards the necessary expenses is much needed. Flowers, evergreens, mosses, dried grasses, will be thankfully received at the Depôt, 110, Cannon-street, E.C. The Hon. Sec. will be glad to give any information required.

MISSION WORK AT CAMBRIDGE.

RARELY, if ever, has the University of Cambridge been so mightily stirred by the Gospel as by the Mission concluded on Sunday week. The origin of the Mission was very simple. By private invitation Rev. J. Pigott (Curate of St. Jude's, Mildmay), and Rev. W. E. Oliphant (Curate of Onslow-square Church) were invited six weeks ago to hold meetings; these were well attended, and produced so much inquiry among earnest seekers, that a special request was given to conduct a four days' Mission for the University (March 12—15). Immediately a letter from Mr. Pigott was printed, containing an account of God's work upon his own soul, and declaring the keeping power of God. A copy of this was left at the rooms of every undergraduate. Prayer was made daily in all the colleges for the promised blessing of the Holy Spirit. In some cases the name of every student was mentioned daily in prayer to God. Where this has been done the blessing has been most marked.

Public meetings were held each afternoon and evening in the Alexandra Hall, which were largely attended, and followed by after-meetings with personal dealing for inquirers. One notable feature of the evening meetings was the personal testimony given by University men. Many who had hitherto refrained from openly confessing Christ, stood up either to declare that they accepted the Lord Jesus or to tell others what great things He had done for them. Men who were known to have lived for the world, and some of powerful influence in the University, knelt together supplicating for mercy, while others were to be seen standing side by side in token of surrender to Jesus.

The afternoon meetings for the deepening of spiritual life dealt with the questions of "Sin," "The Cleansing Power of the Blood," and "The Keeping Power of God." Men were invited to yield themselves wholly to God by giving up every idol, and receiving the indwelling presence of the Holy Ghost.

On Friday afternoon a conference on the subject of "Holiness" was held in the Carr Library of Ridley Hall, by kind permission of Rev. H. C. G. Moule. On Saturday the presence of God was so manifest that it was decided to continue the services over Sunday (March 16), when the blessing was as marked as on previous days.

On Monday morning, by the kind permission of Rev. J. T. Lang, Dean of Corpus Christi College and Vicar of S. Benedict's Church, the Holy Communion was administered at a quarter to eight o'clock, and about 150 men were present. The Rev. H. C. G. Moule, Principal of Ridley Hall, gave an impressive address on the words "Rabboni, which is, being interpreted, Master," and with this service the Mission was brought to a close.

During last week a series of meetings have been held in several colleges, undertaken by the students, at which testimony was offered, and not a few have thereby been "added to the Lord." These meetings stirred up some little opposition, owing to the invitation notices containing the words "Ye must be born again." This opposition only proves that the Spirit is at work, for which we thank God and take courage.

NURSING THE SICK POOR.—A meeting in furtherance of the objects of the Association for Promoting Trained Nursing in workhouse infirmaries was held last week, by the kind permission of the Marchioness of Salisbury, at 20, Arlington-street, Piccadilly. The Association originated in 1879 in order to supply boards of guardians with competent and duly trained nurses. Since that time nearly twenty unions and infirmaries in the metropolis besides several in the country, have availed themselves of the services of those who have been so trained Many applications, however, have had to be refused, owing to the lack of suitable women. During the past year twenty-four have been appointed, and additional funds are required in order to extend the beneficial operation of the Association.

The Spezia Mission.

THIS Mission, after eighteen years of toil, can now report no less than fourteen full stations, with more than twenty sub-stations, where the Gospel of Jesus Christ is faithfully made known. It has the aid of five British missionaries, and twenty-two native helpers. It has six Bible day-schools, with between three and four hundred scholars; and eight Sunday-schools, with a most extensive Bible and Tract Mission, and a Sailors' Mission; and, in addition, a Young Men and Young Women's Christian Association, and Mothers' Meetings; and, what is not to be overlooked, a noon-day daily prayer-meeting. The interest taken in this Mission evidently increases year by year, and never has it more extended than during the past year—1883. And if those who read this Occasional Paper will at once consider how they can help to swell the annual income of the Mission to the needed £2500, so that the special and the ordinary fund may march hand-in-hand as a testimony to the living power of Gospel truths, who shall estimate the beneficent results of this united action, which seeks to transform material wealth into a source of moral and spiritual blessing, and render the moral desert as beautiful as fruitful gardens, watered by the cool waters of the Nile. There are many weighty reasons which might be urged why Italy should receive our loving, helping hand; but to those who have well considered her past history, and the opportunity now available for the wide diffusion of Gospel truth, either by the dissemination of the Scriptures, or the preaching of the Word, or the education of the young, such arguments will be superfluous.

To all who during the last year have aided the Spezia Mission, I tender my gratitude. Could these friends of the Mission see with their own eyes and hear with their own ears, the happiness they have aided to create, I do not think there is one but would consider it a joy and gladness to aid the work, as long as the opportunity is granted. And if every donor and collector is instrumental in only influencing one other friend of truth to aid this enterprise, we may look to seeing this year the annual ordinary income helped forward to its desired amount, and in this way the great desire of some devoted friends shall be fulfilled, viz., that any sums given to the special fund shall not interfere with the ordinary income, but even be a new spur to help it forward.

The thought has been raised that, could seven persons be found who felt that without trespassing on other righteous and benevolent enterprises, they could contribute £100 a year to the ordinary annual expenses of the Mission, and seven who could be found to contribute £50 per annum, not only would the recent pecuniary losses sustained by death be largely compensated, but the raising of the annual income to £2500 would be made a comparatively easy matter.

THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE FLOWER MISSION is doing a good work by distributing bouquets amongst the patients of various hospitals and infirmaries. This gives opportunities of introducing the Gospel to them. Friends are invited to send gifts of flowers in hampers to be delivered in London by ten o'clock on Wednesday mornings only, addressed to the Secretary, at the Tabernacle, Newington, S.E.

A CAUTION.—Lieut.-General Halliday, 5, Belmont-park, S.E., writes to us as follows:—"The following, as a matter of caution, may be of use among Christian brethren: I understand that a man, a professed convert from Judaism, who goes about selling various things, is making use of a paper, professing to be a certificate from me that I have long known him. The only truth in this is that, unfortunately, and very unwisely, a friend of mine sent him to me a couple of years or more ago with a note, but as I know nothing about him, I have steadily refused to give him any paper, or introduction to others."

MESSRS. FULLERTON & SMITH IN EDINBURGH.

BY D. A. MOXEY, M.D.

SOME time ago these well-known and much honoured evangelists, were engaged by the Y.M.C.A. of this city, for a three weeks' campaign. The main object of the meetings was to bring young men under the simple and earnest preaching of the Gospel, which was understood to be the characteristic of the work of these brethren. Their visit was anticipated with much earnest prayer, and when they arrived on Saturday, the 8th inst., a large number of the earnest Christian men of the city gave them a hearty welcome, and then proceeded to confer with them as to ways and means.

It was their first visit to the Scottish metropolis, and we were delighted to find in them men who were evidently determined to know nothing among us save Jesus Christ and Him crucified. We recognised in Mr. Fullerton a good deal of the manner of speech, but not in speech, of Mr. Spurgeon, with an additional smack of both the brogue and the humour of the sister isle. In Mr. Smith we got what we seldom miss from anyone who has been associated with the great preacher, the intonations of his voice and the reflection of his manner.

On Sunday morning, March 9, they spoke at the early breakfast of the poor outcasts, in the drill hall; then to a meeting of Christian workers in the Free Assembly hall, at 9 a.m.; and at 6.30 p.m., in the same place, they took the usual evangelistic service of the Carrubber's-close Mission. On the latter occasion the hall was crowded, and the whole service put us in mind of the precious Sunday nights when Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey, or Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan, conducted the meetings. Mr. Fullerton looks a delicate man, but Mr. Smith—"a mighty man is he"; and he shows the most solicitous regard for his preaching brother, by taking as much of the service off his hands as possible, and leaving him little more than the address to deliver.

Mr. Fullerton's discourse was based on Isaiah xlv. 22, "Look unto Me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth," &c.; and he remarked that in this gracious command we had the following four things: (1) The greatest possible blessing; (2) To the greatest possible number, (3) With the best possible security, (4) On the easiest possible terms. From first to last the immense audience was held in breathless attention—a result secured, looking at it from a human standpoint, by the perfect ease of the speaker, and his entire freedom from those artificial cadences that mar so much of what might otherwise be effective Gospel preaching.

Then, again, he is simple, natural, and unaffected, and seems to possess a rare gift of finding in "the wonderful words of life," hidden meanings that other men fail to discover. For example, under the second head, he asked if any man, woman, or child in the meeting could exclude himself or herself from the wide embrace of the word "earth," and to a supposed attempt at escape, on the ground of "mine being a very peculiar case," he replied: "Oh! I see yours is a case outside of all ordinary earthly experiences. Well, this verse seems just to have been written for your special benefit; for, look you, it says: 'Look unto me, and be ye saved,'—not all the earth, as I have been saying, but 'all the ends of the earth.' There, you can't get out of that category!"

The meetings during the first week steadily increased in numbers till, on the Saturday evening, the large Synod Hall of the U. P. College was crammed from floor to ceiling to hear a service of song entitled, "Heaven our Home;" and on Sunday night, not only was the Assembly Hall crowded, but the overflow nearly filled the adjoining Free High Church. At all the services anxious souls have been dealt with, and we have reason to believe that many have found rest in Jesus.

The evangelists have conducted the daily noon prayer-meeting with much acceptance, and we are looking forward with no little expectancy to the remaining term of their sojourn among us. They have already endeared themselves to all the earnest Christians, and a large band of singers and workers rally around them each night.

The Assembly Hall being engaged, the meetings were transferred on Monday week to the Literary Institute, on the south side of the city. The meetings have been well attended, the Hall being nearly filled each night. On Thursday evening the room was crowded, and many inquirers were dealt with.

The noon prayer-meeting has been much revived both as to numbers attending and interest and warmth. Young men cannot attend this meeting, owing to the hour at which it is held, but they have started a prayer-meeting of their own, held in the Hall of the Y.M.C.A. at eight o'clock in the morning, where they gather to pray for a blessing on the work of the day before proceeding to business or classes. It is a healthy sign that this meeting has met with growing support.

On Saturday, as before, a song service takes place in the large Synod Hall, which alone can accommodate the crowds seeking admission; and on Sabbath tickets have to be used for the same reason, and two services given, one for women and another for men. Next week we return to our old quarters in the Assembly Hall, and we are praying for, and expecting, a great blessing to our city. Will the readers of THE CHRISTIAN join us in prayer to the Lord of the harvest?

Distributing Scripture Truth.

WE are glad to learn that the work of the Society for Distributing Scripture Truth, Eastbourne, is steadily growing and increasingly blessed. For a quarter of a century it has been engaged in scattering abroad the good seed of the Word of God in railway and other waiting-rooms, workhouses, hospitals, prisons, &c., by means of Scripture rolls, books and leaflets, printed in bold clear type that nearly all can read.

One of its supporters writes:—"This society can effect nothing but good." This is a great but a safe thing to say, for its publications are entirely composed of portions of the Word of God. A chaplain of a large workhouse says that they are better than any tracts he could obtain. From railway-station masters, army chaplains, Bible-women, and in a special manner from chaplains and others working among sailors, the most gratifying testimony to the power of God accompanying the spread of his own Word is constantly received.

YOUNG WORKWOMEN IN THE CITY.—An interesting summary of the varied work carried on among our toiling sisters in the City is issued by Mrs. Fisher. Three Bible women, she says, are at work daily visiting the warehouses, seeking to introduce good books, speaking individually, as opportunity offers, about the best things. During the past year the dinner-hour meetings have been well attended, and there has been great blessing, the girls themselves taking a warm interest in the services, and doing their utmost to bring others in. Every week some fresh opening is made for reading the Word of God in the workrooms. In one warehouse where two were saved at Mr. Moody's meetings at "The Priory," the way was opened by the Christian forewoman there for a weekly reading. The way, too, is open in a large number of firms for holding services in the evening amongst the employés in the factories, and also for encouraging the disuse of intoxicating drinks, which is such a snare, unhappily, to many even young girls. The two "Welcomes" are an immense boon to the girls. The girls get a good dinner at the price they can afford to pay, and many are received who are glad to bring their own food. "The Bible Flower Mission" and the friends at Winchester and Odiham are never weary in supplying us with flowers. All communications to be addressed and further particulars gladly given by Mrs. Eleanor Fisher, "The Welcome," Cross Key-square, Little Britain, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

Notes and Comments.

In the sudden death, from heart disease, of Mr. Samuel Bowly, of Gloucester, which took place on Sunday last, the cause of Temperance in these isles has lost one of its oldest and staunchest advocates. Mr. Bowly had attained the ripe age of eighty-two. A record of faithful and devoted service for God and humanity will keep his memory green for many a year.

No class of toilers in our great metropolis have stronger claims upon Christian sympathy and concern than the thousands of young workwomen employed in warehouses, shops, restaurants, and other spheres of labour. Our friend Mrs. Eleanor Fisher, of "The Welcome," Cross-keys-square, Little Britain, Aldersgate-street, continues to urge on the work of Christ among them, and with no little encouragement. Her brief statement of the Mission for the past year is both cheerful and cheering in its character. We have given some extracts in another column.

Many earnest minds are occupied with the subject of consecration; it is of vital importance that we should understand what it is, so that we may practically realise it in our daily walk. There is a sad lack of true consecration on the part of many professed followers of Christ, and attention to its nature and necessity cannot be too earnestly enforced. A letter to professing Christians by Rev. Wm. Richardson, of Bedford Church, Exeter, has just been published, which puts the subject in an admirably clear and impressive manner. It is entitled "Thoughts on Consecration," and may be had of W. Scanes, Religious Tract Society, Cathedral-yard, Exeter, at a cost of one penny.

The Mansion House has been frequently employed of late as a place for rallying together the friends of philanthropic and distinctly Christian endeavour. Last week it was the scene of a gathering on behalf of that ancient and heroic branch of the Church of Christ known as The Waldensian. The Lord Mayor only expressed the general sentiment of all Protestant churches when he remarked that the Waldenses were endeared to all Christians for what they had suffered in early days, all being indebted to them for upholding the pure principles of Christianity through centuries of persecution. God has honoured them in these days by largely committing to their trust the grand work of Italian evangelisation. The cause of Waldensian Missions in that country is one well worthy of universal sympathy.

The spirit of caste and race distinction is hard to overcome, judging from the opinions expressed by leading men in the Southern States. Bishop Pierce, of Georgia, of the Southern Methodist Church, has recently said that while the negro ought to be protected in all his rights of person and property, he should not be permitted to hold office or be a juror, and that for the Federal Government to appoint a negro to any official post is an insult to the white men of the South. Such sentiments are unworthy of the Gospel the bishop believes in and proclaims, and it seems wonderful that in these days of advanced thought on the rights of men to universal brotherhood any Christian teacher can take ground so manifestly unjust. But it is an illustration of the power of prejudice, and the difficulty there is in uprooting long-standing habits of thought.

Miss Ellice Hopkins desires us to state that fifty copies, assorted, of the White Cross series, may now be obtained at half-price from the publishers, Messrs. Hatchards, Piccadilly. 300,000 have been sold in four months.

We hear the funds of the Evangelistic Mission, which is doing a good work in various parts of London and the country, greatly need assistance at the present time for the current expenses, while there is an urgent need for the enlargement of some of its halls. There has never been greater interest in the work than now, and the blessing of God appears to be manifestly resting on it in the conversion of souls. It would be a cause for great regret if its operations have to be suspended or straitened.

We ask special attention to the following letter:—

"The second reading of the Sunday Closing Bill for England is the 'first order' on April 2. We earnestly ask them to write to each of their representative in the House of Commons, respectfully urging him to be in his place and give the Bill the full support of his vote and influence. We also ask for special prayer that our Heavenly Father may so graciously guide and bless the efforts to carry the measure that it may be passed this session of Parliament.

Both the Spring and Autumnal sessions of the Congregational Union are to be held this year in London. The meetings in May will be divided between the Memorial Hall and the City Temple, Dr. Parker being the president. Dr. Dale, of Birmingham, is appointed to preach the annual sermon of the London Missionary Society, Dr. Conder, of Leeds, and the Rev. Arnold Thomas, of Bristol, being among other chief speakers of the session.

The President of the Baptist Union for the year will be the Rev. R. Glover, of Bristol, and among those to take prominent part in the services we observe the names of the Revs. Dr. Trestrail, Arthur Mursell, and others. Last on the programme, though not least in high and well-merited honour and esteem, the Rev. J. Aldis is to give an address on "Glad Service." His utterances on this theme will be looked forward to with deep interest by many, no man in the denomination having stronger hold on its affection than this venerable and venerated servant of Christ.

The value of congregational fellowship meetings and open Bible-readings is admirably illustrated in a paper written by the Rev. J. Gall, and read before the Edinburgh Free Presbytery. Their influence in promoting Christian union, increasing spiritual life, training those who attend to speak before others, securing better acquaintance with the Word of God, and in other ways, is ably shown. It is to be much desired that such meetings should be multiplied on all hands. Pastors of churches would find them of great value in rallying the most earnest and devout of their flock, and in bringing them into closer contact with the spiritual needs of the people. Our readers who desire to be better acquainted with such means of grace should obtain a copy of Mr. Gall's little pamphlet. It may be had of the Tract and Book Society, 13, South St. Andrew-street, Edinburgh.

Mr. John Shrimpton, 38, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London, W.C., will be glad to send (prepaid) to any Christian worker among young women in London a packet of four useful leaflets for distribution.

The formation of an International Association for the Suppression of the Gaming Tables at Monte Carlo is an object every right-minded person must rejoice in. No greater hell upon earth can be imagined than these institutions are, in the misery they produce, and the infernal influence they exert. It is therefore a cause for greatest satisfaction to learn that the movement for suppressing them is growing, not only in England, but on the Continent. Over fifty newspapers in all countries of Europe have written in its favour. The leading French and Italian papers have taken up the matter warmly, and at Nice a daily paper, L'Independant, edited by one of the ablest French writers, M. Le Pasteur Léon, is mainly devoted to combating the evils of Monte Carlo. May God speed every effort in this direction until this plague-spot is wiped off the face of the earth.

Mr. Spurgeon, in an article on Monte Carlo, which appeared in The Sword and Trowel, sets forth the evil of Christians who visit the district for health and to enjoy the surpassing natural beauties by which it is adorned, allowing themselves to be seen in connection with the gambling institutions of the place. They go simply to see the sight and to hear the finest band in Europe, but by so doing they strengthen and increase the power of this deadly evil. As he justly says of the promoters of the scheme—

"Few would come within their grip if all the assembly consisted of brazen-faced females and worthless sharpers, but there are many steps to the descending stairs, and right glad are the directors to see upon the upper rounds ladies and gentlemen who on Sunday will be conspicuous at church, and are known on other days as the cream of respectability. The presence of such persons makes the road to perdition a genteel promenade, and therefore it pays the promoters to give them music and flowers for nothing."

The world derives much of its power from the support given to its fascinations by those who are identified with the Church. The presence of professing Christians at theatres and opera-houses, and, still more, the adoption by Christian communities of semi-carnal expedients to gain money and to draw attendances, does much to build up the system of worldliness and sensuous delight which is so fatal to the soul's best interests. Would that all who bear the Saviour's name, and count his service their calling, would wake up to see the need of letting their light shine brightly, rather than allowing it to be beclouded by alliance with that which is "not of the Father, but of the world."

The conference of religious bodies on the state of the London poor, which is to be held at the Memorial Hall on April the 2nd and 3rd, is a good move. Care is being taken to make it thoroughly representative, and from such a united assembly of leading men of various churches much wise suggestion and counsel ought to be forthcoming. The actual state of the poor, the causes of their degradation, the duty of Christian churches in relation to them, and the best method of raising them, are the subjects to be considered during the two days' session. We may hope for important practical results to follow such an effort to grasp the facts of this burning question.

Having completed, for the present, his Gospel Temperance labours in the United Kingdom, Mr. T. E. Murphy sails for America on Saturday next. Many prayers and good wishes will follow our young and earnest brother, and a hearty welcome will be accorded to him if he should again visit these shores.

Mr. McAll, of Paris, will deliver a short address at the central noon prayer-meeting on Thursday, 27th inst., and Professor Christlieb, of Bonn, on Friday, the 28th. On Monday next, the 31st, Miss Macpherson will be present with sixty lads about to sail for Canada, earnestly desiring that they may be commended to the Lord in prayer.

At a Conference of Sunday-school teachers recently held at Tunbridge Wells, the Rev. Wm. Guest spoke forcibly upon the subject of how to prevent the loss to the churches of the senior scholars. He truly said no conceivable theme could claim a higher or more paramount importance. The perils which surround the youth of our land are appalling, far more so than some who interest themselves in their behalf are aware. The advance of popular education, in some respects to be rejoiced in, yet makes the minds of our young people more open to the insidious attacks of scepticism; and unless guided by principles of truth, early and deeply instilled, becomes a factor for evil rather than good. Mr. Guest spoke none too strongly when he said the devil is just now driving a desperate game, and the churches are too much open to the charge of ignoring the grave responsibilities involved.

One feature of youthful character to-day which may well cause great apprehension is the impatience of parental control which widely prevails. Independence is claimed, and home restraints are thrown off before any degree of maturity or solid judgment has been attained. The consequence is that the rising generation come under influences of a most pernicious nature, while wholly unprepared to cope with them. The luxury and effeminacy of our age has led to a baneful laxity of home discipline and parental authority, and the fruit is seen in the disobedience to parents and lack of respect for seniors which is a general cause of complaint. All who have children placed in their charge do well to bear in mind the need for special wisdom to guide them in their task, and to enable them to mingle firmness with gentleness in their treatment of them.

The Malagasy ambassadors are again at home, and have been giving accounts to their countrymen of their experiences in the countries they have visited. At one meeting 2000 were assembled, and Ravoninahitriarivo, the chief ambassador, gave a two hours' address on the reception accorded to the Embassy by foreign powers. He spoke glowingly of the kindness shown them in England, and again and again exclaimed, "Truly the English love us!" He gave a graphic description of English life, and astonished his audience by his reports of our churches, schools, home life, and commerce, &c. The French still continue their course of bombardment on the sea-coast, and the correspondent of the Daily News, referring to the fact, says: "Throughout the whole of this difficulty with France the wisdom and Christian forbearance displayed by the Malagasy Government stand out as a strange contrast to the conduct of the French."

This issue will reach some of our London readers in time to remind them of the conversazione and farewell meeting to which Mr. and Mrs. Grattan Guinness invite Christians interested in Foreign Mission work, at Eccleston Hall, Eccleston-street (near Victoria Station), on Wednesday evening, March 26. Tea and coffee at 6.30, meeting at 8, when addresses will be given by outgoing missionaries and others.

The Baptist Missionary Society have appointed Mr. R. W. Hay, of Edinburgh University, to succeed the late Rev. Q. W. Thomson in Mission work on the West African coast. Mr. Hay joined the Baptist body last autumn, and is likely to prove an able addition to the African staff. The Freeman states that this Society never had a larger number of men offering themselves as missionaries than just at present. More money, rather than more men, appears to be the requirement in this, as in many other spheres of sacred enterprise.

The Daily News has admitted a special cry on behalf of the domestic servants of London, many of whom are shown to be living under conditions as uncivilised and hard as the poor for whom so much has been said of late. The revelations made by personal investigation into the matter are startling, and show that there is ample need for rebuking the selfish indifference which many grand occupiers in the West-end show to the comfort and welfare of their dependents. Servants are not seldom reproached as being in these times a degenerate race, but the fault is far from being all on their side. As the article referred to justly asks, have we any right to expect faithful devotion and honest toil from men and women who are treated with very slight consideration, and lodged as we should never dream of lodging our horses or our dogs?

Apropos of this subject, we note with pleasure the issue of the seventeenth report of the Servants' Mission Christian Association and Homes for Men and Women Servants, established in the S.W. of London. Most pleasing results have followed the efforts made in connection with this Mission. 250 are enrolled with the Association of Christian Servants, 230 have been received in the Men's Home, and 280 in the Women's during the year, many of whom there found peace with God through Christ. Such efforts are urgently called for, and the blessing of God which rests upon them is occasion for much thankfulness.

After the several cases of imposture which have occurred in relation to the discovery of ancient documents and sacred manuscripts, one naturally feels cautious about accepting any fresh finds. A document said to have been found by Philotheos Bryennios, Bishop of Nicomedis, entitled the "Teaching of the Apostles," must therefore be regarded at present with some degree of sceptical hesitancy. Its date is said to be about the year 1000, and it professes to be a copy of a treatise as old as the first half of the second century, written to fix the order of things to be most surely believed. Were it genuine and authentic, some questions long in dispute might be nearer settlement; but it is wiser to appeal simply to the Bible itself, and let each one be fully persuaded in his own mind as to its dictates, rather than to depend on ancient or modern treatises, whatever their age or weight may be.

Mr. Josiah Spiers has postponed his visit to St. Petersburg, as the doors at present are tightly closed against work amongst children. Dr. Baedeker tried for three weeks to get a Sunday afternoon service in Mr. Kilburn's Chapel, and at last only succeeded in getting eleven children. At present £800 has been contributed towards £2000 required for the foreign work of the Children's Special Service Mission.

The tobacco question, next to the liquor traffic, is of pressing moment among social evils calling for resistance and restraint. The increasing prevalence of the habit of smoking, and that among the very youthful part of our population, is a fact of grave significance. A nuisance to multitudes who detest it, the practice is morally and physically injurious to those who adopt it. It is strange that the extent of the evil should not induce strenuous and organised opposition, akin to that which confronts the alcoholic enemy. That there is a strong feeling on the part of many in favour of such a movement is certain, and there are reasons of the strongest kind why an anti-smoking crusade should be vigorously prosecuted.

Those holding positions of prominence in the Church of Christ should seriously consider their responsibility in reference to the use of the noxious weed. Pastors and others specially connected with Christian work by their example may do much to deter from or to encourage the practice. Their action is watched and claimed as a warrant by young men who come under their influence. Looking at the expensiveness of the habit, the danger into which it is likely to lead those who addict themselves to it, and the deleterious effects of it upon body and mind, we can but think church leaders at least are called upon to use whatever self-denial might be involved in abstinence from tobacco.

The Queen newspaper reports the fact of a young lady of title having taken a room in the East-end, with the view of devoting her whole life to the care of the poor women and children of Bethnal-green. Her first and foremost object is said to be the promotion of cleanliness; hence she makes it her business to provide every room she visits with soap, scrubbing brushes, a pail, and a broom. She then sets the women to work with these in cleaning their domiciles, while she looks after the children, or whatever else requires attention. When the work is done she pays them for the time it has taken at regular wages rate, and tells them to expect her again in a short time. Such a case of self-sacrificing surrender to the work of social reform is indeed rare, and its practical adaptation to the material needs of the case is beyond all praise. Only let an army of such workers be raised up, and the reform of the homes of the poor would soon be secured.

Cleanliness is next to godliness, and a great work is done when the poor are induced to wage war with dirt and slovenliness. The filth in the midst of which thousands live, and that merely for the want of a little labour, is incredible, except by those who have actually witnessed it. Many of the abject poor seem to count water and fresh air as enemies, and to scrupulously avoid the application of either to the dwellings they inhabit. Carelessness in these respects operates most injuriously upon the morals as well as upon health, and district visitors and others who come in contact with the poor of our crowded areas, cannot be too earnest in urging habits of cleanliness both of person and house upon those they seek to benefit. But one chief cause is often the scanty water supply.

A CONFERENCE ON FOREIGN MISSIONS.

THE newly opened Powis Hall, adjoining Mr. Frank White's Talbot Tabernacle, was last week consecrated to its high uses, so to say, by a three days' Conference on Foreign Missions. The attendance at the opening of the Conference on Tuesday morning, 18th inst., was not by any means so large as the importance of the theme would have seemed to demand. We are all the more glad to be able to give publicity to some condensed notes of the interesting addresses.

At the first sitting, Mr. J. E. Mathieson took the chair. After prayer, praise, and the reading of the Scriptures, the Chairman said this Conference was a very happy sort of "house warming" for the new hall. Christian people at home are generally ill-instructed on the subject of Missions to the heathen; perhaps that is partly the fault of the pastors, who too seldom press it on their attention. Coming to the consideration of the subject of the first session of the Conference, Mr. Mathieson said the command of our Lord, "Preach the Gospel and heal the sick," was no arbitrary one, but one that meets the dual need of the human family in all ages. The gift of tongues and the gift of healing, given to the early Christians, were but an endorsement of the Saviour's command. "Greater things shall ye do," said the Master to his disciples. Was it not the case that aprons and handkerchiefs sent to Paul had healing qualities given to them; so had the very shadow of Peter passing by. Medical Missions were not neglected in the middle and so-called dark ages. Monks were frequently the doctors of the time. In our own day England possesses every possible appliance for the healing of the body. What we need is not a multiplication of churches or mission halls, but the turning of every second or third church into a mission hospital where the bodily needs of the people may be met and an entrance thus found for the message of the Gospel. As the representative of Mildmay, with its two hospitals, Mr. Mathieson told some striking cases in which kindness shown to people in their bodily necessity had blessedly paved the way for the reception of the Gospel.

After further prayer by Mr. Saunders, of the St. Giles' Medical Mission,

Surgeon-General Francis read a paper. The field was so wide, that he could only refer to one aspect of it with which he was specially acquainted—Female Medical Missions. He would not speak of those who were simply "lady doctors," though for such there is ample opportunity in heathen lands. Those who know of the suffering in the Indian zenanas, and the inefficiency of the native women, recognise the need of European help in this respect, especially if such workers are attached to a public hospital. As to the amount of professional skill needed by medical missionaries, the speaker said there was plenty of work for those of all shades of proficiency; but any who were not fully qualified ought not to adopt a professional title. He read extracts from a letter by a young lady missionary in India who visits several zenanas; these extracts showed the deplorable condition of the native ladies in certain circumstances of life, and the unspeakable need of skilled help.

Incidentally the reader of the paper made a very strong appeal to all intending lady medical missionaries to become total abstainers before entering on their work. The natives have a very keen sense of the evils of the drink, and much influence will be gained by those who have cleared themselves of all complicity with the terrible snare. One of the first questions they ask is, "Do you drink wine?" The great success of the American missionaries may largely be attributed to their practice of abstinence.

For those who wished to qualify themselves fully as medical practitioners, Dr. Francis said the London School of Medicine for Women gave ample tuition. He also highly commended the opportunities to be found at the Bethnal-green Hospital in connection with the Mildmay institutions. He deprecated the idea of making "short cuts" to the possession of the needful skill and knowledge. Those who go out as medical missionaries, should, in addition to medical ability, have good physical health and the capacity for acquiring foreign languages. One great thing to be aimed at was the establishment of a well-organised and comprehensive native agency. Owing to the shortness of the allotted time, Surgeon-General Francis could only read portions of his deeply interesting paper; these were full of pertinent facts and valuable personal experiences.

Addressing himself to the practical aspects of Medical Mission work in China, Dr. Gauld said there was no better field for such efforts than that vast and populous country. In all its eighteen provinces there is not a single hospital, except those established in recent years by foreign missionaries. Neither is there in all the length and breadth of the land a skilled native doctor. The field, so vast, is now fully open. The medical missionary will not find a door closed against him. It was not ever so, but prejudices are crumbling away in all parts of the nation, and among all ranks of the people. The medical missionaries in Teintsin, in Canton, and in Swatow have patients of all sorts and conditions, from the inmates of the palace downwards. Dr. Gauld quoted statistics to show how the work of the Mission hospital paves the way for the spread of the Gospel throughout the country. As one instance, he told of a man who came from a distant village to the Swatow hospital, and was healed. A year afterwards he sent for hymn-books, and in due course several Christian congregations were formed as the result of that one act of bodily healing.

Dr. Downes, late of Kashmir, noted some points that he deemed of importance in connection with the subject. He contended that it should be laid down, once for all, that medical missionaries ought to be thoroughly well qualified. In his foreign work he had constantly to meet cases that tried his nerve and skill to the utmost. He really ought to be a specialist in every department of medical treatment. At the same time, any and every missionary ought to know how to treat simple diseases. "A little knowledge" of these matters instead of being "a dangerous thing" may be a very useful thing to the Christian worker abroad. But even for the acquisition of this elementary knowledge and skill a reasonable amount of time must be given, and trouble taken. This knowledge may be much better gained at such a place as the Mildmay Hospital than one of the large hospitals, where the regular curriculum is observed. It may be a truism to say that the missionary department of the work is more important than the mere medical aspect of it. But it must always be kept in view that the very depth of the bodily necessities of the heathen peoples is apt to distract the mind and deflect the efforts of the most earnest missionary. Dr. Downes dwelt on the great difficulty he had experienced at Kashmir in securing native assistants at once competent and well behaved. As to the relative advantages of hospitals and mere dispensaries, he strongly preferred the former, where it was possible. Many diseases could not otherwise be properly treated. At the same time, he warmly advocated extensive itineration by medical missionaries. There is so much to be done that there is a temptation to undertake more than can be well got through; this danger must be carefully guarded against.

Surgeon-General Balfour said his experience had largely been among the Mohammedan families in India. It was only when despair of any other help had faded away that these people would have recourse to foreign help, and especially male help. The ignorance of native practitioners was amazing; often their only claim to the title of doctor was the circumstance that their forefathers had been in the profession. It would therefore be seen how clamant is the need in India of English medical missionaries of all shades and degrees of ability and knowledge. There is no restriction in the country as to the exercise of their skill. It is comparatively easy in Northern India, with only two languages, to acquire medical knowledge; but in the Bombay Presidency, where there are so many dissimilar tongues, the matter is different. He was strongly of opinion that tuition in the English language ought to be preferred, as there is no native literature of any consequence.

Dr. Saundebs, of the St. Giles' Mission, said medical missionaries should be thoroughly competent, not only medically but spiritually. He emphasised this statement from personal experiences and observations in South Africa, Japan, and China. A woman in St. Giles' once told him she would fall down and worship him if he could cure her. So it was everywhere: the medical missionary will not only unlock doors but hearts, and any one else may follow. What opportunities they have to carry the Gospel to the sick and the dying. Dr. Saunders spoke of the importance of the Medical Prayer Union in fitting its members for the spiritual part of their work.

Coming a little nearer home than most of the speakers, Dr. Dixon, of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews, told of the great and unexpected success that has attended the efforts of that Mission. Many thousands are reached every year, and to all the Gospel of Jesus Christ is preached. Opposition, strong at first, is now vanishing, and the kindness of Christians is breaking down the prejudice of the Jew. Many of them are mere babes in their knowledge of spiritual things, and the music of the Gospel striking on the ear for the first time often makes a strong impression. All those who have been baptized do not turn out satisfactorily; still there is much to encourage, in the bold sincerity of confession of the Messiah, when there is everything to lose and nothing to gain by it in a material sense. We, as Gentiles, owe much to "the chosen people;" let us pay off our arrears of debt as far as we can. Doors that were closed before to the Christian visitor have now been freely opened, because of the influence of the Medical Mission.

A closing word came from Dr. Valentine, of Agra, a sturdy Scot, whose foreign experiences have not robbed him of his nationality. He paid a very high tribute to the useful character of the paper read by Dr. Francis. It was a proverbial saying that "doctors differ," but the wonderful unanimity shown by those at this Conference must henceforth bring about a modification of the remark. Some reminiscences of his early student life, and the difficulties that Christian students had to contend with, greatly interested the audience. He did not like the term "medical missionary;" he preferred to be called a missionary with the knowledge of medicine. The salvation of immortal souls was the great end and aim of their work, whether they had got medical degrees or not.

In the closing prayer mention was made, by the Chairman's request, of Dr. Burns Thomson, who is in the south of France, in feeble health. As one who has done so much in bygone years to further this work, it was earnestly desired that he might yet be spared to help it on.

Our Sisters in other Lands.

For the consideration of this highly important topic, a much larger company came together in the afternoon. As befitted the subject and the occasion, the meeting almost exclusively consisted of ladies. Lord Shaftesbury was advertised to preside, but another and official engagement prevented his attendance.

Mr. Frank White having read a letter from Mrs. Weitbrecht regretting her unavoidable absence, said there had been a very widespread interest felt in this topic, as evinced by many other sympathetic communications he had received.

The first to address the meeting was Mrs. Smith, of Delhi, who began by saying that the subject was so vast it was difficult to grasp it. Imagination fails to conceive of millions, yet there are 120 millions of women in India, 40 millions of whom are completely shut up in the zenanas. In a bright, pleasant, and rapid conversational style, she unfolded her experiences among the inhabitants in the north-west provinces of India. First of all she told a little about the missionary conference of ladies held at Lahore last December twelve months. Miss Tucker, the well-known "A. L. O. E.," presided on that occasion, and charmed everybody by her able and spiritual addresses. At that conference it was shown by the figures quoted that while in 1871 there were about 400 lady workers in the country, in 1881 there were 540. In 1871 there were 947 native teachers; ten years after they amounted to 1990. As to pupils, they had risen during that decade from 1990 to 9220, all under some kind of Christian teaching. Going on to speak of her own experiences, Mrs. Smith said no idea of the difficulties of life in the zenanas could be formed by us. It was a great question at the Lahore Conference whether the converts should be advised to remain in the zenanas or come out. The work of Medical Missions among women has been an extraordinary success. She would advise none to be discouraged because they could not gain the opportunity of becoming fully equipped in medical skill. There is so much for all to do. What a dreadful loss of female life and child life there is in India, because of the ignorance of the native attendants and the superstition of the people. It was almost as deplorable as the former Suttee sacrifices. Mrs. Smith spoke in terms of the highest commendation of the work of Miss Thorne (Delhi), Miss Hewlit (Umritzur), who had the courage to open the first women's hospital in the land, and Miss Johnstone, of Agra. The workers are so few that they feel they are but drops in the ocean. Woman's life has been so utterly disregarded in India in the past, that the heart bleeds to think of it. The speaker quoted one case where eighty-five wives of a prominent native had been sacrificed at his death! Now, happily, the life of Indian women is better cared for, but what a responsibility lies on their sisters in Christian lands to go and take to them the light of the Gospel.

Mrs. Fagg, who has laboured in China, spoke of woman's work in that great country. She gave the foremost place to Medical Missions, which were the only means of entrance into the homes of the rich. These are most of all to be pitied, because custom has excluded them from influences that will reach those in lower circles of society. She made an earnest appeal to her sisters, either to give themselves to this work or to raise the needful funds for supporting other workers. The opium furnished to the Chinese by India was a great stumbling-block to the progress of the Gospel. The cry for workers is so great that she was constrained, wherever she went, to beseech her Christian sisters to press forward to the high places of the field. There is a great work also for Bible-women to do among Chinese women, who, said Mrs. Fagg, are the real perpetuators of the prevalent idolatry. She described how she had seen a mother, by the compulsion of bribes and fear, teach her children to worship an idol in the temple. There is one male missionary to every million of Chinese men. Excluding the wives of missionaries, there is hardly one worker to four millions of Chinese women! In closing, the speaker fervently entreated her younger sisters to give themselves to this work, and begged English mothers not to place any barriers in the way of their daughters being laid on this altar of service.

Miss Lancaster said she had been living in the North of China, where the customs are widely different from those in the South. Her experience had been not among the rich but the poor, mostly the orphans left by the great famine. In the capital of the northern province where she was stationed, her work had been chiefly among the girls, and it had been a very joyous work. She gave some very encouraging instances of the blessing among the children. A very affecting incident she also related, was of an old woman who was a bright, decided Christian; she feared, however, to be baptized, because she thought she could not fully obey the command given to the disciples of Christ to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature! Well would it be if we whose opportunities are so much greater were equally sensitive as to our duty. The openings in the outlying villages, said Miss Lancaster, are wonderful. Everywhere there is a warm welcome and a longing desire to hear more of the good news of the Gospel. There were not many dry eyes in the room, we should judge, as this good sister told in a very simple and touching way some of the blessed experiences of happy and fruitful work she had passed through. She said she was going back next week, the Lord willing, and she asked for the prayers of those at home. Who could refuse such a petition from such a consecrated worker? "Not only pray," she said before sitting down, "but oh! if some of you could go out yourselves. If you had a little of the joy that I have had you would never want to come back."

Mrs. Guinness, being asked to say a few words, remarked that it was most desirable the conference should not end in talk. "If ye know these things happy are ye if ye do them." She made an intensely earnest appeal for sisters to devote themselves to foreign missionary work. Any woman with common sense in her head and the love of Christ in her heart, could be used of God in heathendom. Oh, the awful, utter deadness of the Christian churches in this land as to its responsibility for the salvation of the world! There are hundreds and thousands of Christian women in this so-called Christian land who are leading aimless, even miserable lives, and who, if they went to China or India, might shine for Jesus and carry the Gospel to those who are sitting in darkness and the shadow of death. Not only does China need them. What about France, so open to Protestant effort and so much in danger of lapsing into Atheism? What about Spain and other continental lands? In Alsace there are many churches without pastors and scores of villages with no one to preach the Gospel to them. Across the Mediterranean there are six or seven millions in the Empire of Morocco with only one Jewish missionary among them. Yet that country is within four days of London, and has a perfect climate! We need to realise that this work of bringing the heathen to Christ is no more an impossible thing than the conversion of a child at home. Will not this Conference result in the going out of scores and hundreds of young people to the Mission field? Many, by dispensing with a little luxury, could pay the passage money of some worker abroad. There are plenty of Christians in London to-day to evangelise the whole of the heathen world if they would only give themselves to the work. Think of 856,000,000 of unevangelised heathen!! God grant that this terrible anomaly and blot on our Christian churches may be taken away.

Mrs. Guinness followed up her words of burning appeal by earnest words of confession to God for this failure on the part of the modern Church, and of petition that many might be stirred up in these last days to go forth as the messengers of the Cross. She besought the Lord to speak to parents and to children, so that an age of evangelisation to the heathen, hitherto unknown, might speedily dawn, and a host of self-supporting missionaries go forth to sow the seeds of eternal life in all lands.

Indian Missions.

The evening meeting was well attended; the subject was "Missions in India." After praise and prayer,

Sir William Muir (chairman) said: India is going through a very trying time just now. The people are being enlightened, and education does not always lead them in the right direction. Multitudes of young men, highly intelligent and well cultivated, have thrown off the bonds of heathenism, and are now without God, and without any religion at all. Professing Christians do not always set them a good example, and the result of bad influence is deplorable. To any who have friends in India I would say: Do your utmost to rouse them to the necessity of right example before the natives. Advise them to make the missionaries their friends. I thank God I was led to choose some of them as my friends when I first went out. These young natives have not only a bad example, but they are poisoned by atheistic literature, Godless and God-denying teaching. Large quantities of such literature are sent out to India, and a regular infidel propaganda is in progress. Missionaries must adapt themselves to the circumstances of the times. Amongst educated natives special measures must be adopted to meet objections, and press home the necessity of personal salvation; amongst the villagers there is gross heathenism and darkness, and there the Gospel has to contend, not only with sceptical objection, but ignorance and superstition. Notwithstanding the difficulties, the Gospel is making wonderful progress.

Mr. Henry Morris (Civil Service, Madras) said: The first thing to be put in the forefront of all Missions is preaching the Gospel—going out in the highways and byways preaching the good news that Jesus Christ died and rose again to save fallen man. I fear there is not so much of that going from village to village and proclaiming the glad news as one would like. Our Lord rarely stayed long in one place, but went through the towns and villages preaching the Gospel. When it is remembered that India is an agricultural country, and that nine-tenths of the population are "peasant farmers," it is evident that only by village work can we reach them. I would have strong centres, whence missionary brethren could go out two by two right among the people, learning to talk to men at the bullock's tail—that is knowing the people as they are at home and at work—able to speak in the homely words of everyday life. Only thus will they learn really to understand the people of India. And let them speak to Orientals in Oriental style, that is, by incident, illustration, figure, and parable. Let them have a good deal of singing; and, although I abominate the native "tum-tum," I would not hesitate to use that in the villages. Only thus will the common people be reached.

Every missionary should have a medical training. It is so Christ-like to go about healing the sick and preaching the Gospel; and it is just at such times that men's hearts are more tender, and they are more ready to listen to the beauteous Gospel. Nothing opens the door to the Gospel so quickly as a knowledge of the healing art. This brings us to the very kernel of the question, the training of agents, and particularly native agents. If India is to be permeated with the Gospel it must be by native agents. However few there are, let them be well trained, taught how to preach and how to go about, and, if possible, a little knowledge of the healing art. What is true in this land is true in India: the poor man is the best missionary to the poor man; he understands his difficulties, and troubles, and speech, as no one else does.

Although I set preaching as first and highest, I do not forget how necessary teaching is. Let us train not only native pastors and evangelists, but also native schoolmasters. The work of education is of increasing importance. Christian literature is of immense importance. When infidel literature is being widely spread in India, can we not rouse ourselves to provide proper Christian literature in the vernacular? We want well-written little books in clear, pithy, idiomatic sentences, using the words of the people. The societies ought to combine for this purpose, choosing out, independent of denomination, the most suitable men, who will devote themselves wholly to the production of such books in the vernacular.

A word about missionary statesmanship—I use the words advisedly. We want wise, clear, heads, as well as warm hearts. I believe the future of India is dependent, under God, on the native church. We want to see that church self-supporting, self-governing, and self-extending. So long as it is dependent on foreign support it is a kind of hotbed Christianity. Let the native Christians maintain their own churches—and they are learning to do so—let them rule their churches, and let them send out their best and noblest sons to preach the Gospel to their countrymen. Heathenism is not decaying; Mohammedanism is full of vigour. Let us seek to spread the conquering Gospel in India, and look forward in faith to the time, if the Lord come not first, when India shall lay her jewelled turban at the foot of the cross of Christ.

Rev. Dr. C. S. Valentine delivered a stirring address, contrasting India as it was with India as it is. Referring to his early experiences, twenty-three years ago, with Mr. Schoolbred, he told how they went out to the villages, amongst the hill people who had never seen a white man before; how the men flocked to listen, but the women were forbidden; how through their love for the children the women were reached, the ice once broken they come regularly to hear; how the Lord opened doors during a cholera epidemic, doors which never afterwards were closed. These experiences, narrated in a happy and animated way, were listened to with great interest. After referring to the work of the Salvation Army in India, Dr. Valentine concluded by giving details of the Agra Medical Missionary Training Institute.

Mr. Henry Stanley Newman, Secretary of the Friends' Foreign Mission Association, spoke on behalf of the young men of India. Could not many of our trained Christian young men go out and seek to win these intelligent young natives for the Saviour? A splendid field awaits any who are gifted for this work and willing to throw themselves heartily and wholly into it.

China and its Claims.

This was the subject set down for discussion on Wednesday evening; it drew together a goodly company, which manifested an eager and solemn interest in the array of stupendous facts presented by the speakers. After two hymns of praise and earnest prayer offered by Mr. Grattan Guinness and Mr. Frank White,

Mr. Donald Matheson (chairman) read a resolution drawn up in consequence of facts elicited at previous sessions of the Conference, and which ran somewhat as follows:—

"This Conference, while cheered with the progress of missionary work, has been deeply pained in the course of its proceedings with the evidence brought before it from various sources, by gentlemen in the Indian Civil Service and by missionaries of long experience, of the systematic propagation of infidel literature issuing at the present time from England to India, Japan, and other countries; so much so, that it appears that students taking degrees at our Government universities in India receive gratuitously a supply of debasing infidel literature from our own land. Thus the knowledge of the English language provided by our Government educational establishments is made the means of introducing evil instead of good. It seems that the time has fully come when those interested in the great work of our missionary societies should supply all these students with an exposition and declaration of Christian truth and the solid basis on which Christianity rests."

It was cordially agreed by the meeting that this resolution should be signed by the Chairmen at the various sittings of the Conference and be forwarded to all the Missionary Societies.

Coming to the special subject of the evening, Mr. Mathieson said we had all heard much of the vastness of China and of the population—a homogeneous race, the Saxons of the East—who are spreading themselves over the world, and doing the work of colonisation far and wide. China Missions are only about forty years old, but what wonderful progress has marked that period. In round numbers there are now about 22,000 converts in China under the care of some twenty different societies. Yet how small have been the results compared to the immensity of the need. Referring to the Medical Mission work in Formosa, the Chairman spoke of the good results of the work carried on at the hospital for lepers in Swatow. Looking to the prospects of work in China, he said that the weak faith of professing Christians and the low standard of life at home had been serious drawbacks in the past. He was thankful to believe that a higher and deeper standard was now beginning to prevail in the churches, and there was a more unwavering faith in prayer as a channel of blessing. There must be a consequent re-adjustment of our ideas not only as to prayer and holiness, but as to expenditure and to locomotion, which is now so easy and rapid. Other things greatly to be desired, were more unity among Christians generally, and a greater solicitude for the prosperity of foreign Missions on the part of those who minister in spiritual things to our congregations.

Rev. G. Piercy, who has laboured in the Gospel in China for many years, alluded, first, to the wonderful openings for Gospel effort, not only in that land, but the heathen world over. He could not but recognise the demand that has grown up in these days for more expeditious methods of reinforcing the army of workers in the field. With that feeling he thoroughly sympathised. He himself was thrust out at an early age by the Holy Spirit apart from all ecclesiastical routine and regulation. Many reminiscences in connection with his own early missionary career, begun at a time when the difficulties were more serious and more numerous than now, were recited to show that no one need be deterred from entering the foreign field. Mr. Piercy concluded his interesting biographical address by detailing the efforts he is now making to carry the Gospel to the various grades of Chinese in London. He hoped some younger man would take up this work and thus enable him to return to China, where he wished to spend the remaining years of his life as a messenger of the Cross. He invited any friends present interested in the Chinese to pay him a visit at the little Mission-house which is his London headquarters, close to the Strangers' Home, West India Dock-road, E.

Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, with a view of emphasizing the vastness of the field, said that during the hour and a half that had transpired since the meeting began, some 1500 souls in China had passed into the eternal world, having no one to tell them of the love of God in Christ. He prayed that God would make our Christian life more of a reality in view of the state of our brethren and sisters in that land. Pointing to the large map of China which shows Mr. Cameron's remarkable itinerant seven years' journey through that vast land, he asked whether the same responsibility to carry the Gospel to the Chinese did not rest on all who heard him. He wanted them to understand that spiritual work needs the power of God, and nothing else; let them see to it that traditionary ideas were not standing between them and their plain duty towards the heathen. For the benefit of the young people in the meeting he told of a Chinese boy whose faithfulness and solicitude on behalf of an old man, whom he saw worshipping idols, led to the conversion of this aged Chinaman and his wife. Get all the help you can by the way, said Mr. Taylor, but let nothing be put in the place of Holy Ghost power. I am convinced that but for our unbelief the whole world might hear the Gospel within ten years. To give some estimate of the vastness of the Mission field in China, he said that for one man to itinerate the whole of China, even in the cursory way that Mr. Cameron went through a portion of it would take 483 years, walking thirty miles a day every day in the year. The openings in China now are a hundredfold greater than forty years ago, when Mr. Piercy went out. The staff of workers is therefore a hundred times smaller in proportion. There are 1500 counties, each with its multitude of towns and villages, without a solitary Christian missionary in them. One of their workers connected with the Inland Mission is very anxious that six stations should be planted in the western part of Central China, each of them to be eighteen days' journey from the other. Many other facts were quoted by the speaker to show that the work is great and the labourers few. How shall we sit still and quietly enjoy our conferences while these things are so? If we did but believe that God is real and Christ "a living, bright reality," would not many of us find ourselves on missionary ground instead of staying comfortably at home? Oh the joy of not being one's own master—of being ready to be or do or suffer whatever the Lord appoints. It is in emptying ourselves as Jesus did, in going, and trusting, and dying, if need be, that we can learn fully of Him, and "win Him" who alone can satisfy the heart and mind and soul. God make us whole-hearted and real in our service. Shall we leave these heathen to perish, or shall we hear and obey the Master's voice, calling us to go and tell them of his love?

Self-supporting Missionaries.

This highly important topic was taken up on Thursday morning, when a considerable gathering met under the presidency of Mr. A. C. P. Coote.

ADDRESS BY MRS. GRATTAN GUINNESS.

Having read the passage from Rev. xiv. which describes the angel flying in the midst of heaven, "having the everlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth," Mrs. Guinness said: We shall understand this subject best in the light of past experience in connection with home work. Looking back over fifty years of Christian work in England, we are struck with one fact: the ordinary prevailing notion, deeply ingrained in the midst of the Church at the beginning of that period, was that the work of propagating the Gospel belonged to "the clergy." A wonderful change has since then come over men's minds with reference to this matter, until we have reached the deep-seated conviction that every man or woman who is converted is responsible in seeking the conversion of others. This change has been a progressive one. First there was a recognition of the fact that others, besides the regularly ordained clergy, might and ought to preach the Gospel. After "lay" preachers came city missionaries and Bible-readers. Then private Christians of various ranks in life began to take up the work of evangelisation. By-and-by woman came forward as a sharer in this great work, and her responsibility to use gifts of public utterance was recognised. Later still it has been seen in connection with the work of the Salvation Army that the young and even the ignorant of both sexes, when filled with the Holy Ghost, have a mission in carrying the Gospel to others.

The results of this change have been unspeakably blessed, both to the work and the workers. Within the last thirty years or so the Gospel has been spread abroad throughout England and America in a way unknown before in the history of the world since apostolic days. This has been accomplished for the most part not merely by what is called lay service, but largely by unpaid, voluntary, spontaneous service. This movement has tended greatly to the increase of consecration among Christians, and to the preservation of the young from temptation. This plan, which has proved so successful at home, has been scarcely begun in regard to the heathen world. What we need is to have it extended till it embraces the wide world in its scope. There are many reasons for insisting on this. First of all, there is the terribly inadequate supply of missionaries under the present system. The evangelisation of the world is utterly hopeless unless we can multiply the number of the workers a thousandfold. We know that a short time only will elapse before the Lord returns. His command is that the Gospel shall be proclaimed in all the nations for a witness before the end can come. If this word is to be fulfilled the Church must wake from her slumber. Nine-tenths of the world are yet unevangelised! Probably there are not more than 3000 Protestant missionaries at work all over the heathen world. Yet we have some thirty millions of professing Christians in England and as many more in America. Then what resources we have among the Anglo-Saxon people in the matter of wealth, intelligence, education, energy, scientific knowledge of every kind. How well able we are to do this work of world-wide evangelisation. The heathen races recognise our superiority. One white man is as good as a hundred of an inferior race. As to money, how deplorably disproportionate is the amount expended by the Christian world on the work of foreign Missions. A hundred and thirty-six millions annually spent on intoxicating drink—that which degrades our own people. Only a million and a half spent on efforts to evangelise the world. I do not say that all that worse than wasted wealth is in the hands of Christians by any means; but a fair share of it is.

It seems to me that the change I have been speaking of is one that we may well pray for, seek after, and expect. If we ask anything of the Lord that is in accordance with his will, we know that He heareth us. Surely the thrusting forth of these labourers into the great harvest field is according to his will. Let us pray in faith, and without ceasing, that the change may be brought about. It is no impossible thing. We must seek after it in every possible way. We are bound to do this by the compassion of God, by our love to Jesus, and our fidelity to his cause, by the very circumstances of the age, which is so rapidly nearing its close. There is no time to lose. I solemnly believe that we may expect it, because the Word of God predicts it. The passage in Revelation about the angel flying with the everlasting Gospel must refer to this age. I see a glorious fulfilment of the words of the prophecy in what has already been done. Taken by themselves, the results of the work of our missionary societies and our Bible societies are magnificent, but they are as nothing in comparison with what remains to be done.

Mrs. Guinness went on to demonstrate that another great reason for this new departure may be found in the wonderful opening up of those parts of the world hitherto closed to the missionary. She detailed at some length the remarkable providential indications, derived from passing events, that ere long Africa will no longer be "the Dark Continent." The work of the International Association on the Congo being carried on under the fostering patronage of the King of the Belgians was described as something altogether unprecedented in its inception and execution. The Belgian monarch is spending on the project £80,000 a year out of his own private resources, and in the eventuality of his death he has made provision that the work of exploration and civilisation shall go on unhindered. It was mentioned as a most remarkable circumstance that three Anglo-Saxons have been chosen by the Royal patron of this scheme to take charge of the work—an Englishman, whose name we did not catch, to be administrator on the Lower Congo; Stanley on the Central region, and General Gordon on the waters of the Upper Congo.

What can we do to bring about the settlement of these self-supporting workers in the heathen world? It will be no easy task, as the experience of the past few years has shown. A strong public opinion must be formed in favour of it, and that can only be done by public teachers — ministers, lecturers, instructors of youth, and, above all, editors. If ever this movement is to gain a wide acceptance, there will have to be a fresh departure on the part of those leaders of public thought and opinion. As to the ministers, how often do they lay before their congregations the duty and responsibility of all Christians in this matter? In many pulpits such a thing is probably never thought of. Why should preachers confine their Sunday ministrations to an exposition of the word and doctrine, without going into these matters of practical life and duty? Thousands of church-going people never attend the missionary anniversaries. Why should not all ministers devote a Sunday morning or evening now and again to a description of the state of the various parts of heathendom, and a setting forth of what Jesus Christ expects from his disciples? Should not the heads of Christian colleges and training institutions seek to impress upon those under tuition the truth that God wants them to be the evangelisers of the heathen?

Popular objections and misconceptions must also be studiously removed. One of these misconceptions is the idea that in order to be a foreign missionary one must occupy an exceptionally exalted position spiritually. Of course there must be practical devotion to Christ, but that is as much needed for Christian work at home as for work abroad. There is the acquisition of a new language to be sure, but that is within the capacity of most. Many can already speak several languages. Why should not young ladies, for instance, learn a new language for Christ's sake as well as for the sake of society and for mere accomplishment's sake. Another fallacy that needs to be exploded is the idea that missionaries must of necessity be young people; and the worst notion of all is that a missionary life is to be looked at as a way of getting a living. Of course there must be those who will have to live by it, but the point to be aimed at now is to get those who can support themselves to enter on the work. There are vast numbers of Christians having means of their own who could live as comfortably and as happily in some heathen land as at home, and at the same time carry the Gospel to those around them. Then we want to get rid of the idea that a missionary's life must necessarily be one of great hardship and extraordinary self-denial. As to climate, there are many places abroad where it is all that could be wished for, and certainly far superior to that of London.

Thousands of young ladies especially would be healthier and happier in Morocco, or in some parts of India and China, than in this conventionalised, routine, "society" life, which is wearing them out and pulling both body and mind to pieces. Why should not many of those single women who have to make their own way in the world go to foreign lands, where they would not only find a life's vocation, but would have the opportunity of doing missionary work? Those who feel they cannot go themselves, and have been blessed with the means, could send out and provide for the support of others. If it be true, as our friends say, that one can live comfortably in China on £50 a year, some of those at home, whom the Lord has prospered, might have half a dozen representatives out there in the Mission field.

Lack of space compels us to be satisfied with a very condensed report of our sister's stirring address; it made a very deep impression on the meeting. If the leaders of public thought were to adopt her suggestion and seek to indoctrinate the rising generation, with a sense of the glorious opportunities open to them, perhaps it would not be long before this ideal state of things came within measurable distance of realisation.

In course of the conversation that followed, Mr. Piercy said that this was no Quixotic scheme: to carry it out, however, a man must be prepared to go against the opinion of some of his friends. But if the Master calls we need not heed their voices. If God sends us He will provide for us.

Mr. Hudson Taylor confronted the idea too commonly held that people must have superlative abilities or qualities before entering on this work. What we need is common people with common sympathies, and an earnest desire to serve the Lord. Why do we stop at home? Those who have an income can make it go as far, if not further, in a heathen land than at home. "God will withhold no good thing" is the promise that cannot fail, as many of those who have experienced it can testify. When we think of the sad condition of the heathen, let us not be ready to raise up insuperable barriers in the way of those who desire to go. As to climate, there are all kinds of it in foreign lands, and it need be no hindrance. If we allow God to invest our lives for us, He will do it well. Let us place ourselves simply in his hands, and He will make no mistake.

Mr. Landale, who has been labouring for the China Inland Mission since 1876, said on the question of expenses that an inspection of his bank-book showed him that during his stay in China he only spent about £1 a week. If anyone has £50 a year let them go to China; they can live comfortably and preach the Gospel at the same time. "Did you endure great hardness?" asked Mr. Frank White. "Oh no; I was never happier in my life. I do not think happiness depends on curtains, and carpets, and ceilings, and pictures. If the Lord is with you, you will not care much for those things." He lived in a Chinese house of fourteen rooms, for which a rent of 7s. a month was paid. The Chinese say, "We must eat our rice somewhere." So we may say, "We must pass our lives somewhere." Let us so spend these lives that we can look back upon them without self-reproach.

Africa and its Missions.

"The Dark Continent," par eminence the topic of the day, was reserved for the final meeting of the Conference. Mr. John A. Gosset, of the Speaker's Court, Westminster, presided. Though all Missions had an interest, he said, Africa would ever have a special importance to him, because of his recollections of Major Malan, whose name will ever be dear to those who seek the salvation of that land.

Rev. J. Harrington, of the Victoria Nyanza Mission, Central Africa, gave a very interesting sketch of his personal experiences in that region. He described the journey from the coast, traversed through dense jungles and forests under the rays of a tropical sun. At a spot 500 miles inland they came to a station where he was struck down with rheumatic fever, and for six weeks he only took one walk; that was when he went on the arm of a friend to choose a spot for a grave. It pleased the Lord, however, to raise him up, and he was able to press on, and ultimately he reached the lake. He described an interview with a great chief, Roma, who wished him to stay there. While there may be no great spiritual desire among these people, they see the kindness of the white man, and wish to learn something of his God. After a further illness he was compelled to return. On the way back he learned something of the fearful superstitions that prevail. One chief sacrificed nine lives in order that some spell which was causing his illness might be removed. Wherever a white man goes, though he be only a traveller, if he is fair and honest in his dealings, peace is sure to follow his track. The way to bring happiness to Africa is to send more missionaries, who will teach the people of the love of God.

Mr. Cole, who was sometime stationed in the interior, described an interview with a chief on his return journey to the coast, to whom he was able to preach the Gospel, and who seemed to receive it gladly. Patience, perseverance, zeal, and a cheerful disposition, he said, were essential requisites for a successful missionary in heathen lands.

The closing address of the Conference was a most remarkable one, by Mr. Grattan Guinness. Speaking of Africa as a Mission field, Mr. Guinness said it contained a vast number of people, speaking different languages, and in very different external conditions. Referring to Egypt, he said, that from the top of the highest pyramid the country looks like a green river flowing through a desert of sand. Egypt is really the Nile and its two banks. Leaving Egypt to cross the desert is like going to sea—you must cross the trackless waste of sand by the help of guide or stars. In Algeria you leave the flat country and get among the hills—range on range, some of them 7000 feet high. Much that is interesting could be said of the Moors, the Kabyles, and the Jews, the last of whom are very numerous, and much more accessible than their kinsmen in this country. These native races are Mahommedans by conquest, but they are not bigoted, and seem very easy to get at.

After some passing references to Mr. Pearse's work among the Kabyles, and to the Mission now inaugurated among the people of Morocco at Tangier, Mr. Guinness went on to remark, that throughout the northern part of the continent the people are Mahommedans by conquest. They are very intelligent and accessible, but very much prejudiced against the Gospel of Christianity. He viewed the Mahommedan faith as one of the prophetic woes sent on Eastern Christendom, which is now in process of removal. Practically the whole continent is yet an unevangelised one. In a few spots here and there labourers may be found, but the merest fringe of the country has only been touched. Central Africa is purely heathen and negro. The languages of the southern half of the Continent are in a measure cognate. The Congo language has been reduced to writing. A recent letter from Dr. Sims, who is stationed 250 miles above Stanley Pool, reports the return of Mr. Stanley from a five months' journey into the interior. He brought with him two lads rescued from the slavers; one of them he gave to Dr. Sims, and the other to the head of the Baptist Mission. So the language spoken at the very centre of the Continent is now providentially within reach. An interesting sketch was given by Mr. Guinness, of the method of getting hold from these native boys of the language, as discovered during his studies in the Congo tongue. If we get hold of the idea that missionary work in Africa is only just beginning, we are in a better position to pray for its extension.

Having sketched in outline the great Missionary epochs in the past history of the Christian era, the Apostolic, the Missions of the Imperial Church in the middle ages, and the modern developments of evangelism, Mr. Guinness declared that the great heathen nations were not to be converted to Christ during the existing dispensation. If that were laid down as the teaching of Scripture he should feel inclined to turn infidel. The conversion had been all the other way, according to the facts; instead of the Church converting the world the world has been converting the Church. All the European nations have fearfully apostatised, and their present condition gives ground for the deepest forebodings. He was convinced that the heathen nations could only be thoroughly evangelised in a future dispensation. Wherever the Christian Church has gone she has been blessed, but apostate Christianity has gone with it, if not before it. He was in doubt as to whether infidelity or Christianity was making the greater progress now-a-days. This only confirmed his faith in the Word of God in which it is all foretold. We are living in the last days of this dispensation, and we are near the great "wind up." The Lord meanwhile is gathering out from all nations a people for Himself. We see cause for the quickening of hope and also of effort. The time is short in which we can work. Let us be up and doing, so much the more as the time of the end is at hand. Let us gather in the sheaves while the fading light still lingers.

With this solemn admonition—probably to some a startling one—ringing in its ears, the Conference broke up. Some brief words of acknowledgment came first from Mr. White to God for his goodness throughout the proceedings, and to many friends for their kind aid.

[Pressure on our space prevents us from giving in this issue any report of the interesting proceedings of Wednesday morning and afternoon, and Thursday afternoon; we hope to give a brief resumé of the addresses next week.]

Mr. Holland's Sixtieth Birthday.

THURSDAY evening, March 20, was a time of unusual interest at George-yard, Whitechapel; occasion was then taken to celebrate the sixtieth birthday of Mr. Geo. Holland. How thoroughly he has won the hearts of those among whom he has patiently laboured for the last thirty years can only be known by those intimately acquainted with the work; but it was in a small degree evidenced on Thursday evening by the crowd of poor men, women, and girls that filled the large room. Many of these had contributed from their poverty to obtain, with the help of some of the teachers, a handsome family Bible, an armchair, and a walnut stationery case. These, with a writing-table, the gift of several other workers, were presented to Mr. Holland.

The enjoyment of the evening reached its highest when Lady Ashburton announced that she was the bearer of a present from Her Majesty the Queen, who had sent Mr. Holland a copy of her new book, "More Leaves from a Life in the Highlands," with her autograph written in it. This called forth a burst of loyal feeling, and the National Anthem was enthusiastically sung.

Mr. Holland touched the hearts of all present by his acknowledgment of these gifts, and especially by his heartfelt ascription of praise to Him who had given him strength and grace to carry on the work thus far.

KEEPING FESTIVAL WITH LONDON BUTCHERS.

LAST Tuesday week the Metropolitan Tabernacle seemed in some danger of losing its grand leading position as a place of public worship. Vans were unloading provisions in quantity and variety, such as one might have thought would only be required for the commissariat of a popular dining-hall and coffee palace. Tea and its trimmings, under whose gentle influences sociality reigns in Mr. Spurgeon's congregation, were very largely represented; but consignments of cold round, brisket, and pork chops, with capacious hampers of cooked carrot, and piles of loaves to match, gave promise of an extraordinary outburst of serious eating, unusual at Newington Butts. The information, curtly given to the inquiring stranger as to such ongoings, was "The butchers are coming." This was deemed a sufficient reminder of an annual event of which this was to be the twentieth anniversary.

For the sake of the uninitiated we may state that twenty years ago, when Mr. Henry Varley was a member of the trade to which he still good-humouredly claims to belong, the spiritual condition of the working butchers of Newgate-market was laid upon his heart. He invited a hundred of them to Notting-hill, where his residence was and is. About two dozen accepted the invitation, and did justice to the creature comforts provided; but we would rather not say how many remained to listen to the Gospel message. The following year, however, Mr. Varley repeated the experiment, and received greater encouragement. So the meeting has grown from year to year, until nothing less than the accommodation which the Newington Tabernacle affords is sufficient now to provide for it.

We must pass by the material portion of the feast, merely remarking that nearly sixteen hundred men, besides 250 masters and their friends, sat down to a substantial tea. On the company assembling upstairs it was found that the spacious building was well filled.

Mr. Tritton took the chair, and gave the men a most kindly welcome. After prayer and a portion of Scripture had been read,

Mr. Varley took the floor. He knew that blessing had come to many through these meetings. Not only had men given up drinking, swearing, and gambling, but some had sought and obtained pardon through our Lord and Saviour. As a further step in the moral elevation of the men of the Metropolitan Meat Market, there were hopes that the Corporation of the City of London would grant an upper room at Smithfield as a general club-house for the trade. He asserted, from an experience of thirty-four years as a total abstainer, that their work could be better performed, and their character elevated, by signing the pledge that evening. He also referred to gambling as a besetting sin of many before him, and without respect to any rank or condition he bluntly asserted that a betting man was a thief. To part with or accept money on bets where there was no value given or received was an unrighteous transaction. He cried shame to the daily papers which affected to be teachers of the public, and yet at the same time helped in the demoralisation of their readers by keeping "prophets" on the course to advise as to how bets might be safely made.

The next speaker, Mr. Richard Weaver, the evangelist, said that perhaps it might be considered impudent in "a country gawky" like himself, to come to London to teach his betters; but he knew something of the love of God in his heart, and he could say to others, "The Lord hath done great things for me, whereof I am glad." Temperance was a grand thing, but the Gospel of the Lord Jesus was better; with it he had a merry heart all the day. The way to treat a drunkard was not to speak of him as if he were a despicable object, but to take him kindly by the hand and lead him to the Saviour, who could cure him of his drink-thirst and give him of the living water, which if a man drink, he will never thirst. After some personal testimony to the goodness of God, Richard concluded by singing a hymn, asking all to join in the chorus:—

"Come, come, come to Christ and be saved:
Oh! plunge into the fountain,
Christ died on Calvary's mountain,
On Him the sins of fallen ones were laid."

After the announcement by Mr. Varley that further meetings would be arranged to give Mr. Weaver opportunities to speak to the men, Mr. Olney closed the meeting with prayer, and the butchers went away to meditate—we trust to act—upon what they had heard.

Miss Whately's Schools in Cairo.

DEAR SIR,—May I again ask the attention of those of your readers who take a kind interest in my sister, Miss M. L. Whately's work in Cairo? The schools are fuller than they have ever been, there is an average daily attendance of over 600 (including boys and girls), and at least half of these are Moslems. All receive the same instructions and are trained to know and understand the Word of Life.

But these increasing numbers have brought increased anxiety, for all her class-rooms are so overcrowded that it is likely to be actually prejudicial to health, and when the hot weather comes (a time which is now very near), the effects will be very hurtful. An additional room is absolutely necessary if she would escape sickness in her school.

Another scarcely less pressing want is a proper operating room for her Medical Mission. The cases of eye disease increase as the weather grows warmer, and in very many instances an operation is the only chance of saving or restoring the sight. But both of these objects require money, however carefully and economically they are done, and her funds are very low.

If those who are interested both in the souls and in the bodily sufferings of the people of this poor down-trodden country would make a little effort to raise the moderate sum required for these additional rooms on her Mission premises, a great load of anxiety would be relieved. She has great encouragement in the willingness of the patients to listen to the Word of God, and the evident impression made on them by the kindness shown them.

Contributions will be thankfully received by Mrs. Whately, 21, Belmont-park, Lee, S.E.; or Mr. J. H. Tritton, 54, Lombard-street, E.C. As my sister has some materials on the spot, she thinks the building can be done, with strict economy, for £150.

My sister wishes to add a notice to the kind friends who have helped her with contributions to the Soldiers' Coffee-room. The Generals of the army of occupation wished to take the management of the whole into their own hands, and therefore it is quite removed from her control. If those friends who wish to help would send their subscriptions to the Army Scripture Readers' Society, they would be certain to be well employed.—I remain, dear Sir, faithfully yours, E. Jane Whately.

Cairo, March 10.

POLICEMEN IN NORWICH.—A good work has for a long time been carried on here among the policemen, by a lady who resides in the cathedral precincts, by whose instrumentality many members of the force have been brought to know Jesus as their Saviour. At her invitation Mr. Algernon Coote, as a representative of the Christian Policemen's Association, has been to Norwich for the purpose of addressing the constables. A meeting with this object was held at Earlham Hall, under the presidency of the Mayor of Norwich (Dr. Eade), the men having previously (through the kindness of the Rev. W. N. and Mrs. Ripley) partaken of a bountiful repast. Mr. Coote's exhortations were listened to with respectful attention. Through the courtesy of the Chief Constable at Yarmouth a short service was also held for the policemen in that town, several of whom were invited guests at Earlham Hall with the Norwich men on the previous day.

LORD'S DAY OBSERVANCE.

CONFERENCE AT EXETER HALL.

AN important Conference on this subject was opened on Wednesday last week in Lower Exeter Hall, under the presidency of the Earl of Shaftesbury. It was attended by delegates from various societies formed for the purpose of preventing Sabbath desecration. The President said: I believe that if a poll on the question were taken, and if the people of this country were asked whether they were in favour of this opening, man by man, there would be an overwhelming majority in favour of preserving the Day of Rest.

Mr. C. Hill read a paper on "The Working Classes and the Sunday Opening of Museums, &c.," in which he showed that so far as the wishes of the working classes have been expressed, they are not favourable to the opening of museums, &c., on the Lord's-day. In support of this he referred to the test furnished by petitions to Parliament. In provincial towns working people had signed thousands of petitions against, but not for Sunday opening. A telling point in Mr. Hill's paper was his pointing out that many of the "Societies" said to be in favour of the opening of museums were not bonâ fide working men's societies.

In the unavoidable absence of the Rev. G. H. Tomkins, of Weston-super-Mare, his paper on the same topic was read by the Rev. W. W. Cox. Claiming the Sabbath as the heritage of human nature by grant of its "faithful Creator," he argued that it should be for ever a part of the liberty of the sons of England to be their own masters on the Sabbath-day, that Christ may be their Master. If, he said, we give way as to a part of our Sunday we can never regain our true ground again.

Rev. W. Pope read a paper on this subject, in which he proceeded to show that it could not be urged that Sunday pleasure-seeking was refreshing rest, nor that Sunday museums would in the least degree check Sunday drinking, but rather the reverse. He concluded by affirming that the real point at issue was whether the Christian life, the mental vigour, and the physical strength of the nation were worth preserving. The corruption of the best was the worst corruption. The Lord's Day was the best and holiest of all the seven, but if perverted it became the worst and most destructive.

At the evening session, Mr. J. C. Stevenson, M.P., who presided, said the very name given to the Sabbath by Christians—the Lord's Day—showed that it was deserving the most careful guardianship. His experience was that there was no prosperity to be gained by engagements on the Lord's Day. He was satisfied that that business would prosper best which did not trespass on the consciences of those carrying it on. On the banks of the Tyne he had often been distressed to see the liberties taken with the Sabbath by shipowners.

Mr. Alfred Sargant read a paper, in which he gave practical hints for the closing of public-houses on the Lord's Day. He said the opening of such houses was exceptional, partial, unnecessary, and presented great temptation to the working classes who, on that day, had money in their pockets and their time on their hands. Ministers and clergymen might preach, but so long as this temptation remained unchecked, so long would people be found to be absent from religious worship. In answering objections, he said Scotland had clearly shown that Sunday closing is practicable. The cry that the poor man would be robbed of his beer was simply sentimental.

Rev. Canon Stowell also read a paper, in which he said it was the existence of this traffic in intoxicants which, more than any other, led to the desecration of the Lord's Day, which filled the streets with such sights that (to use the language of one of the Homilies), "It doth too evidently appear that God is more dishonoured, and the devil better served on the Sunday, than upon all the days in the week besides." The public-house was one of the principal causes of the absence of the masses from public worship, and was the acknowledged cause of vast numbers of workmen being unfitted or indisposed to resume their work on Monday, and sometimes on one or more of the succeeding days.

Mr. J. Whitehead contributed a paper on which an account was given of the dimensions of the evil of general shopping, as it exists in the metropolis. The last returns of the London City Mission showed that during the year ending March 1882, no fewer than 10,453 shops were found open on the Lord's Day, out of 38,032 visited. It had been hoped that the demolition of old rookeries in which Sunday shopping was carried on would diminish the evil; but although this had been so in one or two cases, in others it had simply pushed the trading into adjoining streets. It was added that 95 per cent. of the shopkeepers were urgently unanimous in desiring the suppression of Sunday trading.

SECOND DAY.

On Thursday morning Sir John Kennaway, Bart., M.P., presided at the opening of the Conference. He believed that this movement in connection with the Lord's Day would be of particular use at the present time, when a special endeavour was being made to open museums. They resisted these attempts both from the plain point of duty, physically, as well as from a religious point of view.

Rev. Dr. Gritton read a paper which opened with a reference to the magnitude of the operations of our postal service. The English Post-office does recognise the claims of the Lord's Day; the existing Lord's Day work, nevertheless, kept about 23,500 persons employed, some of them doing the same amount of duty as on other days. He urged that regulations made to secure a measure of rest for the officers actually working on Sunday should be more earnestly insisted on than they often are at present by local postmasters and surveyors.

Rev. Canon Hoare read a paper on the subject of "The Sabbath and the Young." There was no doubt the subject was one of considerable difficulty, and the reason was perfectly obvious. Young people are full of fun and energy, and spend six days partly in work and partly in amusements. The question had to be decided in what way the Sabbath should be made the happiest of the week, and leave behind such a blessed memory as would remain when those young people as old men and women were sinking down in a venerable old age to the grave. There were two principles to be carefully borne in mind. The happiness of the day would not be secured by breaking down its holiness. A second principle was equally clear if they wished to see the union of delight and holiness; they should remember that they were not carving blocks of wood, but were concerned with the most vigorous, active-minded, and intelligent young creatures in creation. In speaking of the legitimate enjoyments of the Lord's Day, he said one source of delight was sacred music. In many families there was a beautiful blending of voices, and young people were able to rise above the ordinary hymn to the enjoyment of lovely harmonies and soul-elevating pieces of some of the best composers. What could possibly be a more delightful Sunday recreation for a family? The speaker also directed attention to the hallowed joy of the sacred hours spent in the sanctuary.

At the afternoon meeting Mr. Abel Smith, M.P., said the subject to be brought under their notice was of great importance—railway work, omnibus, tramcar, and cab traffic. He thought if anyone was a slave in this country, these men, who laboured both on Sundays and week-days, were such. There was no doubt that many who used cabs and the railways did not think of the number of those whom they deprived of their lawful Sabbath rest.

Rev. Dr. Gritton, in a paper upon English Railway Traffic on the Lord's Day, gave the results of careful researches into the working of various lines, made in 1877. The ordinary Sunday traffic on English railways is far in excess of any demand which can possibly be defended on the plea of necessity or of mercy, and caused many thousands of men in various grades of railway employment to lose their day of rest. The provision of special facilities for travelling on the Lord's Day was a still more glaring sin, and a yet more cruel wrong inflicted on the servants of the various companies. The special excursion trains on the Lord's Day, at fares ranging from one-half to one-third of ordinary charges—such trains being multiplied on the great festivals of the Christian Church—were disgraceful saturnalia, most dishonouring to God, and unspeakably injurious to thousands.

Mr. Robert Mackintosh, Glasgow, presented a paper upon the Omnibus, Tramcar, and Cab Traffic. He proceeded to show that to run tramway cars, &c., on the Sabbath in order to provide for every possible contingency that may arise in the way of necessity or mercy, is to make the exception override and set aside the law. In a working class district, at Bridgeton, Glasgow, no cars were seen on the Sabbath, and though various attempts had been made to enlist the working classes they had not moved, and never would move, in behalf of Sabbath labour.

Resolutions were moved at each sitting of the Conference embodying the views of the various papers and addresses.

CONTINENTAL AND FOREIGN NOTES.

REVIVALS

of considerable extent and influence are reported in our foreign exchanges—at Georgetown, British Guiana; Waterbury, Vermont; Louisville, Iowa; Bellefontaine, O., &c.

ENGLISH WORKMEN IN PARIS.

Some English friends of Miss Leigh's work in Paris have been putting forth special efforts on behalf of the numbers of English workmen who are employed in that city. Tea-meetings have been held for them, and their interest and appreciation are unbounded; many, too, have donned the blue ribbon. There is great need for a larger Mission Hall that they may be able to enjoy the privileges of the Gospel, and an English Sabbath.

JAMAICA.

Mr. J. R. Townsend writes on January 25, from Cedar Valley, Jamaica, to the New York Weekly Witness: "My wife and I are here as missionaries, under the auspices of the Society of Friends of Iowa. Our Mission-station is about twenty miles from Kingston, over a very rough and mountainous road, most of the way only passable to single file horse or footmen. The field for Mission work is 'white unto harvest, and the labourers are few.' We think we shall enjoy the work, as the people seem to make us welcome and attend meetings and Sabbath-school very well."

NEW YORK.

At the recent anniversary of Jerry McAulay's Mission, Mr. W. E. Dodge, jun., said:—"I do not believe there are any greater miracles on record in the Word than the miracles that are seen in this work. Nothing can be more convincing of the holding power of God. I am reminded for the moment of a little anecdote that illustrates this work. In the lower part of this city there is a work carried on similar to this. A gentleman who stood outside looking toward the building asked, 'What do they do here, anyway?' A bright-eyed man stepped up and answered: 'I came here some time ago, poor, sick, friendless, and an outcast, deprived of home and separated from wife and children. Now I have enough to eat and wear, have good health, plenty of good friends, have a good happy home, have been reunited to wife and children, and am a happy Christian man, with an appreciation of what has been done for me, and a heart full of thankfulness. I'm what they make here!'"

STEP BY STEP IN SWEDEN.—In the recent notice of Madame Ramsay's Mission work we inadvertently mentioned it as being in Spain instead of Sweden. She asks us to add that she has still thirteen afflicted orphans to care for wholly at Wilhelmsro. Some of them seem capable of higher education than her home can provide. Madame Ramsay's present address is 3, Alexandra Villas, Brighton.

RESCUE WORK.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

AN esteemed correspondent in this place writes to us as follows:—

"Your readers will be interested in hearing of a meeting we had last week in our Penitentiary here. Mr. Spencer-Walton, who is holding a Mission amongst the members of our Young Women's Christian Association, Captain Robertson, and myself, went up about five o'clock, and found them ranged round the room, expecting us.

"Mr. Walton sang the hymn, 'Where is my wandering child to-night?' all joining in the chorus. After prayer he spoke to them on the wonderful love of God, as brought out in John iii. 16. It was a sight never to be forgotten. One after another the poor weary hearts seemed melted and broken down, and they sobbed aloud. When they were asked to hold up their hands if they would take Jesus from that hour as their Saviour, only two, out of about thirty, were not held up. God was with us of a truth.

"We have been holding meetings in the Young Women's Christian Association every evening for a week, and at every meeting many have professed faith in Christ. The Bible meetings have been largely attended. Christians have been quickened, and have entered into a fuller blessing. We have had quite a revival in our town."

NEW YORK.

"New York, like all large cities," says the Weekly Witness of that city, "is alluring to young people, and hundreds come to it to have a good time. They are drawn on from one step to another, many escaping unharmed, while many others are submerged by the prevailing vices. Saloons, dance-halls, gambling-hells, and places of evil resort are being constantly supplied by new arrivals. Amusements are pursued with avidity, and too often continue till they end in moral and physical ruin.

"There are counteracting influences employed to remedy the evil, prominent among which is the all-night missionary. He begins his work in the evening, continues all night, visiting the dance-halls, drinking saloons, and such places, for the purpose of rescuing their victims. The following extracts from his report disclose the nature of this work:—

"A young woman who had just moved to our city with her mother, fascinated by the sights on the Bowery, had stayed out until twelve o'clock at night. On the fourth night our missionary met her in a concert and beer-garden, where she had been invited by some young men. She had taken some drink, but influenced by the warning voice of our missionary, abruptly left their company and returned home. Her mother was deeply moved at her daughter's narrow escape. Two girls, aged respectively sixteen and seventeen, had been put out of their home by drunken parents. They were found wandering about the streets by our missionary, who provided both home and employment for them. Two others were found in a den of iniquity, crying bitterly. They had been induced by an older girl to visit the place, and plans for their ruin had been laid, which had been happily frustrated by the timely aid of our missionary.

"A young man of good family, while on a spree, was drawn into a saloon in Mulberry-street, robbed and stripped of his clothes; he was rescued by our missionary. On a Sunday evening, while the service was going on, a woman stepped up to the desk, declaring her purpose to amend her life. She was removed to a place of safety. This woman belongs to a family of culture and refinement, but, like others, was betrayed and deserted. Lately we buried a poor girl who died on the street, and must have been sent to Potter's Field but for our Mission. At the funeral service a large number of poor lost sisters were present, to take the last look at one who, in her youth, had indeed been beautiful, but sin had completed its work of ruin. Let us hope that the solemn lessons taught at the funeral service may not be lost on the poor souls who were present, and going the same way which 'leads to death.'

"Mr. Weeks, the superintendent of the Mission (42, Baxter-street), offers to parents every assistance possible in recovering missing members of their family who may have come to this city in the pursuit of pleasure, but fallen victims to wicked devices."

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Camelford.—A very successful three weeks' Mission has been conducted at Camelford by Mr. T. Moreman, the blind evangelist, from Kingswood. On several occasions the chapel has been crowded. Many have professed conversion.

Bristol.—A fortnight's Mission has been concluded at Kingsland Congregational Church, Bristol. The Mission preacher was Mr. Edward Hurditch, of Swindon. It is felt that by God's blessing a deep impression has been made on the neighbourhood.

Kirtlington.—A week's Gospel services, conducted by Mr. John Harris, of the Evangelisation Society, have been held in this place and neighbourhood. Mr. Harris was for many years a very popular and respected local preacher for many miles round in this district.

Dublin.—Rev. T. E. Cleworth commences a Mission at Bagot-street Church, Dublin, on Sunday, the 30th. The incumbent of this church is the Rev. Henry Dening, formerly missionary of the Church Parochial Mission Society. Revs. J. H. Berguer, Dr. Morgan, A. R. D'Arcy, J. Simpson, and J. Stephens, will take part in this Mission.

Rhynie, N.B.—Mrs. Ferrier and Miss Grierson have just left Rhynie, after conducting a series of very successful meetings, which were well attended, both in the village and surrounding district. Many who seldom go within hearing of the proclamation of the Gospel came to hear these ladies, and not a few have "passed from death to life." Before coming to Rhynie these workers had glorious times in Gardenstown, Banffshire.

The Edinboro' Castle, Limehouse, E.—The blessing which marked Richard Weaver's visit continues to flow, and there can be no doubt that since the re-opening of the new building in February over 400 persons have thereby been brought to a knowledge of Christ. Dr. Barnardo has been preaching to large audiences three times each Sunday. He asks that much prayer may be made for a larger outpouring of the Holy Spirit in connection with these services.

Requests for Prayer.

PRAYER.—For a man who is a slave to drink, and is now serving a term of imprisonment for neglecting his children.——For blessing on Bible-readings in a lodging-house for tramps on Sundays.——For blessing on Gospel services by Mr. W. Nott, in Henrietta-street Chapel, Brunswick-square.——For a company of German pastors and men of science going on a tour through Eastern lands, that they all may be blessed of God, especially a young Swede.——For Christians in Germany.——For the conversion of a Jewish family who are shaken in their faith.——For Gospel services by Mr. Opie Rodway, at Caldecot, March 29 to April 1.

A SALE OF WORK will be held in Miss Daniell's Soldiers' Home, Plymouth, for the benefit of that Home, on April 9 and 10 (D.V.). Contributions of work, china, or paintings will be gratefully received by Mrs. Anderson, care of Colonel Anderson, R.A., 5, Albemarle Villas, Stoke, Devonport.

COVENT-GARDEN PORTERS.—A very interesting and exceedingly hopeful work amongst the porters of Govent-garden Market was commenced on Tuesday, 11th inst., at the Stanhope-street Mission Hall, Clare Market. About eighty men were invited to a men's tea-party. The company gathered together showed plainly that the kindness of the host and of the workers was appreciated in no small degree. Mr. Burson, of Exeter Hall, and Ned Wright delivered addresses, which were listened to with rapt attention and earnestness. The work at this Mission Hall, which includes nightly services, mothers' meetings, Sunday-school, &c., is carried on by the members of the Exeter Hall Y.M.C.A. The visible results from the preaching of the Word and from visiting the afflicted have been most cheering.

Prayer.

OH tell Him all: a father loves to listen
To everything his children have to say,
His heart would grieve, if one among the number
With cold indifference should turn away.

Great mystery of prayer! unsolved, unfathomed,
Excepting in the Fatherhood of God,
Forget we that, then doubt and dark misgiving
Creep in, and reign, where faith hath meekly trod.

Yes, "God is love;" He loves to hear our voices:
In Christ we share the riches of his grace;
He loves to fold his arms of comfort round us,
To let us nestle in the children's place.

He loves to answer prayer, though not, it may be
In just the way that we should think the best:
But in his own prospective perfect judgment
He gives the blessings, and withholds the rest.

Then let us trust Him; let us take the comfort;
Oh! let us lean upon our Father's care;
Life may seem dark at times—events mysterious,
But once at Home, all shadows vanish there!

Mission Appeals.

Miss A. Pearse asks for periodicals, hymn-books, &c., for supplying bags which are given to the sailors and fishermen who leave the port of Plymouth. Address: 5, Bedford-terrace, Plymouth.

Wanted, about fifty Bibles or Testaments for distribution among navvies. Over sixty have been given. Sixteen new applications to-day. Address: Rev. John Paterson, U. P. Manse, Airdrei, N.B.

The Sheltering Home, Liverpool, for Destitute Children, is greatly in need of funds for housing and feeding the numbers of little waifs who seek for admission. Help will be received by Mrs. Birt, Byrom-street, Liverpool.

Peckham.—Rev. S. Rogers having given up his work at Reigate to work among the poor of London, asks help to build a hall, an excellent site for which has already been secured. £1500 is needed. Address: Gordon-road, Peckham, S.E.

Willesden.—A good work is going on amongst railway employés at Willesden by means of an open-air Mission conducted by Christian guards, engine-drivers, &c. Help in tracts, books, or money will be gladly acknowledged by Mr. H. Osborne, 89, Railway Cottages Willesden.

Liverpool Midnight Mission.—This agency, which puts forth strenuous efforts on behalf of fallen girls, is now in need of funds, as well as of sufficient accommodation. Many applicants are perforce turned away. Help will be gladly received by Mr. M. M. Thomson, 3, The Atlantic, Liverpool.

Brierley.—Rev. John Thomas, Drybrook, Gloucestershire, appeals for help towards the erection of a Mission-room at this place, where he has held cottage meetings for over two years. The inhabitants are very poor, and there are no opportunities for public worship other than these meetings within some miles.

A Coffee-house for Walsall-wood.—We started a coffee-house here in 1880 to try and counteract the evil effects of sixteen public-houses in the place. The parish is in a colliery and brick-making district, with no one of means to help. God has blessed our efforts, I am thankful to say, for the good of the men and young men of the place. Many have been rescued from intemperance, and are now members of our Bible-classes. We have a deficiency of £50 for which I am solely responsible, and unless I can obtain this help I must close the house on Lady-day. It has been of so much use that I feel I must make a special effort to continue it, and appeal to those to whom the Lord has given means for help. My own income is so small that I cannot do more than I have done.—Thos. Reakes, Walsall-wood Vicarage.

"THE CHRISTIAN" TRACT FUND.—Dear Sirs,—Would you kindly oblige me with some tracts, Heralds of Mercy, cheap addresses by Mr. Moody, &c., for distribution among passengers and crew, on board one of the mail-boats trading between Australia and London? It is not only for the people on board, but for men at Malta, Port Said, Suez, Aden, Colombo, King George's Sound, Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney, &c.—Yours faithfully in the Lord Jesus, Chas. F. Johnson.

Letters to the Editor.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

Dear Sir,—Feeling confident of the thorough sympathy of your readers with all engaged in the work of the precious Saviour, may I suggest that if each reader would kindly glance at your advertisement list, and remember daily in prayer the occasional advertisers for a sphere of service, their hearts would be lightened, and success would be secured. And I think you will agree with me, that readers who will kindly take this trouble may often find themselves in a position to direct the Lord's servants to openings, by corresponding with them, and helping them in the outlook.—Yours very truly,

A Worker.

THE SALE OF LIQUOR TO MINORS.

Dear Sir,—The correspondent to whom you refer in "Notes and Comments" this week is, I am sorry to say, mistaken in regard to the law relating to the sale of liquor to children. I was labouring under a similar mistake until Dr. Dawson Burns put me right. Any person selling distilled spirits to any person apparently under sixteen years of age is liable to a penalty of 20s. for the first offence, and 40s. for a second and every succeeding offence. This, however, only applies to spirits sold for consumption on the premises, and not to spirits which the child may take away, nor are fermented liquors forbidden to be sold to children, or consumed by them on the premises.

You see the law allows plenty of scope for the manufacture of drunkards.—Yours truly,

John E. Jack.

100, Ambler-road, N., March 21.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Dear Sir,—Your correspondent, the Rev. J. Linnell, concludes a letter somewhat laudatory of the steps which Mr. Guest, Vicar of Christ Church, has seen fit to take with regard to his curates, with a challenge to ministers of any denomination to say that, under the circumstances, they could have acted otherwise.

I am a minister of no denomination, but, perhaps, as a simple servant of the Master, my reply may do as well. The letter is an eminently transparent one, and I am sorry Mr. Linnell has the questionable taste to insinuate that because the victim, Mr. Smith, has not, as alleged, got on well with other vicars, it is impossible he should with Mr. Guest.

But I fancy Mr. Linnell's saddest misapprehension is to be found in this sentence: "Was Mr. Guest to sit still and see them (his curates) empty his church?" Yes, most assuredly. If the curates preached the truth of God, let them do so fearless of man, and whether their audience will hear or whether they will forbear.

Does Mr. Linnell suppose that the Divine blessing must necessarily rest upon a full church; or, worse, does he suppose that the same blessing will be extended to ministers who, against their consciences, cry "peace," when, within a few yards of them, thousands of gallons of soul and body-destroying liquor is in course of preparation? And if Mr. Linnell was, as he says, an abstainer, why, during his eight years' ministry in Burton-on-Trent, did he not lift up his voice against what he must hold to be a crying sin? If men and women are driven from a church because the Gospel of love and right is held forth, let them go, for they are not members upon whom the everlasting Church may reckon.

A visitor to the House of Commons the other night, I could hardly repress a smile as I observed the complacent manner in which a prominent brewer advocated plenty of water for the sanitary condition of the poor of London. It would not do for him to acquaint his left hand with his right hand's doings, and it was, I think, a striking instance of how desperately the heart of man may deceive itself.

So Mr. Guest may deem a matter of passing moment the wholesale manufacture of strong drink; but if his curates, on the other hand, imagine that it affects, directly or indirectly, the eternal safety of thousands of souls, he might surely extend to them the liberty of utterance he expects himself. We sorely need Daniels to war against atheism, unscriptural doctrine, and social abuses. Why is Mr. Moody so vastly used of God? Chiefly, I think, because he is a Daniel.—Faithfully yours,

C. M. Crocker Pennell.

Islington.

MR. WM. NOBLE has conducted a brief Gospel Temperance Mission at Hove, Brighton. His earnest and telling addresses were well received, and a good many pledges were taken.

Notices.

The address of Miss F. Hastings, of the Whitecross Mission, is now 4, Fulham-place, Harrow-row, W.

We understand that Mr. George Hughes's connection with the Y.W.C.A. as organising secretary ceases on March 29. His address for the present will be 48, Mildmay-road, N. He leaves with the best wishes of his committee, and having high testimonials we trust some useful work will soon find so useful a helper.

Members of the South London Choir and others who are not otherwise engaged, and would be willing to assist in the singing at open-air meetings in Lyham-road, Brixton, on Sunday afternoons, at 3 o'clock, are invited kindly to communicate by letter with M. W. Nash, jun., 65, Tasman-road, Clapham-rise, S.W.

One who has the privilege of conducting Bible-classes for working men would be grateful for information respecting any societies or associations where earnest, godly men are needed for evangelistic work; men who, although not blessed with education and money, yet have an intense desire to spend their lives in the service of Christ, seeking to win souls to Him.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

PHTHISIS.—CASE of MISS SUSAN NASH,

Then living at Linden's-grove Park, Camberwell. Some time in last Autumn, by the recommendation of Rev. W. V. Smith, B.M., of Evesham, she consulted me. All symptoms of incipient Phthisis were manifest. The following letter, dated November 20, expresses the benefit she received:—

"I feel I ought to write you. Words fail to express the gratitude I owe you for your advice, so kindly given under the recommendation of Rev. W. V. Smith. When I came to see you I thought it would be a serious illness for me. I have lost all pain and every other symptom now. With many thanks, I am, yours ever gratefully, Susan Nash, Somerville Aston, The Broadway, Worcestershire."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

J. THEOBALD & CO.'S TELESCOPES.

IMMENSE SALE AT SPECIAL PRICES.—There is every prospect, owing to the extraordinary mildness of the season and the fact of Easter falling late this year, that thousands of holiday seekers, who usually spend Bank Holiday about town, will take the opportunity of having a day in the country. On the summit of some lofty hill, or on a sea-side promenade, how often do we hear the exclamation, "What a splendid view we could get if we only had a good glass!" and the owner of a telescope near at hand is looked at with envious and longing eyes. Many a holiday loses half its charm because the beauties of the surrounding country cannot be taken in for want of a telescope. Every one can now have a glass at a reasonable price. We have made arrangements with the largest and best manufacturers to supply us at far below ordinary quotations, in immense quantities, and for cash payments. A single Telescope can be had at wholesale price. All orders must be sent within twenty-eight days (except from foreign customers), and be accompanied by Coupon.—As many as 957 of these Telescopes have been sold in a single day.

Our Telescopes are extensively used by the British and Indian Army the Navy, Government, &c., and have been largely exported to every part of the World.

THE RENOWNED COMBINATION TELESCOPES.

MARVELLOUS COMBINATION TELESCOPES.
EXTRAORDINARY PRICES.

Now is the best time for astronomical observations. If our population only properly understood the magnificent glory of the heavens, and the sublime beauty which lies just hid in the skies above them, there is not a household but would possess a Telescope, by means of which these wonders would lie open to their gaze.

The eminent astronomer, R. A. Proctor, Esq., speaking of our Combination Telescope, says:—"It is an excellent Telescope—a perfect marvel for the price. It comes sharply and clearly into focus, has a uniform field, and gives clear and good definition." There remains now not a civilised portion of the globe in which our Telescopes are not used.

The instrument, without the additional parts, has six best lenses, of such remarkable definition that it will distinguish hills at twenty-five miles, flags at twenty, windows at ten, and time by a church clock at four to five miles' distance. In addition to this, there is a separate powerful astronomical eye-piece which can be attached, and enables the owner to examine the stars, Jupiter with his four moons, and, by adding the sun-glass, also supplied, the spots in the sun. In clear weather the astronomical eye-piece can be used instead of the day one for ordinary purposes, thus giving much greater power, as, while the day eye-piece magnifies 146 times superficial, the astronomical one magnifies 324. The Telescope is made with three brass draws and black morocco body, shuts up from 17 to 6 inches, and is enclosed with the extra parts in two neat cases, and will be sent carriage free for 12s. 6d. No 2 size, opening to 24 inches, closing to 8¼, object-glass 16 lines, giving much more extended view, far clearer and longer definition, and less trying to the eyes, astronomical eye-piece also half as large again, and much greater power, 22s. 6d., carriage free. Or No. 3 size, having 19-line object-glass, closing to 10, opening to 27 inches, an intensely powerful glass, specially recommended, with very powerful astronomical eye-piece, 29s., carriage free. Owing to continual inquiries for a still larger glass, we have just got ready a No. 4 size, with 22-line object-glass, which naturally gives a much wider field, and is also of still greater power, and for astronomical purposes especially much more effective. This instrument is no longer when closed than the No. 3, being made with four drawers, and when fully opened is 30 inches long, and with astronomical eye-piece also of extra power in proportion. Price, carriage free, £2 2s. We specially recommend the No. 3 and 4 sizes. These will divide Zeta in Ursa Major, show Saturn's ring, many double stars, and some clusters.

The TOURIST COMBINATION TELESCOPE, made of the very best selected Lenses, of extraordinary clearness of definition, thirty-five miles' range. Black oxidised Drawers, Leather Caps and Straps, Astronomical Eye-piece of great power, 19-line Object Glasses, £3 6s.; 22-line, £3 18s.; carriage free. Carriage to India on No. 1 size, 2s.; on 22s. 6d. size, 4s. extra; on all others, 5s. To all other parts, 5s. extra on any size, except to Canada and America, when 10s. extra is charged.

THE ACME ENSIGN TELESCOPE.

Each Telescope is made of brass, and is exquisitely finished in every part; has six lenses of the very best quality, and such remarkable clearness of definition that it will distinguish hills at twenty-five miles, flags at twenty miles, windows at ten, and time by a church clock at four and five miles distance. The Telescope is made with three brass drawers, so that it can be shut up from 17in. to 6in., and carried in the pocket.

This Telescope is invaluable to tourists, persons travelling, holiday seekers, &c., and is offered by us at a price which places it within the reach of all.

In a neat case, carriage free, 8s. 10d.; or without flags, 7s. 10d. Much larger size, 16-line object glass (no flags), 15s. 6d., carriage free.

These Telescopes are made specially for us, and cannot be obtained elsewhere.

A QUARTO VOLUME OF MUSIC AND WORDS,

BY

IRA D. SANKEY,

AND

JAMES McGRANAHAN.

Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

This Volume is issued in response to numerous requests for many of the pieces it contains. It is largely composed of NEW SACRED SONGS, DUETS, CHORUSES, and ANTHEMS, which have met with much acceptance at the hands of the public. The Authors hope that in this collected form the volume will prove useful in Christian work.

Or, The Profit and Pleasure of Bible Study.

BY GEORGE F. PENTECOST, M.A.

With Introductions by Rev. JOSEPH COOK and Rev. J. H. VINCENT, D.D.

"The Author is well-known in this country, as well as in America, as an able and successful evangelist and preacher. The book is the well-arranged product of a fresh and vigorous mind; steeped in biblical thought and spirit: and is fitted in no ordinary measure to give clear views of the scope and purpose of the Bible; to confirm faith in its Divine origin and authority; and to guide to such a use of it as may build up in the reader, both in holiness and comfort, and in zeal and usefulness, unto Eternal Life. While admirably fitted for young converts, no Christian can read it without both stimulus and profit."—The Outlook, Feb. 1, 1884.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

MISSION WORK IN SPAIN.

RENS, NEAR BARCELONA.

Pastor, Senor ANT. MARTINEZ.

Sunday attendance at services, 120 and over. Eighty children in the Schools. There is now pressing need for Mission premises, otherwise the work must cease, as the hostility of the priests will not allow them any longer to hire rooms as they have done hitherto. It is a truly spiritual work under a most living worker. Help gratefully received, addressed to Sophia M. Nugent, 3, Coleshill-street, Eaton-square, London, S.W. Circular, with details, and names of other friends, sent on application.

LADIES' HIBERNIAN SCHOOL SOCIETY. — The Marchioness Dowager of Cholmondeley, President. — The Committee earnestly solicit the kind support and attendance of their friends at the ANNUAL UNITED SALE OF WORK, to be held at the Royal Albert Hall, South Kensington, on Friday and Saturday, April 4 and 5, where a Stall will be held in aid of the funds of the above Society.—Secretary and Sub-Treasurer, Miss A. E. Webb, 267, Vauxhall Bridge-road, S.W.

WEST OF IRELAND, Rosturk, Co. Mayo, Parish of Burrishoole. Dio. of Tuam. —It is proposed to erect a small building at Rosturk, in which to hold Divine Service on Sundays, and Lectures and Temperance Meetings on week days, for the benefit of that portion of the parish of Burrishoole, which is situated at a distance of eleven miles from the parish church. The nearest church is in an adjoining parish, also being eight miles distant. The Lord Bishop of the Diocese has signified his approval of the proposed building, and kindly consented to receive subscriptions and aid in its erection. Subscriptions may also be sent to the Incumbent of the parish, Rev. Samuel Johnston, Burrishoole Rectory, Newport, Co. Mayo.

ST. MARYLEBONE FEMALE PROTECTION SOCIETY, 157 to 159, Marylebone-road, N.W. This Society seeks to rescue young women who up to the time of their fall have borne a good character. Those with infants are assisted from a special fund. Contributions earnestly solicited. Bankers—Messrs. Sir Samuel Scott & Co., 1, Cavendish-square, W.
George Scudamore, Secretary

THE COMMITTEE of the Ladies' Samaritan Society of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, 25, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, earnestly plead for help in aid of the poorer patients and their families. The smallest contributions in money or clothing will be thankfully acknowledged by the Committee. Gentlemen's cast off clothing is much needed, especially coats and trousers.

NOTICE to the Friends of Israel.—Dear Friends,—The Messiah's Witness is now entirely in my hands; I shall feel very thankful to Christian friends to send all their communications, &c., direct to me at the Evangelical Mission to Israel.
D. C. Joseph, 394, Hackney-road, London, E.

THE HOSPITAL SCRIPTURE UNION.—Founded April, 1883. Patrons, the Earl of Shaftesbury, &c.—Three hundred have joined. More members wanted. Objects: Individual daily reading of same Scripture portion as appointed; Intercessory Prayer; Support of Beds in Hospitals by the subscription of one shilling yearly. New card for 1884 now ready. For further particulars of this interesting work and forms of membership, address
Miss Pattisson, 20, Clifton-gardens, London.

TO CHRISTIAN PARENTS.—A collegiate education, and residence with a Christian Master of the Bristol Grammar School, may be obtained on moderate terms, by addressing Christianos, 8, Aberdeen-terrace, Clifton.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED FACING THE SEA on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this school that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS, together with the papers of Examinations passed and Honours gained, should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. Thorn, Paddington, London.

MR. EDWIN ARROWSMITH, of the Children's Special Service Mission, wishes to recommend any parent or guardian requiring the comforts of a refined home (not a school), with the most excellent teaching and training for their children, to apply to J. INVIGORATION FOR BRAIN-WORKERS.

Treatment by Magnetism is a natural impartation of new life and vigour, which will effectually supersede the use of tonics and stimulants in chronic affections. If we exercise a thought upon what we are doing when taking stimulating drinks as tonics, we must be aware that the temporary stimulus we feel from them is not strength, as it is succeeded by a corresponding diminution of the strength we possess. The arguments advanced against stimulants are such as abstainers do not heed, and which many non-abstainers will readily endorse. Yet the want experienced by brain-workers and sufferers from brain-fag is not generally understood, nor is any practical remedy suggested. Rest is certainly a wiser course than stimulation, but it seems almost impossible in this age of activity to relax our efforts and still keep abreast with all onward movements. If recuperation of our powers and fitness for work can be obtained while in work, many an anxious heart and aching brow would hail such a talisman. Is this possible? We think it is as possible to maintain mental vigour while pursuing mental work as to obtain nourishment from food while performing physical labour. The superior value of the Magnetic method of treatment arises from the perfect control which it has over the mental states and the emotional life of the patient, extending its healing virtues into the realm of causation, and touching the spring of the body's vitality and power. For there is a pathology of the mind as well as of the body; and to restore the true harmony of thought and feeling, intellect and sensibility, should be the steady aim of him who would "minister to a mind diseased." It is because this unseen or odic influence of Magnetism acts upon or with the animating principle of our being, that it re-energises the mind, and removes hindrances and encumbrances which are revealed to our consciousness from time to time. Magnetism is, then, pre-eminently an element of mental power, and one which naturally coalesces with all the forces of the (so-called) physical economy, to restore the natural order and normal condition of our being.

From MR. W. EYLES, 81, Forest-lane, Forest-gate.

November 16, 1883.

"It is now some time since I adopted your treatment, and as the result of my trial, to put it plainly, I can say everything for it and nothing against it. I am now enjoying good health and strength, and can do a good week's work without that languor or jaded feeling which I had for some years previous to wearing your appliances. Their effect was so gradual, and their action so gentle, that I did not give them credit for having any effect, till one day I left them off, and I felt all my old symptoms returning, but upon the resumption of the appliances they disappeared again. My thanks are not sufficient to prove my gratitude; I must speak to others, and hope to persuade many to adopt your treatment."

Letters commendatory of Mr. Garrett's treatment by Magneto-Electricity have been received from hundreds of persons, in all classes of society. A private list of 850 names as referees can be had on application. Consultation free, personally, or by letter. B. Copson Garrett, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

The Christian.

"I AM TRYING TO BELIEVE."

By GEO. F. PENTECOST, D.D.

IT was during the last week of the meetings in the great Terminus Hall, St. Pancras, that I fell in with a very intelligent young lady on her way to the inquiry-room. She seemed to be quite anxious about her soul, and greatly troubled that she could not find peace. I asked her if she was a Christian? She replied, "I am trying to be one, sir."

"But," said I, "you are not to try; you are just to believe."

"I know that quite well, sir; that is what Mr. Moody has been telling us in his sermon this afternoon. And that is what I am trying to do. I am trying to believe."

"Well, my dear friend, what are you trying to believe?"

"Why, sir, I am trying to believe that I am saved."

"But you are not to turn your faith upon yourself at all. You are nowhere bidden in the Word to believe that you are saved. Do you not see that if you were to find something in or about yourself that you recognised as salvation or the ground of it, you would not be trusting in Christ at all, but only in yourself. This is a very common mistake. It is, indeed, the old one of trying "to feel," in order to be saved. We are constantly tempted to turn our thoughts inward upon ourselves, rather than outward to Christ, who alone can save. Now, dear friend, just give up all attempts to believe anything about yourself; believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

With that kind of inconsistency that is characteristic of a newly awakened mind she at once shifted her ground, and said, "Well, that is just what I am trying to do. I am trying to believe in Christ."

"Very well," said I, with the purpose of clarifying her thought to her own mind a little, "what are you trying to believe concerning Him?"

To this she made no answer for a long while. The truth is, she was full of confused thoughts; she really did not know what her trouble was, and stood more in need of some simple and clear instruction than anything else. So I determined upon a course of questions which I thought would lead her out of her darkness and confusion.

"Let us see," I proceeded, "if we can't get at your difficulty. You say that you are trying to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, but cannot. What is it that you cannot believe? Perhaps if we can separate that which you do believe from that which you do not believe, we will be able to treat your difficulties more intelligently. Do you mind answering me candidly a few questions touching your lack of ability to believe?"

"I will be pleased to answer any question I can, for I am very anxious to be saved."

"Well, then, we will try and see what you do believe, first. Do you believe that Jesus Christ came into the world, some two thousand years ago?"

"Oh, yes, I believe that, of course!"

"You are not in the least doubt upon that point?"

"Not the least, sir."

"Then you are 'not trying to believe' on that point?"

"No, sir."

"And do you believe that He was the Son of God?"

"Oh, yes, sir! I am not in doubt there in the least. I fully believe that He was God's Only Begotten Son, just as the Bible says."

"Very well. Now, do you believe that God sent Him into the world to save sinners?"

"Of course! What else did He come for? If I did not believe that, I would not be here trying to get my own soul saved."

"Very good, that seems to be clear. Here are two or three points concerning Jesus that you do believe without a doubt; and so we rule them out from among the difficulties in the way of your faith. Do we both agree, so far, that you are not 'trying to believe,' but that you really do believe?"

"Yes."

Then turning to Isaiah liii. I read the following: "Surely He hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem Him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned everyone to his own way; and the Lord hath made the iniquity of us all to meet on Him." "Now my dear friend, do you believe that when God sent his Son into the world He did really lay or cause our sins and iniquities to be laid on Him? Or to look at another Scripture (Rom. iv. 25), do you believe that 'He was delivered for our offences and raised again for our justification'?"

After looking at these and other like passages for awhile, she agreed that she was "bound to believe that Christ had borne the iniquity and sin of the world."

"Well, do you believe that He bore your sins as well as that of all other sinners? or do you expect Him yet to come down and do this for you at some future time? Or when He died for sinners do you believe that you were left out of account?"

Here were some new lines for her. She dropped her head, and gave herself over to thought for awhile, and then with the dawn of new light in her face she said in substance:

"I do not see how I am to separate one thing from another. If I believe that He came into the world and died for sinners, I must believe that He died for me as much as for anyone else, and that if God raised him for anybody's justification, He must have raised him for mine as well." But there was anxiety in her face still. She was not abandoning herself to the glad truth without reserve; so I went on:

"Let us go over the ground of our inquiry a bit, and see where we stand. You began by saying that you were 'trying to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ,' but that you could not. Then when we began to take the difficulty apart, and look at it in bits, you came to the conclusion that you did believe (1) That Jesus Christ came into the world some two thousand years ago; that the story of his advent and death is no myth, but a real and blessed fact. (2) That Jesus is indeed the Son of God, and not a mere man. (3) That though we had all gone astray like lost sheep, yet God had laid on Him the iniquities of us all, and had caused Him to be delivered up for our offences, and had raised Him again for our justification. (4) And finally, you agree that you believe that you are included in that blessed saving work. That your sins, too, were on Him, and that He was raised for your justification.

"Yes, I agree to all that."

"Now, let me ask you two questions. First.—If you believe these things, you are not trying to believe them? for you cannot at once be trying to believe and yet believing them. In that case you may give over trying, and begin trusting. Is not this fair and true?"

"Why, yes, sir, that seems very plain; but I had never thought of it in that light."

"Well, Second.—What is it about Christ that you cannot believe?"

She looked up into my face, thoughtfully and steadily, as though she were trying to think of something she did not believe, and as if she feared to give up her trying and trust Him whom she did believe. But as she mused and thought on who Christ was, and what He had done for her, her fears had to melt away. Another moment she threw them all to the winds, and with a radiant face she said:

"Oh, now I see it. I am not to believe that I am saved, but that Jesus Christ saves me by what He has done for me, and by God raising Him from the dead."

"Yes," I said; "salvation is not the object of our faith, but Christ and his finished work. Indeed, salvation is the fruit or end of our faith. Further, we are not to look within for salvation, but to Him who is our salvation. 'Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust and not be afraid; for the Lord JEHOVAH (Jesus) is my strength and my song; He also is become my salvation.' This is the grand secret. It is not what we are, what we do, what we feel, or what we believe; but it is JEHOVAH—JESUS who is our SALVATION."

May the Lord direct the eyes of all anxious souls who may be "trying to believe" away from themselves to Him who came, who was the Son of God, who was made sin for us, who was delivered for our offences and raised again for our justification, AND WHO IS BECOME OUR SALVATION.

A NATIONAL BEREAVEMENT.

IN the death of H.R.H. the DUKE OF ALBANY a national bereavement has befallen our land. Gifted as he was with genius and virtue, reminding us of his lamented and beloved father, in whose devotion to the public weal he appeared to have found his model, the whole nation feels the heavy loss it has sustained.

All the circumstances of the Duke's end seem calculated to add poignancy to the sadness which is caused by the event. Its suddenness. its solitude, in that no member of his family was near, his youth, his home ties so recently formed, his career of social usefulness, so rich in promise, but so early terminated—all combine to make his decease one of the most sorrowful events that have transpired for many years. But the Lord hath done it, and it is for us to learn the lesson so solemnly taught by this unlooked for and unexpected stroke. To our beloved Queen and every member of the Royal Family we, in common with all our contemporaries, offer our respectful and deep sympathy; as also to the widowed Princess thus called upon to bear the yoke of sorrow in her youth. Before the throne of heavenly grace let us plead for them, asking that while Divine consolation and aid are afforded to the mourners, all classes of the people may have grace to profit by so loud a call to reflection.

THE MARYLEBONE MEDICAL MISSION continues its good work among the poor; while relieving physical suffering, the workers take every opportunity of bringing the Gospel home to the hearts of the patients. Any gifts of clothing, books, bedding, medical necessities, &c., are thankfully received by Dr. Chambers, 43, Carlisle-street, Edgware-road, N.W.

MR. MOODY ON FAULT-FINDING.

THE opening address of the Evangelist at Kensington was from the words, "When He saw their faith." We give some of the earlier portions of it, postponing the remainder for a succeeding issue:—

We read in the Gospel narrative that there was a great stir in the town of Capernaum at this time. A few weeks before, the Saviour had been cast out of his native town of Nazareth. He had come down to Capernaum, and the whole country was greatly moved. His star was just rising, and his fame was being spread abroad. Peter's wife's mother had been healed by a word. The servant of an officer in the Roman army had been raised up from a sick bed, and the Saviour had performed many other wonderful miracles. Men had come to Capernaum from almost every town in Galilee, and Judea, and from Jerusalem. They had gathered together to look into these wonderful events that were occurring. The voice of John the Baptist had been ringing through the land, proclaiming to the people that there a prophet would soon make his appearance, whose shoe latchet he was unworthy to unloose. While the Baptist was telling out this message the prophet Himself made his appearance in the northern part of the country, and all these wonderful things were transpiring.

The Pharisees and doctors of the law had come to Capernaum to look into the reports that were spread abroad. The house where they were gathered was filled to overflowing, and these wise men were listening to the Saviour's teaching. Perhaps many of them hardly believed a word that He said. It may be there were some believing ones among these wise men. Perhaps Nicodemus was there. Joseph of Arimathea may have been there; if he was, he was not yet known as a disciple of Jesus. It may be he had not yet believed, even if he was there.

The writer of the Gospel says, "The power of the Lord was present to heal them." We are not told, however, that one of them was healed. So it is very often now. The power of the Lord may be present to heal in these gatherings; yet many will come and go, wondering what it all means, and without being healed of their spiritual diseases. What we need is to have the power of God in our midst. I heard of a man who came into one of our meetings in London a short time ago. He got into a part of the hall where he could not hear a word of what was spoken or sung; he could not even hear the text or the portion of Scripture that was read. There he had to sit through the service, so to speak, shut up, alone with himself. A little while after he told someone that as he sat there God had revealed Himself to him, and spoken peace to his soul. There is such a thing as the power of God being present to heal, though men may not hear the voice of their fellow-man.

I want to call attention to four classes of people who will probably be gathered together here. The first class are the indifferent; the second class are the fault-finders; thirdly, there are the formalists; and finally, the workers.

I will not spend much time on the first class—those who are indifferent. Perhaps they may come to the meetings once or twice, just to see what is going on. But they will be so little interested that they will probably not care whether men get saved or not. They will not be in sympathy with the prayer offered up at the beginning of this meeting—that the harlots and drunkards might be reclaimed through this Mission. There will be no response in their souls, even if there should be ten thousand men and women, born of the Spirit, swept into the kingdom of God by a mighty wave of blessing from heaven.

The second class is much more numerous. No doubt they will be here by thousands; they are the fault-finders. There are many professed Christians who are all the time finding fault and criticising. They criticise the preaching, or the singing. The prayers will be either too long or too short, too loud, or not loud enough. They will find fault with the reading of the Word of God, or they will say it was not the right portion. They will criticise the preacher. "I do not like his style," they say. If you doubt what I say, just listen to the people as they go out of these meetings. "What did you think of the preacher?" says one. "Well, I must confess I was disappointed. I did not like his manner. He was not graceful in his actions." Another will say: "He was not logical; I like logic." Or another: "He did not preach enough about repentance." If a preacher does not go over every doctrine in every sermon people begin to find fault. They say: "There was too much repentance, and no Gospel; or, it was all Gospel, and no repentance." Perhaps the objection will be: "He spoke a great deal about justification, but he said nothing about sanctification." So if a man does not go right through the Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, in one sermon, they at once proceed to criticise and find fault.

"The fact is," says some one of this class, "the man did not touch my heart at all." Someone else will say, "He was all heart and no head. I like a man to preach to my intellect." Or perhaps it is, "He appeals too much to the will; he does not give enough prominence to the doctrine of election." Or, again, "There is no backbone in his preaching; he does not lay sufficient stress on doctrine." Or, "He is not eloquent"; and so on, and so on.

You may find hundreds of such fault-finders among professed Christians; but all their criticism will not lead one solitary soul to Christ. I never preached a sermon yet that I could not pick to pieces, and find fault with. I feel that Jesus Christ ought to have a far better representative than I am. But I have lived long enough to discover that there is nothing perfect in this world. If you are to wait till you can find a perfect preacher, or perfect meetings, I am afraid you will have to wait till the millennium arrives. God condescends to use the weak things and the foolish things and the things that are not, to bring to nought the things that are. What we want is to be looking right up to Him. Let us get done with fault finding. When I hear people talk in the way I have described, I say to them, "Come and do better yourself. Just step up here and try what you can do." My friends, it is so easy to find fault; it takes neither brains nor heart.

MRS. MARZIALS calls the attention of our readers to the needs of France at this time. Her husband is in weak health, and sorely needs a faithful and vigorous helper in his work. Who will go? Address, care of Mr. Copson Garratt, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

CORRECTION.—In our issue of March 13, it was stated that "Lord Lorne had twice visited Miss Macpherson's Home, near Niagara Falls." It was Miss Rye's Home that was thus honoured, Miss Macpherson's establishment being nearly a hundred miles from Niagara.

"BE YE HOLY: FOR I AM HOLY."

WE have received several communications respecting our brief article entitled, "Is Sin Uprooted?" on March 13, the writers of which appear quite to misapprehend the purport of that paper.

We repeat what we said then; we do not object that the standard of holiness set up is too high, but too low. When the language of the Holy One of God concerning Himself is assumed by his professed followers, then God's ideal of holiness, realised in his only begotten Son, is exchanged for that of a man of like passions with ourselves. The claim to which we objected was that any Christian should take to himself the words of the Lord Jesus, and say, "The prince of this world cometh and hath nothing in me." They were spoken by the absolutely Holy One, of whom the Father testified, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear Him."

It never has been true of any other man living on the earth except Jesus, the Son of God, that "the prince of this world cometh and hath nothing in me." If the words are used by any other they cannot be used in the same sense; they cannot mean the same thing as when uttered by the Captain of our salvation, and therefore they are, from any other lips than his, untrue. "Not he that commendeth himself is approved, but he whom the Lord commendeth."

One of our friends says we advocate a sinful holiness. We rather think that the teaching which levels down the ideal of holiness and righteousness to meet the experience of men, is more open to such a charge than that which refuses any other standard than the holiness of the Holy One, the righteousness of Jesus Christ the Righteous. He who aims at the stars will shoot higher than he who aims at the highest mark on earth; and if we aim to be holy as our Father in heaven is holy, we shall become more like Him than if our model is a sinlessness which is compatible with any amount of ignorance, or error, or mistake.

There is ample promise of an unlimited salvation, as well as unqualified command to be holy, without our theorising about the elimination of sin. Our Great High Priest is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him. Our ears shall hear the word behind us saying: "This is the way, walk thou in it." He gives us the ideal of the highest Christian life when he says: "Whither the Spirit was to go, they went; thither was their spirit to go. And they went and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning." The living creatures do not assert their own holiness or sinlessness; like Paul, they say: "I know nothing against myself: yet am I not hereby justified; but He that judgeth me is the Lord." When they stood they let down their wings, which covered on this side and on that side their bodies; and there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads when they stood and had let down their wings. It is to silent and reverent humility that the voice comes from the Man upon the throne.

FRIENDLY LETTERS.—Miss Skinner has issued another of her Friendly Letters, containing some very practical advice to lads and young men. Now that it is such a common thing to find mere boys indulging in smoking, swearing, and other evil habits, we welcome any effort which is made to point them to a better course of life, inducing them to remember their Creator in the days of their youth.

WHAT IS THE GOSPEL?—5.

By Mr. GEORGE F. TRENCH.

IN James, the Gospel, though not the most prominent feature of the Epistle, is found in the form of the promise of the Kingdom which God the Father, full of pity and of tender mercy, has promised to the poor of this world, rich in faith and love to Him.

By the engrafted word of truth, received with meekness, our souls are saved from death, our multitudes of sins are covered, and God recreates us to liberty, peace, humility, and holiness of walk and speech. Such works of obedience and love are the necessary fruits of true faith, by which alone we are justified in claiming to possess it.

The prayer of faith will be heard, and the patient sufferer who loves Christ will receive a crown of life at his coming.

In Peter's first Epistle, addressed to scattered Christian Jews, the Gospel is set forth, in accord with Old Testament Scriptures, as the good tidings now preached with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, to the effect that man, subject to vanity, sitting in darkness, indulging every carnal passion unrestrained, is through faith in Christ, the spotless Lamb, redeemed, and saved, and healed by his precious blood, who died for our sins upon the tree.

The stranger and alien thus finds himself, in the electing mercy of God, born again by the Lord's resurrection, into his living temple now, and with a living hope of glory in heaven at his revelation, unto which inheritance he is preserved by faith, through many sufferings and the fiery trials of persecution for Christ's sake; the love of whom constrains him to walk meanwhile as a pilgrim, consistently with his calling, in holiness, patience, subjection, love, modesty, humility, joy, and hope.

In 2 Peter, the Gospel is the exceeding great and precious promise of the eternal kingdom and glory of our Lord Jesus Christ as the inheritance of those who have the knowledge of Him, with precious faith.

This prospect, to be enjoyed at his coming, is brightened to us, by the exposure of the abounding sin, lawlessness, and heresies of the last days, and by terrible warnings of judgment about to fall upon the rebellious, both angels and men, and even upon the material world, which are confirmed by appeals to the most signal visitations of Old Testament history.

The purpose of the Epistle, from the pen of a dying apostle, is to promote steadfastness, watchfulness, growth in the divine life and in the knowledge and love of the Lord, with the earnest hope of his coming in glory.

Jude, while diligently purposing to write upon the Gospel, which promises us the mercy of Christ unto eternal life, and presentation, without spot, in the presence of his glory, with exceeding joy, is constrained to turn (like Peter in his second Epistle) to the exposure of the hidden dangers of false teaching, apostacy, and presumptuous sin which surround the saints, and attract (as in several notable Old Testament instances) the judgment of God on the ungodly. He recommends for their protection, steadfastness in the faith, prayer, and trust in the love of God.

In John's first Epistle, the Gospel is the declaration of the true God, as Light, Life, and Love, revealed by the Holy Spirit in Jesus Christ, come in the flesh, with a view to our enjoying abiding fellowship with Him thus known.

As Light, for God is Light, He is at war with all sin and falsehood; nevertheless, propitiation being accomplished by Christ's blood, our sins being forgiven and Satan's works destroyed, we may walk with God, even as Christ walked, till we see Him as He is at his coming.

As Life, He gives us in Christ eternal life, as those begotten into sonship; and righteousness—that is, obedience to his commandments—maintains the enjoyment of this relationship.

As Love, and God is Love, He proved his character by sending his Son to be the Saviour of the world, and in love to Him, and to our brother (not loving the world), we may abide in God, and God in us, all fear cast out.

Faith, the assured knowledge of our privilege and portion, will give us victory over the devil, false teachings, the world, and the lusts of the flesh.

DEEP SEA SOUNDINGS.*

THE adaptation of animal life in the ocean to surrounding circumstances, whilst showing the design of a Creator, affords also a striking analogy of the adaptation of spiritual life, by God's grace, to those various conditions in which the Christian may be placed. Professor Bailey believed that the ocean bed was one vast mortuary, because if the animalculæ had lived there their frail little textures would have been subjected in their growth to a pressure upon them of a "column of water 12,000 feet high, equal to the weight of 400 atmospheres." But if we can once prove that animal life does exist, we see in this a striking instance of the universal law of adaptation. The existence of animal life under circumstances where we are at a loss to conceive how the vital functions can be carried on, is one of the most interesting studies of nature. Organisms have been found present in hot sand, in snow, in calcined lava, on the barren rock.

We turn from the kingdom of nature to the kingdom of grace, and we say to every child of God in the depth of doubts and distresses, "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able." The history of the Church of Christ is one grand illustration of the law of spiritual adaptation. The word, "My grace is sufficient for thee," has been tried by countless children of sorrow, and each one has been able to testify to its force and its truth. Josse has written an interesting chapter on what he calls, for want of a better term, the "Discrepancies of Nature" (he adds, there are no real discrepancies in nature), i.e., surprises at finding life, or any particular phase of it, in circumstances where we should not à priori have at all expected to find it. Every minister of Christ at home of any experience, and every student of the history of the Church of Christ, has compiled his chapter of spiritual "Discrepancies." He has seen the child of God supported under a weight of trial which he might deem phenomenal, did he not remember the promise, "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Under the pressure of the heaviest external calamities, many a Christian has said with St. Paul, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

The absolute stillness which reigns in the depths of the sea has its analogy in the silent submission to God's will—the soul-rest which is found in those who have been led into the depths of Divine chastening. Professor Bailey, of West Point, writes to Maury: "I am greatly obliged to you for the deep soundings you sent me last week . . . the bottom of the ocean at the depth of more than two miles I hardly hoped ever to have a chance of examining . . . I was greatly delighted to find that all these deep soundings are filled with microscopic shells; not a particle of sand or gravel exists in them." What does this fact signify? That at this depth there is absolute rest—not motion enough to destroy these delicate organisms, not current enough to mix with them a grain of the finest sand, that in the depths of the sea there are no abrading processes at work. Professor Maury compares these still and silent waters to a "great cushion" to protect and defend the bed of the ocean from a continual wearing.

Professor Wyville Thomson says: "Over a large portion of the ocean where the low-bottomed temperature is known to prevail the sea-bed is covered with a light fleecy deposit of microscopic organisms of great delicacy, into which the sounding-lead has in some instances sunk several feet, and which must inevitably be drifted away by a current of appreciable velocity. In all places where any perceptible current exists, the bottom consists of sand, or mud, or gravel, or rolled pebbles. In some cases also, sounding in the deep water of mid-Atlantic, the line, after running greatly in excess of the depth, has been found to have coiled itself in a tangled mass right over the lead, a proof of almost absolute stillness." There is something very impressive in the thought that whilst the surface of the ocean is ever restless—liable to be tossed by storm and tempest—there is a vast region in the ocean depths where all is still, silent, and at rest. Sir Emilius Bayley observes that the silence of the soul before God is a very high attainment in the spiritual life; and that "only unto God my soul is silence," (the literal rendering of the opening sentence of the sixty-second Psalm) expresses the resignation of absolute trust, the perfect acquiescence of the soul in the will of God."

This experience is not gained without long training in the school of discipline. Many a true believer is at first restive under the chastening hand of God, "as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke," and it is only when that hand has long been laid, tenderly but heavily it may be, on the wayward child, that he is led to say, in great submissiveness to a Father's will, "I was dumb, I opened not my mouth: because Thou didst it." "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord." "It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth." One case stands out in my clerical experience, of a woman who suffered such an accumulation of sorrows as I have never even heard or read of. I went to see her, but I passed and repassed the house before I could summon up courage to enter her home. Only one sentence passed the lips of that stricken and bruised heart, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him." Beneath "the raging waves of the sea" of her trial was the depth of a heaven-born peace and rest.

Let every tried and afflicted reader of this paper remember for his comfort that he is not alone in his sorrow. "The eye of the Lord is upon them that fear Him," He who of old "led his people through the depth as through a wilderness," still makes "the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over." On the other side, "there shall be no more sea"—"there remaineth, therefore, a rest to the people of God." "In thy presence is fulness of joy, and at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

For the Young.

"COME AND SEE."

"IS your God a great God or a little God?" mockingly asked an infidel of an old Christian woman.

There was a pause, and then solemnly upraising her hand, she replied, "My God is so great that heaven and earth cannot contain him, and he is so small that he can dwell in this poor heart!"

To search out the dwelling-place of God has been the desire of hundreds in every age. From the poor heathen beyond seas bowing down to wood and stone, to those in bygone days in our own island, blindly seeking after God in the leafy depths of the oak forest, the cry has been, "Oh that I knew where I might find Him! that I might come even to his seat!"

No spirit of idle curiosity, but a longing desire to know more of the Blessed One they had learned to love and follow, prompted the question of the two disciples of whom we read to-day, and to such seekers Jesus will ever turn with the wonderfully gracious words, "Come and see." And to you, dear children, Jesus gives the same loving invitation, "Come and see."

When King Solomon had finished the Temple which was, as he had purposed it should be, "great and wonderful," he felt how unworthy it was to become the dwelling-place of Jehovah; but as God in his condescending love filled the first Temple with the glory of his presence, so now He desires an earthly temple for his dwelling-place. This temple is the temple of the heart.

How wonderful! The great and holy God whom the heaven of heavens cannot contain, desiring the heart of even a little child for his dwelling-place! Wonderful indeed, but really and blessedly true. "For thus saith the High and Lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit." And listen again to his gracious promise, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

But you say perhaps, "My heart is so full of sin and naughtiness, often there are such angry and unkind feelings there; how can the holy Lord Jesus want to dwell in a heart like mine?"

It is just because He wants to make your heart a "holy place," because he wants to make you happy; for "Holiness is Happiness." Do not let Satan tempt you to delay by thinking you can make your heart more fit for a dwelling-place for Jesus. You might try and try, and delay year after year in vain, and at length, oh, terrible thought! perhaps there might come an end to his loving patience who is standing without, and He might sadly turn away from the fast-closed door.

Only admit this blessed heavenly Guest within your little temple, and he will make it meet for his abode. Let Him control that quick temper of yours which is always getting the better of you; let Him remove that forgetfulness, that carelessness, or whatsoever it is which you have so long tried in vain to overcome. Be content to be nothing and to let Him do everything.

Only let your heart be humble, so that Jesus may enter to make and keep it holy, and then, and only then, will it be really and truly happy.

"Seeking Jesus? Jesus seeks thee,
Wants thee as thou art;
He is knocking, ever knocking
At thy heart.

If thou let Him, He will save thee,
Make thee all his own;
Guide thee, keep thee, take thee, dying,
To his throne."

BIBLICAL PUZZLE.

How many chapters are there in the Bible? The reader may say that is a question easily answered, by adding together the number each book contains, as we find them in the index. But as by that method we learn so little of the Word of God I would suggest to those who are fond of searching the Scriptures another way—namely, to enumerate the chapters by different incidents recorded in the Bible.

First, find the age of Hezekiah when he began to reign. Multiply that number by the age of Jehoiachin when he began to reign. Divide the answer by the number of kings found hid in a cave at Makkedah. From the remainder subtract the number of years Eli judged Israel. To this add the number of Haman's sons. Divide this result by the number of measures of barley Boaz gave to Ruth. Add the number of furlongs from Bethany to Jerusalem, and multiply by the number of stones Joshua pitched in Gilgal. Then, again, multiply the proceeds by the number of young men that bare Joab's armour in the wood of Ephraim, and this result divide by the number of men that went to look after Elisha. The remainder multiply by the number of years the children of Israel were oppressed by the Midianites. To them add the number of verses the 119th Psalm contains, and also the number of kings that had their thumbs and great toes cut off by Adoni-bezek. Now add the age of Joseph when he stood before Pharoah, and the number of times the King of Israel smote upon the ground when told to do so by Elisha. Lastly, multiply the number of years it was foretold the Jews should be held in captivity in Babylon by the number of trees God said he would plant in the wilderness and the desert, and add the product to the previous figures.

The quotient will correspond with the number of chapters the Bible contains.

Union Hall Mission.

THE twenty-fourth annual gatherings of this Mission were held on Tuesday, March 25, at the Union Hall, Carlisle-street, Edgware-road. A large company of Christians filled the Lecture-room in the afternoon, and addresses given by Mr. John Churchill, Colonel J. Puget, Mr. Herbert W. Taylor, and Mr. P. Moir-Crane.

In the evening the Hall was well filled with workers and friends from the various branches of the Mission and friends of the work.

Mr. Robert Bilke gave a brief sketch of the efforts put forth during the past year. He stated, that though they had much cause for praise for the great blessing God had permitted them to witness in the various branches, the balance-sheet showed a falling-off of funds to the amount of £250 from last year; still the Mission was free from debt.

Addresses were given by Messrs. Taylor, Inglis, Colman, Hambleton, and Hawkins. Mr. Bilke's address is 18, Greenhill Park Villas, Harlesden, N.W.

REV. J. INSKIP, of Philadelphia, whose serious illness we lately reported, died on Friday, March 7. His expiring words were, "Triumph! triumph!"

Sunshine and Shadow.

"We thank God for blessings given, but we may one day thank Him more for those He has withheld."

ACROSS my path the sun was shining,
The birds sang sweetly overhead;
While fragrance filled the air from blossoms
Purple, and blue, and rosy-red.

My heart was singing, too, with gladness;
I plucked the flowers that grew around;
Nor saw the dark grey shadow creeping
So silently along the ground.

Alas! the birds soon ceased their singing,
The flowers fell faded from my hand;
A sad wind moaned across the forest,
And darkness came upon the land.

I stumbled on amid the shadows,
My careless glee all changed to tears;
And through the silence rose the murmur
Of Death's dark river to my ears.

* * * * *

Now, Lord, I thank Thee for the sorrow—
That sacred shadow o'er my way—
That taught my heart its utter weakness
Until Thine arm was made my stay.

I thank Thee for thy many mercies
To me, unworthy though I be;
But also for the "desert-places"
That made me feel my need of Thee.

Our fairest hopes may sometimes perish
To show us earth is not our rest;
Our own way gained may bring us sorrow
To teach that God's way is the best.

If we are his no ill can harm us;
Safe on the Rock our feet shall stand;
The very troubles that alarm us
Are but the shadow of his hand. A. M. C.

Mr. McAll's Work in Paris.

AT the Noon Prayer-meeting, Aldersgate-street, on Thursday last, Mr. McAll gave some details of the progress of his work.

Twelve months have elapsed since his last visit, but much has been done during that time. He said he had two principal causes for gratitude; that the work has extended both in Paris and through France, and that more helpers have come forward, including some pastors who have given up their churches in order to engage in more distinctly evangelistic work.

The effects of the short visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey to Paris some eighteen months ago are still felt, especially in the stirring up of many Christian friends to earnest labour.

Mr. McAll related an incident of a man and wife who came to Paris from Monte Video on a business speculation, which utterly failed. They were induced to attend some services being held in the Church of the Oratoire, and were much struck, having never heard such a Gospel before. In a few days they both found peace, and went back to their native town, poor in body but rich in spirit, to win others to the Saviour.

M. Saillens, from Marseilles, one of Mr. McAll's most efficient helpers, followed with a short account of work done in several of the ninety halls now possessed by the Mission in France, thirty-five of which are in Paris. The Gospel has made rapid progress in France since the war, before which all such preaching was forbidden.

A CRY FROM BRAZIL.—Referring to an article bearing this title in our issue of March 20, we have received a letter from Rev. R. J. Simpson, Clerical Secretary of the South American Missionary Society. He says, "There is doubtless enough call in Brazil to enlist the sympathies of thousands in this country, but you should know that a good solid work has been going on at Rio for some years. Our Society is now anxious to find two suitable men to go out there; one a clergyman for the Boca and district, the other a lay missionary, to assist Mr. Curran in his seamen's work. I may also add that we have Mission work at S. Paulo, Santos, and on the Rio Claro."

FOREIGN MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

THE second morning of the Conference at Powis Hall was devoted to the consideration of "How best to kindle and deepen Missionary Zeal in the Churches of Christ." Mr. Frank H. White said: One way to deepen zeal is by holding such meetings as those. Would that in every district in London the Churches would combine and hold such gatherings. Another means is the reading the lives of those who have gone before.

Rev. Gilbert Karney said he was convinced that, in order to the quickening of missionary zeal, we must go deeper than mere mechanical means. We must thoroughly grasp the truth that the Lord is crowning missionary work with rich and abundant blessing. When we remember that a hundred years ago missionary work was scarcely thought of, and when we think of the triumphs of the last century, we surely feel that God is commanding us to "go forward." The conviction is growing on the minds of the Lord's people that the Master will speedily return. How that conviction must quicken our zeal for the cause of Missions! The Church is indeed to-day the messenger sent to prepare the way of the Lord. Mr. R. Bura said that a comprehensive map was a very excellent and telling way of increasing interest in missionary work. Then we want facts brought before us. Young men, at all events, are moved by facts much more than theory.

Dr. Woods Smyth said the best means of quickening zeal was by the power of the Spirit to preach the Gospel in its fulness of joy. Rev. Dr. Valentine spoke of the necessity of believing prayer. With regard to the Church, ministers themselves should be filled with the missionary spirit, and a bright missionary meeting should be held at least once a month. Good missionary literature is also very important. Let Christian families take up a special case—a heathen orphan—and thus will much interest be awakened. Mrs. Clark spoke specially of "information meetings," as so little is really known of the heathen and their actual condition. It is wonderful how God has used very small meetings to the stirring of perhaps one individual, who has become either a missionary or a noble helper of missionaries. Mr. H. S. Newman strongly advocated individual churches supporting individual missionaries, and specially interesting themselves in this work. Rev. G. Karney, in summing up, said the best way to quicken home zeal is to give one of the home circle for the work. Mr. Frank White called attention to the usefulness of "Juvenile Missionary Bands," especially amongst upper class children.

In the afternoon the question of "External and Social Hindrances to Mission Work," was considered; Mr. Broomhall read a paper on the subject. The intrinsic difficulties, he said, inseparable from the condition of the mind and heart of a heathen man are numerous and powerful enough. Ignorance, superstition, selfishness, ingratitude, an almost utter inability to believe in disinterested service at the hands of another, no word in his language to give a just conception of God, or of spiritual things, a moral degradation deep and appalling—these are all great hindrances. There are also social hindrances. In Africa they are various; in India caste, and in China ancestral worship, present inconceivably powerful barriers to missionary effort. It is a humbling and painful fact, that from our own beloved land have proceeded some of the most powerful hindrances to the spread of the Gospel in other lands. From Fiji, from Madagascar, from Africa, from India, from China, the testimony comes that the lives of some of the European residents (chiefly British) are scandalous, and a disgrace to the country from which they came. Among our countrymen living abroad drunkenness and licentiousness abound, and a very large proportion live in open concubinage with native women. When there is not open immorality to lament, there is often a haughty and contemptuous bearing on the part of British residents, which is most disastrous in its power to alienate the people, and to prejudice them against the teaching of men of the same nationality. Many warm friends of Missions little know how the work abroad is hindered by the presence and conduct of ungodly Englishmen. One external hindrance, which is of all the hindrances in the world the one most to be deplored, is our opium trade with China. Having regard to its consequences, to the multitudes affected by it, and our own connection with it, there is no one thing which more urgently demands the attention of British Christians. What can we do? We can pray earnestly and definitely, we can diffuse information in the matter, and we can use our influence, especially in view of the General Election. Our enemies are fully awake to this, and recognise that a hundred electors in each constituency putting pressure on the candidates would win the day.

Dr. Valentine spoke of the infidel literature sent to India, of cottons loaded with china clay, of adulterated goods, and similar frauds, which shake the faith of natives in Christian integrity; for all professing Christians are to them model Christians. Another strange fact is, that not a few Christian ladies, who at home did Christian work, when they go out lead too often useless and idle lives, not even speaking to their servants of Christ. An interesting conversation ensued, in which Dr. Eccles, Dr. Valentine, Dr. Paterson, and Mr. Hudson Taylor took part, in reference to the spread in India of infidel literature, while the Government of India has been discouraging Christian teaching in schools. One primary school was mentioned which refused the Government grant because the Inspector made in his examination slighting remarks with regard to the Christian instruction given.

Gospel Work in New York.

SINCE 1879 services have been held on Sunday evenings, in Cooper Union, New York. These services have become very popular with the residents of the east side of the city who do not attend services elsewhere. A choir of young girls, in sweet, clear voices, lead the singing of the Gospel Hymns. Mr. C. W. Sawyer addresses the congregation. He knows his audience at a glance, and possesses the tact of knowing when he has talked long enough. He addresses the people directly, wastes no words, and closes the meeting by inviting all who are interested to attend the after-meeting, which is held at Annex Hall, Fourth Avenue. Here the character of the meeting is changed. Short prayers and addresses and singing occupy the time, while the workers speak personally to such of those present as have attended the after-meeting regularly, or evince a particular interest.

Those persons are visited at their homes, and every effort made to increase their interest. As a result of this evangelistic work, within three months seventy-five persons have united with churches in New York city of various Protestant denominations. Every day brings applications for material aid. No needy one is turned from the door unaided. Work is furnished for such as are able to work. In addition to this work, cooking classes are held. These classes are free, and are attended by about two hundred and seventy-five wives and daughters of the working men of the east side of the city. The next step will be the establishing of cooking-schools for children. A sewing-school is talked of, and will be established as soon as practicable. Temperance is another feature of this Mission.

There is no doubt that the result of this practical Christian work has left its impress on the lives of thousands of individuals, and hundreds of homes; it must, in the future, tell on the moral and political life of the city. Any work that elevates that class of our citizens who are most liable, from various causes, to become wards of the State, should receive the generous, hearty support of the people.—Christian Union.

A CONFERENCE ON THE SECOND ADVENT will be held in the South London Conference Hall, Clapham-road, on May 14 to 16 inclusive.

Paralysed and Epileptic.

THE meeting at the Mansion-house on Friday, the 21st ult., in aid of completing the rebuilding of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, was especially remarkable for the important testimony supplied by representative members of the medical profession to the value of the work performed. It is seldom that a special hospital obtains from the profession a unanimous expression of goodwill. The faculty is rightly discriminative, and when we read in The Lancet that this particular hospital is one "of which the profession may be proud," we may be sure that some notable reason exists for so exceptional a commendation.

Diseases of the nervous system, which comprise epilepsy and the different forms of paralysis, are not easily dealt with in general hospitals. As the speakers at the Mansion House pointed out, only a few cases comparatively are admitted, and they cannot be retained for the length of time needful to their successful treatment. Yet so prevalent among all classes are these dreadful scourges, that it is computed 120,000 persons die annually in the United Kingdom from paralysis, epilepsy, and kindred ailments. To meet the wants of so great a mass of suffering as these figures indicate, the National Hospital stands almost alone, and the new building, which is now being erected at a cost of £60,000 and to contain 170 beds, is the first of the kind.

Considering the terrible nature of these maladies, the mystery which envelopes them, and their widespread ravages, it is difficult to explain the neglect with which they have been treated. In Holy Writ they are prominently mentioned, and in many instances they obtained our Saviour's especial pity, and were the objects of his miraculous healing. While this reflection should serve to commend the work of this charity to all Christian people, we cannot doubt that, looked at from the lower standpoint of merely worldly wisdom, such work as is performed in this hospital calls for greater support than it received. As Mr. Samuel Morley pointed out, even the proposed accommodation of the new Hospital, supposing it can be utilised to the full, will fall far short of actual requirements.

The Lord Mayor, in opening the proceedings, referred to the fact that twenty-four years ago—at the instigation of the members of the Chandler family—the Hospital had been established in similar public meeting at the Mansion House, under the presidency of his predecessor, Mr. Alderman Wise. Mr. J. Marshall, F.R.S. (President of the Royal College of Surgeons), explained the action of the nervous system at some length. It was impossible to suppose that this wonderful organisation could be disordered in any way without leading to great misery and suffering. Since this hospital was established, vast progress had been made in the treatment of nervous diseases.

Sir Risdon Bennett (late President of the Royal College of Physicians) confirmed the previous speaker as to the successful way in which the hospital had been conducted.

Mr. S. Morley, M.P., proposed a resolution pledging the meeting to assist the board of management in the completion of the new hospital. He observed that the occurrence of epilepsy in the parent of a poor family often meant absolute ruin. When they remembered the number of deaths from this disease, and the large number of cases which did not end fatally, they would see that to provide for 170 patients was not sufficient, and further efforts would have to be made to meet one of the most appalling diseases to which human nature is subject. He knew patients who had attended the hospital, and who were thankful not only for the skill with which they had been treated, but for the tenderness, care, and sympathy shown to them.

Addresses in support were also delivered by Cardinal Manning and Sir H. Giffard.

The Secretary announced that subscriptions had been received amounting to about £1700.

THE REVIVAL IN LONDON.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey.

NEAR the close of the Stratford Mission Rev. Dr. Goodell, of St. Louis, U.S., who was passing through London, attended several of the meetings. His impressions, as recorded in the Chicago Advance, will be read with interest by those on this side the sea:—

"Mr. Moody's bow abides in strength. I never heard him preach with so much breadth and earnestness and pungency and power. There is a pathos and mellowness about it very sweet and precious to all who love the Lord. Of Mr. Sankey, also, the same is true. He sings better than two years ago. His singing is an untold help in the service of praise and salvation. God has re-anointed them both for their work in the greatest city on the globe. They are the best answer to all scepticism and doubt. The sneers of Ingersoll vanish like flax in the flame before the mighty power of God which works in them.

"London is divided into districts, all to be worked as best they can be during the season. They are now in their sixth Mission, and have more to visit. The closing services at Stratford were very impressive and affecting. The day of doubt and questioning as to the worth of the work has passed, and God's people seem to have settled down to try to reach all souls possible in this mighty city. Christianity is all a miracle. It is the power of the Spirit, redeeming the world through Christ. This work is one of the bright and powerful miracles of Christianity. On Sunday morning, Mr. Spurgeon in his public prayer used this petition: 'Bless, O God, thy servant Mr. Moody, and let thy Spirit rest on every word he preaches this day with great power.' It was the only personal reference in his prayer.

"Mr. Moody does not forget America, and asks many questions about the spiritual state of the churches and the Y.M.C.A. work. Could we help going into the inquiry-room, and did we fail of a great blessing there? When one of his old St. Louis helpers said her Bible had been left at the hotel, he instantly handed her his familiar, well-marked Bagster, and said, 'Here, take mine. I have work for you.' We had the comfort of bringing in five names. Three, I trust, meant true acceptance of Christ, and two, restoration to light and peace, after long seasons of wandering and coldness. Oh, the joy of living in a spiritual atmosphere like this, of speaking God's invitations into hearing ears, and bowing in prayer with willing hearts. As I write these lines I know how many hearts in America will throb with a renewed delight, as they read, and long to be more deeply engaged in the blessed work of leading souls to know the Lord. Why need we tarry? Much time yet remains for this work in our churches before the summer breaks. We need not wait three months for the harvest."

The Converts' Meeting at St. Pancras.

This meeting, on Monday week, was an unqualified success in all senses of the word, and a very fitting close to the great gatherings in Central London. Long before the advertised hour the hall was crammed as full as full could be, consistent with locomotion in the aisles. After the proceedings had advanced a little, Mr. Moody took compassion on the many left out in the cold and ordered the passages also to be given up. "If I were outside," said he, "and could not get in to hear this singing I should feel pretty bad."

Mr. Moody, of course, was Commander-in-Chief, but for one evening he left the most of the work to his lieutenants. Of these there was no lack. The song department was represented as we have never seen it before. Mr. Sankey was back in his old place in splendid voice; Mr. Stebbins was near by; so were Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan. All these friends contributed their due share to the delectation and edification of the vast throng; they were helped by others from the choir. The great feature of the evening, however, was the singing of "The Gospel Male Choir," which, under Mr. McGranahan's lead, thrilled the meeting with their rousing song. It was a sight to see how Mr. Moody enjoyed it. The Christian young men of London have been taught a lesson as to the power they can wield in presenting the Gospel to the people through song. We trust they will not be slow to make the most diligent use of the talent that is hidden in a capable and consecrated voice.

If there was abundance of singing, so there was of speaking. If the young disciples can assimilate and make a practical use of all the good advice tendered to them in the three set addresses of the evening, their lives will assuredly be fruitful in those good works to which God ordains every member of the family of the faithful. Major Whittle, comparing the Christian life to a warfare, pointed out how those who enlist in Christ's army need equipment, training, and employment, if they would win at last the assurance of having fought the good fight and kept the faith. Pastor Charles Spurgeon, jun., spoke well on the words, "Go home to thy friends, and tell what great things the Lord hath done for thee." Dr. Pentecost, with "Go forward" for his text, emphasised the importance of progress and courage in the divine life.

The meeting was remarkable, not only for itself, but for what will probably come out of it. In one of his little talks, Mr. Moody said he felt full of suggestions. With him to suggest a thing is to do his utmost to bring it about. So with little ceremony, he arranged that at the close of the meeting Mr. George Williams, of the Y.M.C.A., should confer with all the young men present engaged in commercial pursuits, who had been blessed during the London work, to see what could be done in the way of giving practical and permanent shape to their energies. Those belonging to the artisan class were in like manner commended to the paternal counsel of Mr. T. A. Denny. Then the reformed drinking men were instructed to meet Mr. Robert Simpson, of Glasgow, and devise some plan of extending and consolidating the "Mizpah Band" movement. Last of all, but by no means least of all, Mr. W. T. Paton invited all the young women converts to rally round the various local Y.W.C.A.s, where they would receive a most hearty welcome, and be helped in every way in the nourishment of the Christian life.

Altogether it was a really memorable evening; to not a few, Monday, March 24, will stand out as a landmark in the annals of the Mission of 1884. Mr. Moody was so pleased with it that he announced a similar gathering at the Addison-road Hall at the close of the Mission now going on there. Converts who desire to be present should send a stamped envelope for ticket to Mr. Lindsay Brown, Addison-road Station Hall, Kensington, W.

The Addison-road Mission.

The three weeks' work of Messrs. Moody and Sankey in this far Western district began on Tuesday afternoon last week. At both of the services held on the opening day not a few souls were reaped, and the garnering has gone on, parallel with the sowing. Mr. Moody's opening address was a call to the exercise of faith on the part of the Christian workers. A portion of it will be found on a preceding page. There was an overflow-meeting at St. Matthew's Church the first evening. This building is at an inconvenient distance from the hall, but it has nevertheless been brought into constant requisition. An effort was made to secure an adjacent Mission Church for the men's testimony meetings, but the Bishop of the diocese stipulated that a clergyman should officiate, and that the Church Services must be used. We have clearly not come so near to the Millennium as a few weeks ago we had fondly hoped.

At the large hall during the week all has gone well. The afternoon meetings have been very largely attended, many "carriage folks" being conspicuous by their presence. In the evenings the seats reserved for working men have been freely taken advantage of. The power of God has been manifestly present with the word spoken and sung, and the workers have had a good time in bringing in the sheaves.

Sunday last was a busy day for preachers and singers, and a blessed one for many of those who listened to the joyful sound. In the afternoon three overflows were organised. The one in the beautiful and spacious Cadby Hall, in the Hammersmith-road, had Mr. Scroggie for preacher and Miss Beauchamp for singer. At St. Matthew's Church, Rev. William Handcock officiated. The day being mild and fine, an open-air gathering was held near the hall; and to the crowd the Gospel of the grace of God was declared by Mr. E. Trotter and others. At the meeting in the large hall 200 seats were reserved for and filled by young women employed in the leviathan establishment of Mr. Whiteley, in Westbourne-grove.

In the evening the old favourite, "What shall the Harvest be?" as sung by Mr. Sankey, paved the way for Mr. Moody's discourse, to a dense throng of men on "Sowing and Reaping." It was delivered with an earnestness and effect that cannot be described; neither can the wonderful solemnity that seemed to brood over the vast assembly, as the warning words rang out in all their naked truth and tragic import. There must have been over 500 men packed into the inquiry-room at the close, and a great majority of these rose en masse when Mr. Moody called for a confession of faith in Christ. It was one of the most striking and awe-inspiring spectacles we have witnessed in connection with these meetings during the past five months.

Messrs. Whittle and McGranahan.

The Bermondsey meetings are held in the Town Hall, Spa-road, as intimated in our last issue. It is a capacious building, most conveniently situated; for overflows not one, but three churches are at disposal. The Mission opened on Tuesday, March 25. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity. The key-note of the Mission was rung out by Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan singing John iii. 16, as the words are beautifully arranged to music in The Christian Choir. Then Major Whittle, in his clear style, displayed the Father's love to his children as manifested in "The Compassion of Jesus." The latest personal testimony to Major Whittle's power that we have heard was given by a working man, who had only been able to attend the two last meetings in Greenwich. He was clearly anxious about his spiritual condition, but not yet decided; and he expressed himself thus: "I never heard the Gospel preached like it before. If I had heard him another time, I believe he would have 'had me,' but I'll follow him to Bermondsey." With illustration and simile drawn from his own personal experience, the Major showed the power of sympathy among men, using all to enforce the leading thought that Christ receiveth sinners.

At this meeting Major Whittle requested special prayer for a fellow-countryman of his dying in consumption in an hotel in London. Mr. Moody had called to see him, but his kindly offices had been refused. We are glad to know that later on a business partner who had given himself to the Lord about four months ago at one of Mr. Moody's meetings, called on the sick man. He declared the Gospel to him, and there is good reason to hope that before he passed away he laid his sins on Jesus. Major Whittle also made excellent use of a document which he had had an opportunity of reading, and which seems to be now well known as "Lizzie's Letter." It had been sent during February by a daughter to her father, urging him to seek salvation. He simply laughed at it and put it in his pocket. But he could not forget it. It did its work. Now father, mother, and daughter are rejoicing in the Saviour, the father having settled the matter through a sermon preached by Major Whittle a fortnight ago in Greenwich.

At the close of this, the first meeting, a very large number rose to express their willingness to accept salvation, and many found the Saviour before leaving. One lady, whose early home had been in the Hebrides of Scotland, went home rejoicing over a son, born of the Spirit. Others bearing the marks of heavy toil, and who could scarcely spell their addresses, confessed to the power of God in their hearts.

The account of the week's work, briefly expressed, is that the opening blessing was richly extended all through, making it perhaps the most successful effort to reach the masses of this district which we have had to record. The result of the sermon to women on Sunday afternoon was wonderful to witness from the number who remained to the inquiry-meeting.

Mothers who have lively babies will be able to sympathise with some who, with crowing infants in arms, hung upon the lips of Major Whittle as he patiently and tenderly unfolded the treasures of grace from Isaiah 53—6, and many of them confessed to going to their homes with lighter hearts than they had ever known before, through peace with God.

Overflow-meetings have been held every night but one, nor has Mr. Thorne lacked encouragement in his work there by seeing sinners saved through the proclamation of the good news. Mr. McGranahan has received an accession of power in his work of singing for Jesus, in Mr. Earle and a large contingent of the South London Choir. The newly-formed Greenwich Male Choir, led by Mr. Knowles, also rendered excellent service on Friday evening.

Messrs. Pentecost and Stebbins.

These brethren have been engaged nightly during the past week at Bloomsbury Chapel. No sooner was the idea of their going there suggested, than the minister and other friends threw themselves into it with union and earnestness. Brethren were organised for various offices, and ladies of the church gave themselves to aid it in every way practicable. The service on the Sunday morning preceding, and the prayer-meeting on the Monday night, were made special and preparatory, and the result has been a blessing to all concerned. The congregations have been very large, growing every night deeply attentive, and often manifestly under the influence of the Spirit of God. There have been times, indeed, when in deep silence the feeling was almost more than could be borne, and while the present result has been gracious, there must be very much more than has been revealed at the time. A pleasing feature of the case, too, is that the bulk of those present were strangers, the members of the regular congregation in great measure giving up the places for those who were especially desired.

Dr. Pentecost was not before personally known to many, but has proved himself a worthy coadjutor of his fellow-ambassador, Mr. Moody. There has been no undue excitement in the services, but a deep and solemn feeling has pervaded them all. This has grown with every one. The subjects have been those of pure Gospel truth, The New Birth, Repentance towards God, Forgiveness of Sins, and Justification by Faith. These have been handled with much freshness, sometimes with characteristic raciness and humour, but altogether with so much pathos and power, that "the old, old story" was invested with a new interest. Many of the illustrations are such as certainly will never be forgotten, and the remembrance of them must be a blessing.

The preliminary exercises and the sermon generally occupied the first hour. Then an appeal more colloquial was founded upon it, and conducted with singular tact and grace, such as surely few could withstand. Numbers rose to their feet every night in response to the preacher's request, as an expression of their desire to accept the divine mercy and give themselves to Christ. The feeling of all who know most of the work is that it was one in which God was greatly honoured.

Mr. Stebbins fills Mr. Sankey's rôle, and does it with very great taste and power. Gifted with a fine voice, evidently cultured and under perfect control, his part in the services adds much to their efficiency and effect. The preacher and singer are at one in the choice of themes, and otherwise the song fittingly emphasises the prayer or the sermon. A large and sympathetic choir added very greatly also to the impression produced, and sometimes the emotions stirred in the assembly have been marked.

Taken altogether, the week, while it was anticipated with some anxiety, has been greatly enjoyed, and cannot but be remembered with blessing and praise.

Speaking of the Bible-readings in Regent-square Church, another friend says:—"Dr. Pentecost is an admirable speaker, who preaches the Gospel with great fulness and accuracy of doctrinal statement. His Bible expositions are peculiarly fitted to be stimulating to Christians, and to lead them to greater consecration in their Lord's service."

Notes and Incidents of the Work.

A young woman who was unable to attend the meeting on March 24 writes:—"I found pardon and peace on February 25 at New-cross Hall. Mr. Sankey sang 'Jesus of Nazareth passeth by,' and the few words he spoke before singing it made a deep impression on me. The awful thought of being 'too late' kept ringing in my ears. After the meeting was over I went into the inquiry-room and there met a dear young Christian worker who pointed me to Isa. liii. 5. Now I am happy in knowing that my sins are washed away in the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Two careless and godless young men (one of them a prize-fighter) entered the New-cross Hall, it is believed with the intention of scoffing at what was said. They went home, however, broken down by what they had heard and spent the night in agony of soul; next day they found peace in believing. The one who had been a prize-fighter brought a pile of books to his sister, requesting her to burn them. They had nearly driven him to hell, he said, but now God in his mercy had arrested him and saved him.

One who wrote desiring prayer on behalf of a friend, said:—When Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey were in the north of Ireland some years ago I was urged to go from a distance to attend their meetings. At one meeting Mr. Sankey sang the beautiful hymn, "I shall be whiter than snow." The stillness and solemnity that pervaded the meeting made me feel "Surely the Lord is in this place." I was for three weeks in great distress of soul; but the words of the hymn ever came up as a prayer from my sin-stricken soul, "Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow." The Lord heard my cry and blessed me with the fullest assurance that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. For weeks after this, I was possessed with such joy that often I got up to bless God during the night watches. I may say that before my conversion I had acquired more than a liking for strong drink. How often I tried in my own strength to free myself from the fetters in which I was bound hand and foot. But it was of no avail. I would yield when strongly tempted. Since the Lord came to my help against the mighty I can praise Him that He has set me free. Never once have I had even the desire to taste that which was my great snare. To my Father in Jesus be all the praise.

The singing brethren who helped Mr. McGranahan at Clapham have formed themselves into a "Gospel Male Choir," for helping in Gospel and Temperance Missions in the neighbourhood, or wherever the way may be opened. Any Christian male singers resident in the locality who may wish to join this band should apply to the Secretary, Mr. S. Burrow, 17, Linnell-road, Camberwell, S.E.

At a recent communion at Trinity Mission Hall, Battersea, where Mr. Cameron is the pastor evangelist, over sixty persons were received into Christian fellowship; of these more than forty were the direct fruits of the meetings at Lavender-hill Hall; ten of the converts had been senior scholars in the Sabbath-school. Some young men in the congregation have formed themselves into a Gospel Choir to help in the services. A branch of the Y.M.C.A. has also been formed and already has sixty members.

Spain and Belgium.

A DRAWING-ROOM meeting was held in the house of Sir Fowell and Lady Victoria Buxton on Friday, March 21, in behalf of the Foreign Evangelisation Society. This Society seeks to assist individual workers engaged in Mission work on the Continent, worthy of support, yet struggling with financial difficulties, when a small grant has often enabled such to continue a work which might otherwise have to be abandoned.

On the present occasion Pastor Albert Brocher, of Belgium, and Pastor Antonio Martinez, of Spain, gave some account of Mission work in those countries. Mr. Brocher stated that the Christian Missionary Church of Belgium, of which he is a member, has been engaged for forty years in evangelising among the Roman Catholic population, of whom 3600 are now enrolled as communicants, besides having many adherents. The converts engage in direct Mission work. The most interesting parts of the field are in and around Charlroi and Seraing, where there is a large manufacturing population.

Pastor Antonio Martinez, of Reus, told how the Inquisition had stamped out the Christian Church of the sixteenth century, of which terrible traces had not long since been found. At the Quemadera, in Madrid, when cutting for a new road, several feet in depth of the martyrs' ashes were laid bare. At Reus, in Tarragona, the pastor has preached the Gospel for many years. He is now under the necessity of building Mission premises, and for this he had come to ask for help. He was imprisoned for some weeks for the crime of preaching the Gospel to a crowd in the open-air, but he did not regret it, for he had the satisfaction of preaching to a greater number within the walls of the prison, with many tokens of blessing.

The meeting was also addressed by Sir Fowell Buxton, Rev. Henry Noel, and Mr. Donald Matheson.

SUNDAY CLOSING.—In support of the movement for the closing of public-houses throughout the whole of Sunday a numerously-attended public meeting was held last week at the Lambeth Baths, Westminster-bridge road, which added another local auxiliary to the Central Association for Sunday closing. This movement is gaining ground amongst the working classes, and when once they make their voices heard the desired result must shortly follow.

RELIGION IN PORTUGAL.—My Dear Sir,—Allow me, through you, to acknowledge the kindness of two unknown friends who for some time past have sent me your valuable and very welcome publication. I also desire the prayers of God's people in behalf of Portugal for a special reason. The Portuguese Parliament has been engaged in discussing the reform of the national charter: when the 6th article came up, which limits liberty of worship to foreigners, an attempt was made to eliminate the latter words, and leave that liberty within the reach of all. The present ministry did not feel disposed to yield, and the proposal was rejected, thus subjecting Portuguese Christians to bare toleration, while Gospel work in country places is well-nigh impossible, with priests and magistrates to interfere. We ask the Lord's people at home to pray for the speedy breaking down of this formidable barrier to the progress of the Gospel.—Yours very truly,

Robert H. Moreton.

Notes and Comments.

OUR next issue will contain a new and hitherto unpublished Sacred Song by Mr. George C. Stebbins.

The Third Annual Conference at Blackheath intended in some measure to take the place of those held in previous years at Crayford, will be held (D.V.) on Wednesday and Thursday, the 23rd and 24th inst.

A Christian literary friend who has lately examined a large number of poetical contributions says: "Most of the writers have longings which if they knew the Lord Jesus Christ could so soon be satisfied. Why is there not more happy experience in the writings of Christian verse-makers?"

If any secretaries of societies who desire their anniversary gatherings to be announced in our "May Meeting List" have not received printed forms on which to supply details, perhaps they will kindly furnish the same at their early convenience. The list will appear in our issue of April 17.

The Christian World rightly condemns as irreverent the mimicking of a Welsh sermon at the Holborn Restaurant. This was done for the special benefit of Mr. Herbert Gladstone, the guest of the occasion, who is said to have been greatly amused by Mr. Maccabe's performance. Surely there are sources of supply open to those who furnish the hilarity of festive scenes, other than that which is sacred and relates to things divine. Of all preachers and sermons those of Wales are perhaps least fitted to form objects of ridicule. The fame of the Principality in this respect, both in days gone by and at present, lifts the Welsh pulpit far above the witticisms of nineteenth century satirists.

Among current signs of the times, a growing passion for gambling must be named as fearfully prevalent. It exists among all classes and ages; even women indulge in it to an unprecedented degree. Only last week we read of the police entering a house near the Paris Bourse, and surprising twenty-six women engaged in playing a game of chance. Some of these, it was said, had been drawn in and enticed. A more demoralising and pernicious habit can scarcely be imagined. That it should gain ground in our social circles is a cause for deepest lamentation. The young cannot be too earnestly warned against any approach to it in their recreations. It is one of the most serious dangers which confront the youth of to-day.

The change which has come over French politics and religion may be inferred from the fact that a proposal to erect a monument in Paris to the memory of the illustrious Huguenot martyr, Admiral Coligny, should have received favour in the eyes of the Government and of the municipal authorities. They so far accord with this as to give as a site the actual spot where the famous Protestant champion fell, and also to contribute a sum of £1300. The appeal of M. Eugene Bersier and others to this country to join in making the monument worthy of the historical facts it is designed to commemorate, will doubtless be viewed favourably. England can but rejoice in every sign of growth in the development of Protestant sympathies in France.

With the spring a large amount of tract-distributing begins, and we are receiving continual applications for grants. Will our friends, as in years past, help us to do this, and on a larger scale than before?

A project for the erection of a fitting monument to the late Robert Moffat, in his native place, Ormiston, East Lothian, is meeting with considerable support. Any admirer of the deceased missionary who may be inclined to show practical sympathy with the movement can have details on application to Mr. T. Fairgrieve, 46, Clerk-street, Edinburgh.

One of the most excellent and saintly of men is the Rev. A. M. W. Christopher, of St. Aldate's, Oxford. It is not therefore strange that the adversary should speak evil of him. A defamatory libel has been, in a very cowardly and dastardly way, put forth concerning him, the utterer of which has been committed to take his trial for the offence. Out of evil comes good, and the circumstance which has caused so much distress to Mr. Christopher has elicited an expression of sympathy and esteem which is described by The Oxford Times as "unique." It is signed by an immense number of graduates and undergraduates of all shades of opinion, and including men whose views are in sharp antagonism to his own.

Were it not for the pain occasioned to others, Mr. Christopher might well be congratulated on a libel which has called forth such unqualified and spontaneous testimony to his worth from his fellows in the University. Among those who have signed the address are the following well known and influential gentlemen: Archdeacon Palmer, Canon of Christ Church, Oxford, Vice-Chancellor Jowett, Canon Liddon, Professor Max Müller, Principal Girdlestone, &c.

Some unpublished letters of "George Eliot's" are just now occupying the attention of the press. In one of these, speaking of the contrast between life in the country and in London, she says:—"The large sky, the not-London, makes a new creature of me in half an hour. I then ask myself why I am ever dejected, why I get so agitated and disturbed. I return to London and the air becomes again filled with demons." Probably not a few of our London readers can sympathise with this experience. It requires no ordinary degree of self-control and elevation of soul to rise above the noise and worry of city life. Those who would live as children and servants of God need large supplies of grace and strength from above to enable them to resist the tide of earthliness and greed with which they have to contend.

Rev. Paxton Hood, in his recent Sunday evening lecture on Elizabeth Barrett Browning, said that her distinguishing feature as a poet was the fulness of her Christianity. Speaking of the vagueness of this latter term he described her Christianity as being of the order of Cowper and Milton, especially of Cowper; it is Christianity secured by atonement and sealed by holiness—a Christianity in which Christ is on the cross to overcome, and his Spirit is in the Church to purify and console. In Cowper this full-orbed aspect of the truth shines out with sweet simplicity and clearness of expression; the more mystic and artistic works of Mrs. Browning scarcely produce the same effect or imprint upon the mind the same lessons. But find it where we may, true Christianity is well defined as "secured by atonement and sealed by holiness."

Facts have come to the knowledge of Mr. J. Spiers, with respect to the condition of affairs in St. Petersburg, religiously considered, that have induced him to postpone for the present his intended visit. He is now conducting successful services among the children in Cornwall. We regret to learn that the recent appeal he made in these columns for £2000, for the foreign work of the Children's Special Service Mission, has not yet met with an adequate response. The movement is one of the deepest importance, and well deserves the support of the Christian community.

In addressing a social gathering of postal employés at Victoria Hall last week, the Postmaster-General said that intemperance and betting were the two causes responsible for almost everything that happens in the staff. It was most painful to him to sign the dismissal of any official, knowing as he did the consequences it so often entailed. Still, he was gratified to find that in spite of the extra pressure put upon the employés last Christmas, more than in any year before, he had not heard of one case of intemperance amongst them. Would that all employers had the welfare of their men as much at heart as Mr. Fawcett. Such interest must bring its own reward to themselves, to their servants, and to the community at large.

It would be a great blessing to the postmen if they were delivered from another evil habit, that of smoking. We constantly meet them returning from their rounds thus badly occupied, and the lads soon learn the pernicious practice from their elders. There is abundant evidence of its demoralising tendency.

The departure of an emigrant vessel from our shores is a scene presenting few features of a cheerful character; but those who saw Miss Rye's band of orphan girls embark on board the Parisian at Liverpool last Thursday would perhaps think otherwise. Their healthy and vivacious appearance as they passed the gangway and trod the deck of the huge vessel, presented a strange contrast to the many regretful and sad adieux and partings which were to be witnessed. Their bouquets of bright spring flowers, which had been given them on their leaving London, lent a picturesque aspect to the mingled scene. A number of boys from Dr. Barnardo's Homes were also on board. The success which has in the past attended the work of transplanting these London homeless ones to Canadian soil, makes every such fresh departure a cause for gratitude.

The present is an age of money-making; well nigh every pursuit in life is made subservient to this end. At the great meeting, presided over by Lord Shaftesbury at Exeter Hall last week, Mr. Stanley Leighton, M.P., said money was a hard taskmaster, and it was incumbent on us to do all in our power to relieve the schoolmasters of England from making money out of the brains of children. It is vitally important to press an alteration of the Education Code, so far as it lays the present undue stress upon individual examination of the scholars in order to secure the Government Grant. The proposal made at the meeting referred to, viz., to make the grant more dependent on general efficiency and attendance, and at the same time to give the teachers full liberty to classify the scholars according to their capacity and requirements, is, in the interests of the whole community, right and wise.

REACHING THE OUTCASTS.*

IN visiting the pickers' barracks one evening, an old man said, "Have you got another tract like the one you gave me before? It was about the Lamb of God who takes away sin. My missus has read it twice aloud, and it just suits me. I have been a bad man, ain't I missus?" he inquired of the old woman beside him; "but it is a long lane that has no turning: and I believe what the tract says. There is mercy for me! I have been a fool to myself!'

Felix read aloud the third chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, and prayed with them.

The man added a hearty "Amen."

It was evident that God's Holy Spirit was working mightily in this old man's soul. With the gift of a Testament, the Missionary left him.

Last June, as Felix was walking through his own district in London, a costermonger stopped his donkey, and came up to him, saying—

"How are you, Sir?"

At first it was difficult to recognise the stranger, but afterwards he remembered the look and voice.

"Don't you know me?" the man said.

"I have seen you somewhere," Felix answered.

"Yes," the man replied, "down with the hoppers; that's where I was."

It was no wonder that at first sight the costermonger seemed a "stranger," for he looked so respectable now—perfectly changed in appearance.

He said—

"Last year I went to Kent for the hopping, as usual, and it was the first time in eleven years that I came home sober. When I left the ground I had six golden sovereigns, besides silver. Instead of spending my money at the public-house I went to the tent nearly every night, and although I have been a drunkard many years, now I have learnt to 'Buy my own cherries;' and through taking your advice I have a splendid little donkey—here it is!—and am doing well. Now, sir, what will you have? I should like to treat you to something! anything but drink!"

Felix replied that he did not want to receive anything. The good news he had just heard was a sufficient gift. The grateful man, however, went off, and bought a cake, which he urged him to accept.

A lady in Kent has started a coffee-tent, which has proved exceedingly popular, and in many ways so valuable that we cannot help desiring earnestly to see its benefits multiplied. In the course of one month last autumn she took at the hands of these poor people, in one garden alone, no less than eighty pounds! This money we may look upon as almost entirely the result of sobriety instead of drinking, the pennies having been saved from the public-house, and their value returned to the people in meat, groceries, bread, and wholesome drinks. For this provision the people showed immense appreciation and gratitude, expressed in their rough way.

By perpetually moving this tent in the line of work through the hop gardens, sometimes repitching it twice or even three times a day, its furniture and eatables being removed with it in a strong cart, the ladies and their servants, who helped earnestly in the work, were enabled to keep pace with the demand. Had they been even at a little distance from their customers, the people would have either lacked time to make their purchases, or in the evening would have trooped by hundreds into the town, and squandered their money in the drink shops.

ROME AND ITS PRISONS.

By CHAS. COOK.

THE first prison we visited here was the well-known Mamertine prison, where the Apostle Paul is said to have been confined before his execution. It is near the Forum, and is a small underground dungeon about twelve feet square. Permission to visit the whole of the prisons of Italy was accorded me by the authorities, and with much prayerfulness of spirit, and trust in God, we went forward. Mr. Lionel Cole (nephew to the late Lord Congleton) having joined us, and Madame Rosetti being our interpreter, we started for the two prisons of Tre Fontane, about four miles outside the gate of St. Paul.

One of the prisons joins the three churches built on the place where he was executed, and down the Via Ostia, the very road and over the same stones which Paul trod on his way to death, we went. I remember how eagerly four years ago the poor chained inmates accepted the little books we offered them, and I thought how much better it would be if it was possible to give them the Word of God. We found the Governor very polite; on my offering him a very neatly bound gilt-edged book, containing portions of the Scriptures, he accepted it with many thanks, and we were soon busy among the convicts themselves, whose delight was unbounded at getting something to read. The majority of them we found were able both to read and write. They seemed well cared for, had plenty of clothes, and the prison was well ventilated, whilst out of 655 men only five were in hospital; the sad thing was they were in chains, which differ in weight according to the class of the prisoner.

The second prison is about a mile farther on, in a valley of the Campagna, and here again after inspecting the place we offered both to officials and captives our books, which alas! soon ran out. Fortunately Mr. Cole had quite a number of Mr. Moody's address, "Where art thou?" which Madame Rosetti had translated for him, and these came in very opportunely, and were also distributed, till with empty pockets we drove back to Rome, blessing God for being permitted thus to work.

The Castle of St. Angelo, built by the Emperor Hadrian, is now used as a fortress and a military prison, and here again we scattered amongst the soldiers the truth which could set them free, besides a large number of the address Mr. Cole had had printed.

We next went to the large prison of Regina Cœli, in the Via Julia, Rome. On this occasion we were accompanied by Mr. James Wall, who with his wife has laboured so steadfastly for the past twenty years in this city. No one could have been more kind to us than the Governor, who told us that he had found that kindness with firmness was the best means of dealing with these poor, degraded beings. He took us all over the place and then on to a separate part where there were nearly 100 of the worst criminals with long sentences, many of them for life, most of them having been guilty of homicide. We again began by offering the Governor a copy which he gladly took. He gave us permission to give our books to the convicts, which we very quickly did. He told us of one case which drew out our sympathies.

A young man, who had been very bad indeed, he took under his special care, and he told us that soon after "he was so changed by kindness that it was now quite a pleasure to have anything to do with him." And he added, "he has an excellent mother." Having only a single book left, I specially requested him to be sure and give it to this particular young man, which he promised to do. We left the place thanking the Director for his courtesy, and praying that God would bless his own Word.

On Sunday, the 17th Feb., we preached in the Scotch Church at 3, and at Dr. Young's at 8; whilst on the following night a crowded meeting was held in Dr. Young's drawing-room, where Miss Perks, of Winchester, gave an account of the work among the soldiers. Signor Cappilini told of blessing in the Italian army, and we described our journey, and sought the prayers of those present on our mission.

COSTERMONGERS' COTTAGE MISSION.—Mr. Walter Penrose has issued the twelfth annual report of his work amongst costermongers in the City-road. It represents a good deal of hard, earnest work, which has not been unrewarded in the salvation of souls.

SUNDAY EVENINGS IN LODGING-HOUSES.—None but those who have visited these places would credit the misery and wretchedness existing in them. Foul air and the heat from the enormous fire which is usually burning makes it a luxury to breathe the air again. But it is worth a little inconvenience to take the Gospel to the poor creatures who are thus living without hope and without God in the world. It is encouraging to see how readily they listen to the glad message, and the delight they show at the hymns which we sing. They welcome us heartily, and seem to look forward to our visits every week. Our work is connected with the Hyde Park Mission, conducted by Mr. Charles Cook. Will not more Christians take up this work? A. J. McKENZIE.

Mission Work in the Far West.

AMONG the poor known as the "bottoms" in Denver City, Colorado, there exists a fearful amount of spiritual destitution. There are 5000 people without pastor or church, and hundreds of children running at large. The population mostly consists of railroad men, men of the roundhouse, the smelter, the foundry, brick-masons, carpenters, teamsters, &c., a good, honest class of people. Like sheep without a shepherd, they wander on in their sinful course, making shipwreck of faith, and too often degenerating into an utter neglect of those things which pertain to their eternal welfare.

A brother who has recently arrived in the city of Denver writes: "I want you to be kind enough to do your best to interest our English friends in our effort to establish and build The People's Tabernacle. It is the first real effort which has been made in active Mission work in this city, and there is a strong opposition to it where there ought to be most help. There is, however, a great need, for the wickedness of the place is beyond description. I ask the earnest prayers of all Christian workers, and should any be willing to send a little help to you, I know you would not mind forwarding it on."

This effort of Pastor Uzzell is undoubtedly of great interest, and deserves our warmest support as much as it needs our earnest prayers. The ground is already secured on which to build the proposed People's Tabernacle, and we trust help sufficient will be forthcoming to raise a Mission Station amid the habitations of sin.

The writer expects to leave for the Rocky Mountains in a few days, to do Mission work in this very district; he will most gladly convey any free-will offerings which may be sent to him in aid of this needy work. J. H. Phillips.

The Open-Air Mission.

THE thirty-first annual meeting of the Open-Air Mission was held on Tuesday, March 25, the Lord Mayor presiding, supported by Lord Shaftesbury, Mr. John Macgregor (Rob Roy), Rev. Thain Davidson, and others.

The report showed that the Mission employs eight hundred preachers, who during the year had visited some five hundred towns and villages and over three hundred fairs, races, &c. The Chairman spoke of the importance of the work, alluding to his own efforts in days gone by in St. Giles. He had worked for a great many years under Lord Shaftesbury in the society for holding evangelistic services in theatres and music-halls. That was an excellent movement in the winter, while the Open-air Mission was still more so in the summer.

Lord Shaftesbury, in a very clear and vigorous speech, said he was old enough to remember when open-air preaching was looked upon as one of the worst things that could be mentioned, while the magistrates viewed it as having a tendency to sedition. But a wonderful change had taken place. They had now the chief magistrate of the City presiding over their meeting, and preachers are now seldom molested. He maintained that the work was one of vast importance. It adapted itself to all circumstances and conditions, and was dependent upon nothing but the weather, and he was convinced that the effects it was producing would be deep and lasting on the country. This great country was not kept in order by the police or military forces, but mainly by that principle of self-control which found its way into the hearts of all true freemen and Christians. It had been said that the Mission was hostile to the churches and chapels, but that was not so; he had no hesitation in saying that it would help very much to fill them, as long as true and God-like men could be found who would exert themselves in the cause of religion.

Sermon Lane Mission.

THE annual meeting of this well-known Mission was held on the evening of Tuesday week at Myddelton Hall, Islington. The chair was taken by Mr. Joseph Surr.

Robert Hall is stated to have said, that if he wished to conceal a matter he would put it inside the report of a religious society, so uninteresting were these documents in his day. This remark could not apply to the report read by Mr. Cooksey, the Secretary to Sermon Lane Mission, for more than one speaker during the evening bore testimony to the attractive manner in which its very interesting contents had been arranged. The Mission, it would appear, has never been in a more flourishing condition. The Gospel services, in the Hall, had been sustained with unflagging interest, numbers of persons having been unable, from the crowded state of the apartment, to gain admission in the evening. This fact, it was subsequently observed by one of the gentlemen who addressed the meeting, seemed to foreshadow the necessity of an appeal to the public ere long, for an enlargement of the premises. Open-air services were also held, while many subsidiary efforts of usefulness had sprung up in the Mission, such as a mothers' meeting well-attended; a class of one hundred girls taught the use of the needle by Mrs. Lewis, a library, a flourishing band of hope, a night-school, Bible-classes, an overflowing Sunday-school, a penny bank, which had received £250 in deposits, and a flower show, with two hundred exhibits, free breakfast to the poor, &c. The report further spoke of midnight meetings having been held for the fallen women with whom the district unhappily abounds. Twenty-seven of these had accepted the offered shelter of a home. Domestic visitation to the families of the poor had likewise been kept up by the Superintendent, and it was truly observed, that if some of the wealthier subscribers to the Mission would occasionally join him in these visits, their own homes and furniture would shine with a new lustre on their return to them.

The meeting was addressed by Revs. Gordon Calthrop, W. M. Statham, A. Rowland, Mr. Hill, and by Messrs. Malcolm, W. Haig Miller, Gawin Kirkham, and others. In suitable and appreciated addresses, these friends expressed their sympathy with a Mission, which by its activities in doing good is a practical reply to the verbiage of secularism—which talks, while it works.

It was impossible not to be struck on considering the small sum on which so much good is effected by Sermon Lane Mission—a sum which would not amount to a quarter of that stated to be sometimes expended on flowers at a West-end evening party. How largely the ghastly features of "Horrible London" would be mitigated by the multiplication of such agencies, and better relations, by means of them, be established between rich and poor.

GOSPEL TENTS FOR SCOTLAND.—Mr. W. Gourley writes that he is increasingly impressed with the importance of utilising tents for Gospel work in the rural parts of Scotland, especially the east and north, during the summer months. He is anxious to enlist the co-operation of other Christians in extending the movement. If any friends are desirous of using them for a month or two, he will arrange to supply the tents. Communications on the subject should be addressed to Mr. Gourley, whose address for the next two months will be 11, Tipperlinn-road, Edinburgh.

SHELTERING HOMES, LIVERPOOL.—The nineteenth band of young Canadian emigrants from these Homes, consisting of eighty fine little lads from five to fifteen years of age, left the Mersey on Thursday afternoon, March 20, on board the Sardinian, of the Allan line. Mrs. Birt has not herself crossed the ocean this time, as she waits to take another party later in the season. Any help in clothing, or funds for the passages for the band of 100 girls she is now preparing, will be very welcome, as there are a larger number of children in the Homes this winter than in any previous one. The address of the Sheltering Homes is Byrom-street, Liverpool.

In the Valley.

POOR victim of fears,
Is thy Counsellor perished?
Oft telling thy tears,
Poor victim of fears,
Consider the years
He hath loved thee and cherished;
Poor victim of fears,
Is thy Counsellor perished?

In the palms of his hands
Thy name is engraven,
Securely it stands
In the palms of his hands.
Oh the faith this demands
From thy spirit so craven!
In the palms of his hands
Thy name is engraven.

Go, ponder the past,
Cease thy sad unbelieving;
Blest record thou hast,
Go, ponder the past.
If in trial now cast,
Is there warrant for grieving?
Go, ponder the past,
Cease thy sad unbelieving.

The Figueras Mission.

AS I cannot write many letters till my sight gets stronger, I should like to communicate with the friends of this Mission through your pages. Our hearts have been greatly cheered by seeing another soul brought "out of darkness into marvellous light" through the instrumentality of God's Word. A poor peasant walked for seven hours from his mountain home on purpose, as he said, "to have a Christian conference with the pastor at Figueras." He spent a couple of hours in earnest conversation with him, and told how that for some time past he had been studying the Bible, and became convinced that the teaching of the Church of Rome was false. With all his heart he embraced "the truth as it is in Jesus," and at once left off going to mass. The priest was very angry, and said that if he insisted on reading the Bible he would order his wife to leave him. As the man remained firm the threat was carried out, and his wife packed up her clothes and left her husband. "What did you do then?" asked Pastor Rodriguez. "I went," he replied, "into my room alone and spent an hour in prayer to our Lord for her. And will you believe it, I had no sooner finished praying than she returned home, and said she would never leave me again!" His anxiety to learn more of the truth was very touching. We told him we hoped soon to visit his village to preach the Gospel there. "That would be very good, but the people are such strong Catholics they might harm you." "Nevertheless we will go if the Lord will," answered the pastor. We trust that this convert may prove a bright light in this dark village.

We should be so thankful had we funds to pay the salary of an evangelist, to help us in evangelising the sixty-two villages and small towns around us. We have been encouraged during the past two weeks by the addition of thirteen new children to our schools. In Spain it is of the utmost importance to secure the children, for in the grown-up people there is so much to unlearn. It is sweet work bringing the little ones to Jesus that He may bless them. We trust that many of our dear Spanish children may be "our joy and crowns of rejoicing" when He cometh to make up his jewels.

OUR SAILORS.—Few persons are more exposed to temptation than sailors ashore, and any endeavour to reach them is of great importance. An extensive work of this kind is being carried on in Glasgow; all vessels in dock being visited by Christian workers, who leave books and tracts with the sailors, and thus introduce the influence of the Gospel. Help gratefully received by Mr. R. H. Hunter, 27, Jamaica-street, Glasgow.

JOSEPH COOK on HEALING BY PRAYER.

IN his last received Boston Monday Lecture, Rev. Joseph Cook deals with this subject as follows:—

"Ought the Church to endeavour to restore the ministry of healing by prayer?"

This question has an exegetical, an historical, and a scientific aspect. Those who believe in the possibility of healing certain diseases by prayer appear to me to be right in maintaining exegetically that the immediate disciples of our Lord were commissioned and empowered by Him to exercise by prayer a ministry of healing. The question in dispute is whether this was a permanent commission or one intended only for the opening ages of Christianity. My conviction is that the New Testament Scriptures do not authorise us to expect now such miracles as occurred in the apostolic age. Nevertheless, I am convinced that prayer for the sick, with the use of the best known remedies of a physical kind, is always a Christian duty, and that very special blessings are promised in the New Testament as the results of such petitions offered in faith.

Historically these promises seem to have had occasional fulfilment in the very highest spiritual moods of certain circles of devout believers. As I do not admit exegetically that the power of working actual miracles was promised to believers in all ages, so I am not as yet convinced historically that any actual miracles of healing have been wrought.

Nevertheless, scientifically regarded, the question whether disease can be cured by prayer is one to be answered like any other in science, by the methods of exact research. Investigation of this subject is extremely important on account of the large numbers who are deluded, if miraculous healing is not a modern fact, but especially on account of the re-enforcement that would accrue to Christian faith if it is a fact. Inquiry on such a theme should not be closed by the assumption that the age of miracles is past. Observation, induction, the scientific method must settle this case.

It is greatly to be desired that those who believe in healing by prayer should accumulate lists of cases of the cure of organic diseases by faith. It is by no means denied that many functional diseases, especially those resulting from the multitudinous forms of nervous disorder, have been healed by the ministry of prayer. Sceptics affirm that these cases of cure may be accounted for by wholly natural causes. What is necessary for their conviction is a series of legally verifiable detailed cases of the cure of (1) organic disease; (2) pronounced such by competent physicians; (3) given up by them as hopeless; (4) but cured by prayer; and (5) the cure attested by its permanence.

In a large amount of reading on this theme I have found but one apparent example of such healing, and that is the alleged recovery of the wife of Dr. Asa Mahan from cancer which had been pronounced incurable by experts in the treatment of that disease. For evident reasons it is difficult to multiply public records in such matters of sacred private experience; but when physicians are themselves cured, as it is alleged they sometimes have been, of organic disease by prayer, they ought to be able to make such a record of their experience as to convince sceptical physicians.

Pastor Blumhardt, in whose parish, no doubt, wonderful cures of nervous diseases took place in answer to prayer, was asked by a professor of the medical faculty of the University of Tübingen, to give him scientific proof that such healing had occurred. Blumhardt opened a drawer and left the professor alone for hours to examine the letters that cured persons had written, as to their own experiences and with the corroborating recorded testimony of physicians. This evidence was treated with respect by the professor. Mr. Henry Drummond, author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," visited Blumhardt's Institution, and was convinced that functional diseases were cured there by prayer. Professor Christlieb is of the same opinion. Not a few careful investigators of Dr. Cullis's remarkable work in Boston, adopt, whether rightly or wrongly, the same view as to merely functional disorders. But the real question concerns organic diseases, and only the strictly scientific method of research can settle it.

Liverpool Evangelisation Society.

THE annual meeting of this society was held on Thursday, March 20. It was well attended by a number of ministers and influential gentlemen, several of whom gave varied and valuable testimony to the great good the society is doing in the city and neighbourhood.

There are about thirty volunteer preachers. An assistant secretary has been appointed, thus increasing the liabilities of the society. Every effort is made to bring the Gospel to the neglected masses, by tent and open-air work in summer, special Missions in halls, churches, chapels, &c., in the winter time. The workers have been permitted to see good and permanent results, in sinners being brought to Christ. Funds are greatly needed at present.

The Secretary is Mr. Thos. Lydiatt, 3, Hackin's Hey, Liverpool.

Our Working Girls.

A WELL-ATTENDED drawing-room meeting was held on Thursday evening, March 27, at the Conference Hall, Mildmay-park, under the presidency of the Earl of Aberdeen, in aid of the proposed extension of the Kingsland Institute for Working Girls and Nursing Association to women and girls in the neighbourhood of Stoke Newington and Kingsland.

Mr. Hoskin, Hon. Surgeon to the Mission, read a statement of the past work. This has comprised an evening school and club, a mothers' meeting, a coal and blanket club, three Bible-women nurses, a Bible-woman. The Mission has been carried on for the past nine years, and it is now proposed to open a permanent Institute and Mission House at Kingsland, under the care of an efficient resident matron. The Institute is to be founded with a threefold object: To provide (1) an evening club for working girls residing in the neighbourhood; (2) temporary sleeping accommodation in special cases; (3) an invalid kitchen.

A very large number of girls, varying in age from 14 to 20, earn their livelihood in the neighbourhoods of Stoke Newington and Kingsland as day workers, being employed as laundresses, step cleaners, charwomen, &c. There is great need of a safe shelter for them after working hours and on Sundays, in order to prevent them from spending their time in the streets.

The Chairman spoke earnestly of the great need of increased effort among this class of young women.

Mr. George Holland said that from his own long experience in Whitechapel he could testify to the blessed results obtained by the exercise of loving sympathy by Christian ladies towards the lowest of their sisters. Both he and one of the succeeding speakers, Rev. M. Washington, dwelt much on the fact that the time and resources of Christians are not their own, but the Lord's, and must be consecrated to his service. Rev. Dr. Edmond and Rev. W. Spensley spoke heartily of the incalculable benefit of the work of trained nurses among the sick poor. Mr. E. Trotter, Mr. Paton, Mr. T. A. Denny, and Mr. J. E. Mathieson also commended the work.

Arrangements have been made for taking very suitable premises for the proposed Institute, not far from Dalston Junction. We trust there will be no lack of means to meet the increased expenditure and to support the Nursing Association. The Treasurer is Mrs. Hutchinson, 15, Cavendish-square, W., and the Hon. Superintendent is Miss E. Robarts, 120, Stamford-hill, N., either of whom will gladly give any information and receive help.

Revival Work in the United States.

DEAR SIR,—Some of us were sorry to read in the note from Dr. Cuyler in The Christian of February 28, "This has been in every sense a cold winter in America. The spiritual thermometer has run almost as low as 'Farenheit.' I do not remember a season in which there have been so few revivals, and such a lack of conversions."

I do not know what opportunities Dr. Cuyler may have had in learning of this general desolation, but certainly it has rather surprised us. I have not been in the neighbourhood of Brooklyn, so that I cannot answer for our brother's own city, but I have been over a considerable area this winter and have been in correspondence with pastors east and west, besides meeting Christian workers from all over the country, all of whom testify that this winter has been a specially joyful harvest-time.

During the past few years there has been a dearth, and a dearth most depressing. Theological squabbling has been the order of the day for some time, and many pastors have been unconsciously diverted from the preaching of the Gospel to engage in these tiresome controversies. Some of them, however, have been taught that the divine Word will vindicate itself when preached in prayerful dependence on the Spirit of God, and to this now they are giving greater attention. So that throughout the country there has been "the sound of abundance of rain." My own heart has been rejoicing in precious seasons of revival, and I know of many pastors who have had large accessions to their churches.

From the West has come the tidings of revivals, not a few of which have been deep and widespread, for all of which we thank God and take courage. Even now, as I write, my mail has come to hand, in which is a postal from a well-known worker. I subjoin an extract: "God is giving blessings in the Missions among the outcasts in New York, though not much interest in the churches, that I hear of." Is it not thus that the elect are being gathered out in every country? "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world?"

There has been added interest throughout the land this past week in the study of the Sunday-school lesson. The subject, "The Coming of the Lord," has been much ignored as unworthy of attention. Heretofore, preachers and theologians have denounced a personal literal return of our Lord to this earth as a belief worthy only of fanatics. They do so still, and possibly will continue to wage war against this ancient faith of the Church. Yet now some strong men, clerical and lay, have been so overwhelmingly convinced of the truth, in their enforced study of such a forbidden subject, that post-millennialists are somewhat rebuked and silenced. Even leading journals have sought to expound the lesson (1 Thess. iv. 13—18; 2 Thess. v. 1—8) on the basis of a candid exegesis. We look for much good to come from this recent study, which at this time could not be shirked; and doubtless thousands more will be added to the company of those who daily wait for their Lord from heaven.

I have been in Providence, R.I., during the past seven weeks. My next field, D.V., is Philadelphia, commencing April 1.

In best bonds,

George C. Needham.

MR. QUARRIER'S LITTLE EMIGRANTS.—On Thursday last the Orphan Home Hall in James Morrison-street, Glasgow, was crowded to bid God-speed to 124 boys from Mr. Quarrier's Orphan Home, Bridge of Weir, who left for Canada on Saturday. Mr. Quarrier said in the course of the proceedings that the number of boys rescued had much increased; the number now leaving was 30 more than had been sent last year. This year 220 boys and girls would be sent, each would cost £10 for an outfit. Out of the 1250 children already sent they had reports that 95 per cent. of them were doing well. The homes at the Bridge of Weir numbered 16, but he was anxious to have 32, to accommodate 800 children.

DR. BARNARDO'S YOUNG EMIGRANTS.

AS stated in our last issue, Dr. Barnardo recently gave an address at the Noon Prayer-meeting, Aldersgate-street, when there were present a number of boys who had been in his training Homes, and who sailed for Canada in the Parisian on Thursday last. We give as much of his address as our space will allow:—

"The Emigration Department of our work was begun only one year and ten months ago. During that time, including the present party, a total of 304 boys and girls will have been sent to South Africa, New Zealand, Australia, and Canada, the Dominion receiving by far the largest number. Among the sixty boys now going out, only five have both parents living; fifteen possess a mother only, three have fathers only, thirty-two have no parents, and fifteen have not even a solitary friend in the wide world. Of those whose fathers are living, it is necessary to state that every one of the latter are either criminal, vicious, or hopelessly incapacitated from earning a living. We never receive boys who have fathers able to work, or mothers capable of supporting their children. Our doors have always been open to any case of real destitution, and I trust will continue so.

"These sixty lads represent widely different localities, coming from different parts of London, Birmingham, Tunbridge, Bridgewater (Somerset), Coatbridge, Statham (Norwich), Chelmsford, Romford, Waltham Abbey, Llanelly (Wales), Gateshead, Newcastle, Richmond, Kingston-on-Thames, Ilford, Cheam (Surrey), Manchester, and Bristol, while two come from Paris. They are the "advance party" of this year's exodus. I hope, if funds are forthcoming, that at least three hundred or three hundred and fifty boys and girls will be sent out this year. The cost of a thoroughly good outfit, and the necessary expenses of transit, has hitherto been £10 per head, not a very large sum, when it is borne in mind that for this we can practically settle a boy or girl for life. I hope this party will not cost more than £9 each, and that in future we may be able to keep the individual cost down to that sum."

Having dwelt on the great care needed in the choice of suitable situations in Canada, and on the importance of periodical visitation of the boys and girls in their new homes, Dr. Barnardo continued: "Of course, in the presence of the boys, I cannot say much of their past experience, but I will briefly give you a statement as to two of them, which will show the marvellous transformation that, by God's blessing, Canadian life will effect for them. One of these lads (whom I will call John) was born in Bristol. He is now about sixteen years of age. His father was an itinerant vendor of ice-creams, and the boy, for many years, frequented common lodging-houses in various parts of the country with him. Eventually the father, after much and long-continued cruelty, deserted him, since which time the lad has been living at common lodging-houses, or when he could not gather money on the streets to do this, he slept about in sheds, or where he could. The poor fellow kept honest under great temptation, though he had not a friend in the world, excepting the lady who noticed his sad condition, and brought him under my observation. At his age no ordinary Home would open its doors to him, and having a father somewhere, he would be ineligible for any Orphanage. I was glad to take the poor fellow in at once, and, having found him to be industrious, honest, and well disposed (and it is only such we can emigrate), he was admitted among this party, going to seek their fortunes in far-off Canada.

"James's case is even sadder. His mother was a confirmed mendicant, tramping about from one place to another the greater part of the year, during which time the boy has slept in tramps' kitchens, common lodging-houses, in hall doors, or if in the country, under the hedges, or in any place where he could find a shelter. Occasionally they were compelled by stress of weather to seek a refuge in the workhouse, and James thought the workhouse "first rate," much better than sleeping out. But the particular paradise of his recollection was the common lodging-house, because, as he said, in explanation, 'There was a fine fire there, and you could go as close as you liked, and lay down at it as long as you liked.' Poor fellow! the mother and he got parted somehow, and he had to hunt for himself as best he could, until he was discovered by a kind-hearted woman, who kept a lodging-house near Romford, asleep behind a waterbutt in the back yard. Pitying the boy, she applied for relief to a lady in the neighbourhood, who brought him under my notice. James is now twelve, and a very jolly little fellow he looks. I have no doubt we shall get him a capital home on the other side of the sea.

"Many of the other cases are quite as interesting as these, but what I have said will be enough to show you what the raw material is like. Now by God's grace we must endeavour to manufacture them into good, hard-working men. I earnestly hope and pray that all of them who have not yet decided to serve the Lord will take Him this day as their Friend, their Saviour, and their Guide.

CONTINENTAL AND FOREIGN NOTES.

FREE ITALIAN CHURCH.

SIGNOR CONTI, Rome, reports that in the thirteen years of his work more than three hundred persons have come under deep concern, and abandoned the Church of Rome. Many, through persecution, have not the courage of an open adherence to the truth; but the crowds of sympathisers prove that the masses are no longer slaves of Popery, and a leavening is in process for greater results. Superstitions are disappearing. Greater consecration is apparent with the converts.

AMERICAN INDIANS.

Near Dakota, at the Rev. T. L. Riggs' Mission Station, the Sioux and Dakota Red Indians recently held their anniversary meetings. Over 240 delegates, some of whom came from a distance of 300 miles, were present. The most prominent native preacher was David Grey-cloud, the "Moody" of his people. Their congregation numbers about 800 members, and there is a prospect of a large increase. Missionary work among these Indians is receiving God's blessing.—Wahrheitszeugen.

ONTARIO, CANADA.

There is at the present time a great wave of blessing passing over Upper Canada. Union meetings have been held in the Town Hall, Bradford, with a nightly attendance of from 500 to 600. Some 200 people have professed to finding rest in the finished work of Christ, and many of the saints have been strengthened and built up in the faith. Special services are now being held in the Scotch Settlement Church and at Mount Pleasant. Any tracts, books, &c., for distribution will be gladly received, addressed to F. G. Newton, P.O., Bradford, Simcoe, Ontaro.

The Gospel in Russia.

DEAR SIR,—By the time this reaches you Mr. and Mrs. Radcliffe will have left St. Petersburg for Helsingfors. As many of your readers have been praying for their work here, it may cheer and encourage such to know that the work has been greatly blest.

Amongst the English and American residents there have been many brought to Christ, especially amongst the young. I have never seen so many young people brought under the power of the truth in our church before. Last Sunday they had themselves arranged for a meeting from 8 to 9 p.m., though we had had seven services that day before. Mrs. and Miss Radcliffe have been holding four services a week with ladies. I am glad to say arrangements have been made to continue three of these. Miss Radcliffe remains for the present to conduct the meeting for young ladies.

Those of us who know Christ have been stimulated and helped. I trust we may go forward more earnestly and successfully to spread our great Master's Kingdom. We ask our English brethren to join with us in thanking God for his goodness and in praying that the work began may be continued after the workers are gone.—Truly yours, J. D. KILBURN.

St. Petersburg, March 22.

A MISSIONARY FAREWELL.

ON Wednesday evening, March 26, Lord Radstock's hall in Eccleston-street, near Victoria station, was filled by a numerous gathering of friends. They had assembled in response to Mr. and Mrs. Grattan Guinness' invitation to a conversazione and farewell meeting, on the occasion of the departure of another band of missionaries from Harley-house. Lord Radstock himself is in Rome, but Lady Radstock and many other well-known friends of Missions were present. Mr. Stevenson Blackwood, who was to have presided, was unable from illness to do so.

After a pleasant hour of social intercourse, the large platform was filled about eight o'clock, and the outgoing band of missionaries were commended to God in prayer. There were four bound to the Congo, to reinforce the Livingstone Inland Mission—Messrs. Richards, McKittrick, and Glenesk, with Miss Birch, who this week is to become Mrs. Richards. One brother, Mr. Adamson, was starting for China, and three—Messrs. Probert, Phillips, and Stevenson—for the Western States of America. Mr. George Soltau, who is also leaving shortly for America, was present on the platform.

Mrs. GUINNESS gave a brief review of the six years' history of the Livingstone Inland Mission. Over forty missionaries during the last six years have gone out in connection with it. Nine have laid down their lives for Africa, and others have been obliged, through failure of health, to abandon the field. Seventeen are still on the Congo, and four are now going out. There are seven stations, stretching nearly 400 miles into the interior. The remarkable rapidity with which—when in the providence of God the time was come for it—Africa was being opened up to civilisation and Christianity, was dwelt upon. Surely the hand of God in history was never more obvious. Africa's day of grace has come at last! The churches at home must press forward with adequate zeal in the work of evangelising this new world in the Dark Continent.

There was not time for all the outgoing missionaries to speak, but all rose and stood beside Mrs. Guinness on the platform. Three of them were starting for the Rocky Mountain Region of the Western States of America, in response to the urgent appeal for evangelists which is coming from Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, and Kansas. One brother goes to China, in connection with the British and Foreign Bible Society. Mr. Harry Guinness commended the outgoing band in earnest prayer to God. Mr. George Soltau also spoke a few cheery words.

Dr. Christlieb, of Bonn, who was present, gave the departing band a touchingly appropriate text, spoken of the disciples on the Mount of Transfiguration, "When they had looked round about, they saw no man save Jesus only with themselves."

Over 300 missionaries and evangelists have gone out from Mr. Guinness's Training Institute since its foundation ten years ago. One hundred young men and women are now preparing themselves to follow. The expenditure on the Livingstone Congo Inland Mission alone is between five and six thousand pounds a year, so that our friends need the generous co-operation of many in the prosecution of their important enterprises. The passages and outfits of this large party of labourers absorb no small sum, and it is only the first of the season. There are more to follow!

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for the ensuing week:—April 6, John xvii. 14—26; April 7, John xviii. 1—14; April 8, John xviii. 15—24; April 9, John xviii. 28—40; April 10, John xix. 1—15; April 11, John xix. 16—30; April 12, John xix. 31—42.

LATYMER-ROAD MISSION.—On Wednesday evening, the 19th inst., a free tea was given to about one hundred men in the new hall of the Mission, at the invitation of Ned Wright, who afterwards conducted a well-attended evangelistic service. The audience comprised a class of men who never attend a place of worship of any kind, and it was encouraging to notice how they were influenced by the speaker's words. Ned Wright has kindly promised to give addresses here on April 2 and 16.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith in Edinburgh.

SINCE my last report, the Lord's work in the hands of these brethren has increased in interest and in soul-winning results. The return to the Free Assembly Hall, with its associations of former Gospel triumphs, was a distinct gain; and in point of aggressive equipment, the evangelists cannot complain. Unfortunately, the ministers of the city have been conspicuous by their absence, both from the noon prayer-meeting and from the evangelistic services. I cannot doubt but there must be some good reason for this apparent neglect; whatever be the cause the fact is greatly to be deplored, and it has unquestionably exercised an unfavourable effect on the gatherings.

Many interesting cases of personal dealing come under our notice: I may mention one that was narrated at the noon prayer-meeting. One of the workers came across a man from the Highlands, where sudden conversions, assurance of salvation, and a happy Christian face, are sometimes apt to be regarded with suspicion. He found the inquirer really anxious, but bristling with theological difficulties, as to election, human inability, waiting for the Holy Spirit, &c.; to add to the difficulty, his supply of shorter catechism and proof texts, for purposes of offence and defence, seemed practically unlimited. The worker, whose Biblical armoury was comparatively circumscribed, was quite nonplussed; but he had what the other had not—he had God to look to. With a prayer for guidance, he suddenly said: "Let us put the Bible aside for a moment." "What!" said the other, "be saved without the Bible?" "It is Christ who saves, my friend; the Bible is the lamp that the Holy Ghost uses to reveal Christ to our souls." "Then all the more reason for us to look into the lamp to see the way to Christ." "Nay, my friend, you would not, surely, on a dark, unknown road, gaze into the lamp that lighted you to find your way. It would only dazzle your eyes and confuse you." The inquirer admitted the relevancy of the remark, and took refuge in the question of faith, ringing the usual changes on appropriating faith, saving faith, &c. "We'll put aside faith also for a little," said the worker, "and fix our minds on the Saviour." He lifted up Christ before the eyes of the argumentative procrastinator, and He who of old promised to do it, drew the poor sinner to Himself.

Our evangelists have introduced a novelty into our city in the way of practical working. Instead of resting on the Saturday, they make Friday their holiday, because as Mr. Fullerton remarked at our preliminary conference, the caterers for the unconverted public find Friday the worst night of the week, and Saturday the best. Taking a leaf out of their book, they rest on the worst night, and give a "Service of Song" as likely to be popular, on what is confessedly the popular night of the week. The plan is useful as an excellent advertisement of the other meetings, and particularly of the Sunday services, which are almost sure to be crowded in consequence. D. A. Moxey.

Mission Appeals.

Mr. R. Everett appeals for funds towards an unsectarian chapel built at Te Puke, New Zealand, the only place of worship for a large district. The cost is £220, of which £90 are appealed for from the mother-country. Address: 8, The Paragon, Streatham-hill, S.W.

Edmonton.—A good work is being done among the poorer classes of Edmonton. The cottage-rooms now occupied are too small to accommodate the numbers who attend. The friends engaged in the Mission are of the working class, therefore have not the means of extending the work. They much desire to have a tent during the summer, or to purchase an iron room. Further information from Miss L. Godfrey, 11, Chesnut-terrace, Chesnut-road, Tottenham.

Palestine.—Rev. J. Wells, of Glasgow, by request of the Jewish Missions Committee of the Free Church of Scotland, has gone to Palestine, to inquire as to the most suitable placefor planting a Mission station.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES.

STOCKWELL BRANCH.

A SOCIAL meeting of members was held on March 27, presided over by Mr. H. S. Foster, when addresses were delivered by Messrs. H. Swift (Hon. Sec.), W. G. Friend, and W. Hind Smith. Several new members were received.

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES.

The annual meeting of this Association was held on March 20, in the Albany Hall, Captain Cundy presided. Mr. Frank Newsom, the Hon. Sec., read an encouraging report of the year's work. Mr. Hind Smith spoke on the work of the Y.M.C.A. as an ally of church work in general.

GLASGOW.

There was a large attendance of young men on Friday night in the Christian Institute, to celebrate the sixtieth annual meeting of the United Y.M.C.A. Mr. George Macfarlane presided. Mr. Oatts, Secretary, submitted an encouraging report, showing an increase of 309 in the membership during the year. Between three and four thousand organised canvassers are at present engaged in the attempt to gather as many as possible of the 105,000 young men in Glasgow into the Associations. They are receiving great encouragement in their labour of love.

WINNIPEG, CANADA.

Sir,—I would ask your readers to request their friends who come here to call at our Rooms. Especially I would call the attention of pastors to the desirability of giving young men, leaving their congregations, letters of introduction. We will endeavour to bring such into church relationship and to be of such service to them as we can. It is worth a great deal to a stranger to start right and to make desirable acquaintances at the outset, and to know where he may go for counsel or reliable information.

Our rooms are at 445, Main-street, not more than ten minutes' walk from the Railway Station. They are very comfortable and home-like, and we shall always be pleased to welcome strangers.

A circular recently signed by all the Protestant clergymen of the City testifies to our cordial relationship with the churches.—Yours very truly, C. M. Copeland, Gen. Sec.

IRELAND.

In visiting the Associations in the south and west of Ireland, Mr. Hind Smith reports that he met with a considerable number of earnest Christian young men who have been converted through the recent meetings held by Mr. Moody, Mr. Sankey, Major Whittle, and Mr. McGranahan. At meetings held in Waterford the Bishop of the Diocese, in presiding, spoke in most thankful terms of the blessing that these meetings have been to the district.

The Limerick branch of the Association is now revived, and a considerable number of recent converts have entered as members. The two most active men in Mr. Moody's work are Messrs. Frank M. Fitt and T. A. Ferguson, Secretary and Chairman.

At a meeting of representative members of the Association in Dublin on March 24, a district union was formed for the Association in the south and west of Ireland to co-operate with the newly-formed northern district, thus completing a national organisation for Ireland.

Liquor Traffic in Canada.—The Ottowa House of Commons on March 27 adopted a resolution recognising the advantage of restricting the sale of spirituous liquor, and promising legislation on the subject when public sentiment should demand it.

Manuden, Essex.—Mr. G. Back, of the Evangelisation Society has held a series of special services in the Congregational Chapel. The chapel was well filled every week evening, but on Sundays it was crowded to excess. Mr. Back has been with us three weeks and three days, and we have had a season of much blessing, for which we thank God.

Christian Colportage In Ireland.

LAST week the annual meeting of the Bible and Colportage Society of Ireland was held in Belfast. Mr. Sinclair, J.P., President of the Society, occupied the chair. He said, during the twenty-five years of the Society's existence a very important and large work had been done in the circulation of religious literature. An idea of the extent of its operations may be formed by comparing the result of last year with those of the first year. In the first year of its formation it disposed of 14,000 Bibles and other religious publications, realising £565. In the year just closed, its depôts, which are the outcome of the Society, circulated almost a million periodicals, realising over £9000. The Society only requires to have its working known and to have its non-sectarian character, and the beneficent influences that it is calculated to impart and widely diffuse made manifest, to obtain for itself and its operations troops of friends.

Rev. John Elliott, Armagh (Hon. Sec.), read the report. Not only has there been an increase in the number and value of books sold, but never were the reports of the colporteurs more cheering, more hopeful, and more full of records of spiritual fruit reaped as the reward of their labours. The sum total of the year shows a larger amount of work done, more fruits reaped, and a more cheerful and trustful spirit manifested by the agents of the Society, than at any former period in its history. Everywhere the people of God seem to be awakening to a sense of the great value and importance of a well-worked system of colportage.

Rev. Dr. Johnston thought the Society had not yet received that sympathy and support to which it was pre-eminently entitled. They had it in an agent peculiarly adapted to the constitution of the country, and which, if earnestly carried out, would yet achieve great blessings for their divided community. They had not a sufficient number of colporteurs. What was one colporteur in a county like Cork, or in a county like Down, or in a town like Belfast? It was really time that people opened their eyes. He was happy to be able to state that not one man of the entire sixty colporteurs met with any obstruction in the execution of his work, even during the period of agitation and crime in the South and West of Ireland. Not an uncivil word was spoken to one of them, and they received that cordiality and kindness which used to be characteristic of the Irish people. Mr. R. L. Hamilton said the Society, by circulating the Bible, was proving itself Ireland's best friend.

Rev. Dr. Wright was perfectly certain that if the colporteurs never did anything but go from house to house and present good literature they would be doing a very important work indeed. Few persons were inclined to bring religious literature from house to house. In Ireland they thought that they were safe from the inroads of infidelity, but in so thinking they were living in a fool's paradise. They should be up and stirring in order to counteract it; and they could take no better way to counteract it than by calling the attention of their people to a study of God's Word. Other friends spoke, urging the hearty support of this excellent movement.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—For blessing on a Mission at Hexham, prayed for in The Christian.——For blessing on three weeks' Mission at Manuden, Essex, by Mr. George Back.

PRAYER.—For the safe arrival of Mr. Charles Carter, of the Evangelisation Society, from Australia, and that he may be used amongst those on board.——For a Mission in April at Liskeard Parish Church, Cornwall, by Rev. W. Bradbury.——For a young man converted in the country, but who in London has gone back to his former sins.——For blessing on a Mission during April to the Jews in Manchester, by Messrs. Barrow and Barnet of the Mildmay Mission.

Evangelisation in Germany.

At the Central Noon Prayer-meeting on Friday, Professor Christlieb, of Bonn University, said no land was so open to evangelistic effort as Germany; but, except the Roman Catholic countries, few were in such great need as the Fatherland, which is in a great measure ours also. Evangelistic work is carried on by the Tract and other societies, but it does not affect the masses; the great public life is running by it, and is scarcely touched. We want 10,000 more ministers to overtake the work; and as we cannot have them, we must arm laymen.

Another sort of agency is wanted, beside the city missionaries, to reach the social democrats, and men of that sort. Those who labour among the poor are no match for these, who are often men of education and capacity. Mr. Schlümbach, whom you know, is a man of the stamp we need. I heard of him in America, and invited him to Germany. We succeeded in keeping him a year amongst us; he has returned to America, but we expect him again in July. Two thousand people came to religious meetings in concert halls, hundreds of whom were social democrats, and many theological students.

Dr. Ziemann is now in Bonn, and Roman Catholics as well as others throng to hear him. A few weeks ago, in a town on the Lower Rhine, he had 2000 of a night. Then he proposed an afternoon meeting. It was an inconvenient time for working men, and he expected perhaps thirty or forty, but 800 came with Bibles under their arms. He has many open doors in Westphalia. They say they never heard the Gospel so plainly spoken. In one mining locality 3000 came every evening. They wished the meetings continued, but some stiff pastors prevented this.

At Bonn, the Roman Catholics said, "What a wonderful thing for a layman to preach." They would not think of going to a Protestant Church. They are so priest-ridden that they would give up their Bibles to the priests; but when they heard of a medical doctor preaching in a public hall, they went out of curiosity—also many students, many rationalists; and there have been not a few deep, solemn, earnest conversions.

In Northern Germany things have been in a very dead condition. In 1850 a Dean of a large district called a conference of his clergy and asked them if there were many who were really Christians among their people. One said he had only four out of a large congregation. Another replied that if he had four regenerate people he should think it the dawn of a new era; he had not one. After hearing others the Dean said nothing but the power of the Spirit could help them, and they all knelt in prayer to God. The answer came. In 1854 God put it into the heart of a shoemaker to go forth and preach and spread the Bible in the provinces of Schleswig and Holstein. Little bands of believers were gathered, an evangelistic society was formed and evangelists sent out, and now there are bands of Christians spread over all the country.

At Bonn we have formed a centre for the furtherance of evangelistic work. We have purchased a chapel with schoolroom and house, and a large garden, on which other buildings may be erected. Here we have the nucleus of a home for evangelists. Very recently we had a conference, at which we laid down the principles on which simple evangelistic work should be carried on—the preaching of a crucified and risen Saviour, leaving teaching and ordinances to the settled pastors. We hope Dr. Ziemann will be one of our evangelists, if it should please God to restore his dear wife from her delicate state of health. The Archbishop of Berlin has declared the necessity of laymen preaching. The signs are multiplying of a great awakening in Germany. Now is the time to enter into every open door, for we know not what change may be before us in the future.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE has lost another devoted and faithful Christian in the death of Captain Campbell, of The Reddings, Fretherne, who, during a long life, laboured in every field of Christian work, and whose whole-hearted consecration to his divine Master was such as is seldom witnessed.

General Gordon.

DEAR SIR,—It may interest and stir to prayer those who already are interceding with the Lord for General Gordon and his work to read the contents of a post-card received from him this morning by my son. I therefore send you a copy.—Faithfully yours,

R. Wilmot Brooke, Lieut.-Colonel.

"Kartoum, 25/2/'84.—My time is so occupied that I am sorry I cannot do more than acknowledge receipt of your letter 16th of Jan., received to-day. I am glad you have the little book of texts; you can help me by your intercessions for me. I am afraid I must conclude. —Yours sincerely, C. E. Gordon."

Pastor Martinez's Work in Spain.

DEAR SIR,—It gave me great joy to see your kindly notice of Senor Martinez in your issue of the 20th, inviting Christians to give him a welcome. May I tell your readers who he is, and what he has come for?

He is one result of the far-sighted faith of the noble Manuel Matamoros, who believed Spain would be opened to the Gospel, and acted upon the belief by having young men trained as evangelists, that they might enter the open door he prayed for and believed in. Antonio Martinez is one who was thus trained. For the last seven years he has conducted a Mission at Reus, near Barcelona. There was not one to welcome him when he began; now there is a regular attendance of 120 each Lord's Day, of whom 50 are full and distinctly converted members, 80 children in the schools, a colporteur, regular evangelisation in the villages round. This is no small result of seven years' solitary service, surely!

But now the success has brought the hostility of the priests to such a pass that the little church and schools can find no place any longer. They have been in hired rooms, but are now refused them. This is what Senor Martinez is here for—to plead for a building. It is not a common appeal, as it is either "build" or "leave Reus!" Will your readers help the work to continue? Senor Martinez is a very living worker, full of zeal for winning souls, and satisfied with nothing less. He works under the superintendence of the Rev. W. Gulick, head of the American Board of Foreign Missions. My father, R. Nugent, or myself, will be most grateful for any help. Senor Martinez will be a few days longer in London, if any would like to see him.—Yours warmly,

Evangelistic Notes.

Kent.—Mrs. Yeoland's Mission Services at Hawley Corner, near Westerham, now concluded, have been signally blessed. Her faithful and stirring appeals have specially aroused and comforted Christians. She has now gone to Portsmouth.

Cullen.—Mr. Joseph Cleworth held a series of meetings in Cullen from March 10 to 23. All the churches were in harmony with the meetings. Many have received spiritual blessings, and disappointment was felt when the meetings closed. The singing of Gospel hymns by the choir contributed largely to the bringing out of the people.

Liskeard.—Mr. Spiers and Mr. Westall, of the Children's Special Service Mission, have had a most united and encouraging work at Liskeard. The Temperance Hall was crowded night after night. A committee of fifty ladies and gentlemen of all denominations has been formed to carry on the work.

Kinnoir, Huntly, N.B.—Mr. Smith, evangelist, has conducted a series of meetings here. A deep interest has been manifested, the church, which is well suited for the purpose, being almost full every night, numbers remaining to the second meeting. Mr. Smith, who is connected with the Gospel Van Mission, is a very earnest preacher.

Work in the Villages.

"If you want to see a happy home, come to our little cottage, and we'll show you one, bless the Lord!" said a bright-faced village labourer, who rose to his feet to testify of what God had done for his soul lately, through the preaching of the Gospel in the tent which had been erected in the neighbourhood of Stretham near Ely.

The speaker was one of three sons who, with his two sisters, had been converted to God through the meetings held in connection with the London Evangelistic Mission, in Cambridgeshire. The mother, whose happy face bore traces, nevertheless, of previous sorrow, testified to the joy she experienced in seeing all her family thus brought into the fold. The work has spread through several of the villages, and many scores of souls appear to have been savingly converted to God. Blasphemers are changed into rejoicing believers, from whose lips now go forth the holy songs of joy, both in field and cottage. "We have long known that man," said a friend to us, "as one who could not speak to his horse without an oath; but you now hear the songs of salvation resounding in his cottage home every night." This is a sample of very many more.

Through the liberality of two friends interested in the work, a large iron building has been erected, containing Mission, coffee, and reading-rooms, which are crowded on the Sunday and well used every week-night; while open-air and tent meetings have been held in surrounding villages, with equal interest and results, by Messrs. E. Hurditch, D. Newall, C. Hall, and A. G. Andrews, with occasional visits from the Director of the Mission, Mr. C. Russell Hurditch.

Many rough lads have been brought to God, and are now boldly testifying of the grace of God. A pleasing feature of the work is their love for the Scriptures and diligence in searching them at the various Bible-readings, thus ministering to their souls' growth and increase of faith. The converts go in bands to assist in the open-air meetings in other villages, and even to the formal and religious town of Ely.

MRS. AMANDA SMITH is still labouring for the advancement of her race in the Republic of Liberia, preaching the Gospel and Temperance as she has opportunity. She reports the great want of the community to be education, in every sense of the word. When we remember the patient perseverance necessary to make any perceptible improvement on an ignorant, though docile population, it behoves us to encourage such labourers as Mrs. Smith, who can remain in a climate which is fatal to white people. Her friends know she is dependent on others for support, and some of them are anxious to show their sympathy by sending a remittance; should anyone wish to assist, Mrs. Y. Davis, Foxrock, co. Dublin, will be glad to receive contributions.

THE NORTH SEA FISHERMEN.—Writing lately from the North Sea to the secretary of the Thames Church Mission, a fisherman says: "I feel that I ought to thank God with all my heart for putting it into the heart of the Thames Church Mission to provide Mission vessels, and that great blessing, a medicine-chest. I am thankful to tell you that we derive great comfort from the mufflers, which we receive from the Mission with grateful hearts. The Lord bless those dear ladies that take such joy in making them. I would not forget to mention the library; for at one time we could hardly see such a thing as a book, but now, thanks to the Mission, we can always have a book to read when we find a leisure hour or two. Praise God! I say, that the Thames Church Mission found its way as far to sea as the Dogger Bank. Often and often the cry is, "Bear away to the Cholmondeley, that we may go on board." And when we get there, what is it for? Why, that we may assemble together and give praise to Him who holds the sea in the hollow of his hand. We have some blessed times together."

Letters to the Editor.

CHRIST CHURCH, BURTON-ON-TRENT.

Dear Sir,—I should like to give you a few facts in reply to the letter of Rev. J. E. Linnell, Vicar of Pavenham. Mr. Linnell has subscribed himself as a total abstainer in his defence of the Rev. C. Guest, Vicar of Christ Church, Burton-on-Trent, who has discharged both his curates for opening their mouths on the drink subject. Mr. Linnell knows that when a curate sets his foot in Burton it is usual for him to be invited to a certain brewer's house, and when once the curate's feet are well under his table, he is gagged from speaking out on the drink. He may denounce all other sins in the most scathing and withering language, but the sin of drunkenness, and the blighting trade of drink, which are robbing our churches of some of the best of its members, and stopping others from coming to hear the Gospel, must not be spoken against.

Here Mr. Linnell failed in his ministry at Burton by his deplorable unfaithfulness, and yet he subscribes himself a teetotaller. I would like to ask the rev. gentleman how long is it since he put on the blue ribbon? Did he wear it when a curate at Burton, or has he put it on since he became the Vicar of Pavenham, because his patron, who is a Christian gentleman and a teetotaller, and almost all his flock, wear the blue ribbon?

Mr. Linnell apparently at Pavenham is dead against the traffic; in Burton not a word must be said against it. "What is Mr. Guest to do?" Why, let him trust in the power of the living God, and not be running about after brewers and courting their favour, taking his pleasure and his holidays with them. The devil does not care how many Gospel meetings are held in the parish, so long as the ministers of Christ can agree with Sunday trading, Sunday manufacturing, Sunday public housing, in the liquor traffic.

Mr. Linnell says that I knew what was the trade of the town before my assumption of office. I did, and Mr. Guest knew perfectly well my principles, and in my principles I have not compromised at all. I was the same in Nottingham, and I am the same in Burton; neither folly, fanaticism, nor broken engagements ever marked my proceedings here. Because the trade of a town is drink, does it follow that a Christian minister should keep his mouth shut concerning it? Has it come to this, that Christ's work here has to be wedded to an infernal traffic? Are God's ambassadors to be muzzled by the gold of brewers? I say from the depths of my heart, No, not for the world.

Mr. Linnell knows very well that during his eight years at Christ Church, evangelists and their wives fell through the drink, as well as Scripture-readers, town missionaries and their wives, and church members in abundance. It is only a few months ago that Mr. Linnell and a friend of mine, Mr. Leakin, visited a drunken evangelist and his wife; and these are some of the many that Mr. Linnell says were converted at those remarkable schoolroom and tent services.

Yet Mr. Linnell was so under the pressure of his vicar and the brewers that he dare not speak out against all this seething mass of drunkenness and sin. I could bring before the public deplorable things in connection with our church-members caused by the drink, but I forbear. I say to my readers, beware lest this foul drink should enter your churches. In private Mr. Linnell once said to a friend of mine that he could smell these church-members and converted evangelists stinking with the drink as they knelt in prayer, and now he says he is afraid that silence on his part in not attempting to set up a plausible excuse for the Vicar of Christ Church would become sinful. I should like to ask him if he does not think that he has committed sin by his eight years of unfaithfulness on this deplorable subject. Why has he not raised his voice against it? It is time that ministers, if they cannot be free to speak against sin and its causes, left God's ministry altogether. The Church will soon fall where is an unfaithful ministry and where brewers with their infernal trade are allowed to take the lead; such places are nurseries of hypocrisy and immorality. If ministers cannot carry on a work for God without an unholy alliance, God forbid that it should be carried on at all. If drink interests have to rule a vicar and curates and regulate church work, may God sever the unholy link at once.

Trusting by the grace of God to be an enemy of the drink traffic in Burton and elsewhere, I am, Sir, yours faithfully in the Lord,

W. B. Dearden,
Curate of Christ Church.

103, Moor-street, Burton-on-Trent,
March 25.

Dear Sir,—I trust you will allow me, in justice to Mr. Guest (the Vicar of Christ Church, Burton-on-Trent), to make a few remarks in reference to the letter of Mr. Crocker Pennell, which appears in The Christian of this week. Mr. Pennell's letter, if left unanswered, is calculated to create a prejudice in the minds of your readers unjustly against a godly clergy man.

It is very evident that your correspondent knows nothing of the circumstances under which Mr. Guest was compelled (acting under the advice of his Bishop) to get rid of Mr. Spriggs Smith.

Mr. Linnell (a Blue Ribbon man) had acted as Mr. Guest's curate for eight years, during which time the Lord had wonderfully blessed the pure preaching of the Gospel by his servants—the vicar and his curate—many souls being won for Christ both from the drunken as well as the moral classes, who will doubtless be their joy and crown of rejoicing in the day of his appearing. I have myself, on several occasions, addressed 500 or 600 earnest listeners in the schoolrooms of Christ Church, and never did I witness a more attentive and devout class of hearers.

When Mr. Linnell was appointed to the vicarage of Pavenham, Beds., Mr. Guest (to his sorrow) chose Mr. Smith as his successor. This young man either did not know the Gospel of the Grace of God himself, or, if he did, supposed there was something better to preach. He soon found he had not the hold on the affections of the poor people that his predecessor had; he then, to endeavour to gain notoriety, began to attack the brewing interests of the town.

I can fully corroborate all that Mr. Linnell stated in his letter inserted in a recent Christian, about the work done during the last twenty years at Christ Church, Burton.

Had Mr. Smith as faithfully set forth Christ as the sinner's friend (whether that sinner be a drunken or sober one) as his predecessor (Mr. Linnell) had done, he would no doubt have gained the affections of the poor people. I can testify to their warm-hearted reception of all true servants of Christ who visit them.—Yours, in the interests of truth,

Samuel Field.

Prospect Hill, Walthamstow.

P.S.—If Mr. Pennell likes to place himself in correspondence with me, I can inform him privately of the circumstances under which Mr. Smith left the Vicar of Christ Church, Burton.

[We have received further letters on this subject from Mr. Linnell and Mr. Spriggs-Smith, but we have not space for them in our present issue.]

CRAMMING AND KILLING.

"Parents do well to see that their children are taught on common sense principles and with a view to their welfare, instead of for the gratification of teachers, whose one object is, for their own benefit, to pass as many heads as possible under the examiner's rod."

Dear Sir,—This paragraph from The Christian for Feb. 21, written with a true motive, that of warning against the baleful custom so much in favour at the present time, of making children pass examinations, carries with it an implied censure upon teachers generally, and especially upon those who prepare for examinations:—a system, let me say, which most thorough teachers detest, but which is forced upon them by the demand. Fashion rules the day, and although I believe it will not long be amongst the truly educated, it has been for some time past the fashion to consider that those pupils who pass examinations must necessarily have acquired something more to be proud of than those who do not. What that something is very few have any idea, but it is a something they get at "High Schools." Few know what the words mean, but High Schools are demanded, and "High Schools" appear everywhere.

This something is to be got through certificated teachers; therefore all teachers must be certificated—who knows what that is? However, demand creates supply, and those who do or do not adopt these magic words, but who still conscientiously desire to train and educate the minds of the children, are continually thwarted and hindered in the real work by requests from parents that their children shall be prepared for examinations, and at the same time cautioned that the work required is not to be done, for many are afraid of the consequences, but want to gain the end. I am writing from experience, having resisted the stream for years, in word and act, and have consequently had pupils who have been well and thoroughly taught, removed to other schools from which they have been passed, and these schools have had the credit of it. Many pass, however, who have had no thorough training or teaching. These things have of necessity to be put aside that the prescribed subjects may be prepared in cases where children have been left to untrained and inexperienced teachers during their early years, and then sent to pass and finish; these pupils do pass often, at the expense of true mental culture—of ordinary knowledge and of physical health—and a grand thing is thought to be accomplished, not by the teachers, who know better, and who would a thousand times rather educate and teach, but by those who follow the cry of fashion, and who must have the "higher education," which is impossible without the lower education to step upon; and until people can learn this, cramming and killing will go on.

"Fruit without seed time,
Harvest without sowing,
Produce without expenditure,
Knowledge without gathering,
Experience without time—can never be."

G. W. E.

THE REDEMPTION OF THE BODY.

Dear Sir,—Pardon my calling your attention to what is perhaps only a slip of your pen in your article "Vulgar Luxury," in to-day's Christian, viz., the words, "the body is redeemed, as well as the soul." It is redeemed in God's purpose; and so far as we are concerned, it is "redeemed in hope," but not in fact. See Rom. viii. 23, and 1 Peter i. 3—5.

Is not this phrase, which you use, at the bottom of whatever there is fallacious in the Faith-healing movement? Pastor Blumhardt did not teach that the body was redeemed, nor did Dorothea Trüdel (I think); and yet the Lord gave them to heal many sick ones through the prayer of faith.

When the Lord Jesus was on earth, when the Bridegroom was here, He healed all manner of sickness; and so He will when He comes again; for even those whose bodies are not glorified will "no more say, I am sick."

But now, during his absence, "Even we, who have the first fruits of the Spirit (receiving the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls:" 1 Pet. i.) groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit the redemption of our bodies" ("the salvation ready to be revealed at the last time:" 1 Pet. i.). Our joy, even while we groan, is to know that all things work together for good to those who love God, who are called according to his purpose.—Yours faithfully in Christ,

E. F. B. Brooke.

A MESSAGE FROM INDIA.

Dear Sir,—At the request of an absent son, I beg to send to you for publication a suggestion of his, for the consideration of those who have to collect funds. My son writes as follows: "I see urgent appeals for money in every number of The Christian, and it strikes me that if subscription lists, with a printed formal notice at the top of the circular, were periodically sent to most of the large stations in India, considerable sums might be readily enough collected in British India from the European community. The notice at the head of each circular should authorise well-known men in India to collect funds for the society or institution, and I believe many would give when asked to, especially if contributions were received on the spot, in rupees, by well-known men, as donors would be saved further trouble; and we all know how often busy men forget and delay, and, indeed, will not go to the trouble of remitting home."

There is a society which has the strongest claim on our countrymen and women in India, as it is undenominational. I refer to the Anglo-Indian Evangelisation Society, which is represented at Simla by the Rev. J. Fordyce, whilst the office of the London Secretary is 7, Adam-street, Strand.

I name this particular society because its operations are confined to India, and because, if it were better supported in India, it might probably become an agent of transcendent importance; moreover, I think that in India a greater spirit of self-denying liberality should be more generally evinced, by those in particular who could well afford to be generous.—I am, Sir, faithfully yours,

Vox.

THE CANADIAN JUBILEE SINGERS are now in this country, seeking, by the exercise of their gifts of song, to raise funds for building a Theological Institution in Chatham, Ontario, in which coloured men may be trained for Afri an Mission work. The object is a most praiseworthy one, and the performances of these dark-skinned brethren and sisters are highly spoken of by those who have heard them. By an announcement elsewhere it will be seen that they give one of their song services at Mildmay on Tuesday next.

Notices of Books, &c.

Plain Teaching; or, Homely Lessons from God's Word. By Mrs G. E. Morton. Hamilton, Adams & Co. An attractive-looking little book in large type, containing very short addresses on various aspects of Gospel truth. Some of the chapters are suitable for mothers' meetings, and the book would be useful for lending to awakened souls.

Outline Texts. These texts are tastefully produced in outline, for working with Berlin wool. Directions as to shades and colours to be used are given. The sewing of the outlines will form a pleasant and instructive occupation for busy little hands. Price 1s. 1½d. per packet of six, post free, from Miss H. C. Brown, Trelawney-road, Falmouth.

The Manners and Customs of the Jews, by Rev. E. P. Barrows, D.D., 2s. 6d. Religious Tract Society. This book, freely illustrated, affords much information which is usually to be found only in larger and higher-priced volumes. It is handy in size, and will prove an invaluable help to Sunday-school teachers, while its cheapness brings it within the reach of all who would take interest in its contents.

Talks with Young Men. By Rev. Thain Davidson, D.D. 3s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. A series of addresses to young men, mostly on Biblical subjects. They are full of practical thought and earnest advice. Dr. Davidson has dealt with the subject-matter in a plain, straightforward way, but in an easy conversational style, which retains the interest of the reader, and cannot fail to gratify every young man who is fortunate enough to possess the book.

The Oakhurst Chronicles: A Tale of the Times of Wesley. By Annie E. Keeling. 2s. T. Woolmer. A fascinating story, told in quaint and graceful language. As it purports to have been written up from some ancient records accidentally discovered, it has the additional merit of being a truthful picture of the good old times. The character of the heroine is pure and true, her troubles grievous, and her happy escape from all her persecutions gives a very satisfactory finis to the book. The villain of the story meets, of course, with well-deserved retribution.

Irish Society

For Promoting the Scriptural Education and Religious Instruction of the Irish-speaking Populations, chiefly through the medium of their own Language.

Sir,—What is the Irish Society, and how does it work? This and similar questions have so often been put to me that I think I cannot do better than ask for a little space in your valuable paper to answer them, for the benefit of other persons who may not know anything of the grand work which the Society has been doing for so many years.

The Irish Society was founded in 1818 for the purpose of teaching the Irish people to read (in their own tongue) the Holy Scriptures. The need of this will be easily seen when we remember that there are 885,000 people in Ireland who speak Irish, and out of these there are 100,000 who cannot speak anything but Irish. The books used by the Society are the Irish Primer and the Irish version of the Holy Scriptures.

Who are the teachers? Men engaged most of their time at their different kinds of labour. Who are the pupils? People of all ages and both sexes. How and when are they taught? In any way and at any time when teacher and pupil can spare time to meet.

Perhaps your readers may not think this a very satisfactory way of teaching, but let me tell them that the scholar has to pass an examination before the teacher receives any remuneration for his trouble. There are five examinations at intervals of four months, at which the teacher receives respectively 1s., 2s., 3s., 4s., and 5s. every scholar who passes inspection; fifteen shillings for teaching one person to read. Should we not think this a very trifling sum to receive for giving up different leisure hours during a period of twenty months? and yet how many do this. I see from the last report that there are no less than 194 Irish teachers at work, who have the charge of 5,386 pupils.

I shall only be too pleased to give any information or answer any questions relating to the society. Surely if we prize our own Bibles, and are thankful for the daily help and comfort we get from them, we shall be anxious to do all we can for others to have the same.—Yours truly,

Margaret E. Bleasdale,
Mount-villas, York. Hon. Sec.

PUNROOTY;

Or, The Gospel Winning its Way among the Women of India.

BY CLARA M. S. LOWE.

Attractively Bound in Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"A most interesting account of Miss Reade's Mission Work in India, showing what God can do by means of a really devoted woman. These are the sort of books which Christians should circulate as 'light reading.' They are far more instructive, and interesting too, than the religious fiction which is far too popular."
Christian Progress.

BOOKS suitable for BIBLE STUDENTS and TEACHERS.

Published by MORGAN & SCOTT.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE

To the Old and New Testaments. Handsomely bound in cloth, price 7s.6d. Half bound in leather, cloth sides, gilt edges, 10s. 6d.

POPULAR EDITION, CLOTH, FIVE SHILLINGS.

THE SPECIAL FEATURE in this Edition is the NEW TRANSLATION, Revision, and Extension of the PROPER NAMES of the OLD and NEW TESTAMENTS, with their Meanings in the Original Languages. By Rev. Alfred Jones, M.A., Author of "The Proper Names of the Old Testament Scriptures, Expounded and Illustrated."

CHRIST LIFTED UP.

Meditations on the Death, Resurrection, and Ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ. By Rev. Robert Gilchrist. Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"An earnest, practical exhibition of the Gospel under a variety of aspects. Christ lifted up on the cross, and at the Father's right hand, is the grand theme, and affords scope for setting forth a wide range of Gospel teaching. The writer does this in an interesting, while simple style."—British Messenger.

"Old-fashioned divinity presented in a pleasing form. May its readers be many."—Sword and Trowel.

THE GOSPEL IN LEVITICUS.

Chapters on the Old Testament Foreshadowings of the Great Redemption. By the late Rev. Dr. Fleming, of Kentish Town. Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"The subject is set forth with a clearness, a directness, and a persuasiveness which leave little to be desired. Every lover of sound Scriptural theology, especially in regard to the momentous doctrine of the Atonement, will find in the book a rich treat."—Baptist Magazine.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

The Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. New and Enlarged Edition. By Rev. Dr. Culross. With Chromo-Lithographic Views of the "Sea of Galilee" and the "Island of Patmos." Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d.

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."—Sword and Trowel.

"THY FIRST LOVE."

Christ's Message to Ephesus. By Rev. Dr. Culross. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"It is a heart-searching and stimulating little book."
British Quarterly Review.

"Its language is chaste and clear; its thoughts are fresh and invigorating; its tone is evangelical without being sentimental. While there is a genial warmth of devout feeling, there runs through its pages a healthy breeze of robustness."—Literary World.

BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR & KNOCK.

Christ's Message to Laodicea. By Rev. Dr. Culross. Tinted Covers, 1s; cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"The exposition is fresh and original, displaying great critical skill and discrimination, together with happy quotations of Scripture. The style is all that could be desired—chaste and polished, yet full of force; here and there, as in the author's other works, we meet with passages of great poetic beauty."
Aberdeen Daily Press.

CALLS TO CHRIST.

A Series of Addresses by Rev. R. W. Nicoll, M.A. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"Force and freshness are eminently the characteristics of these 'Calls to Christ'; they are also brief to a proverb, and hence they may be of great service to an earnest evangelist who knows how to use another man's thoughts."
Kelso Courier.

QUESTIONS ON THE FACTS OF THE BIBLE,

Suited for use in Schools and Families. By James Horne, Inspector of the Schools in the Orphan Houses, Ashley Down. Tinted covers, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

"A good examination in the Scriptures might be conducted with the help of this little manual, the questions in which are extremely well arranged."
The Rock.

May also be had (for the use of Teachers only),

KEY TO QUESTIONS ON THE FACTS OF THE BIBLE.

Which furnishes the Answers to all the Questions. Cloth, 6d.

THE NUMBER "SEVEN" IN SCRIPTURE.

Compiled by S. A. Blackwood, Esq., C.B. Paper Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d. Presentation Edition, Cloth Boards, Bevelled, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

"Many other attempts have been made in tabulating the circumstances connected with the word "seven" in the Bible, but we cannot think of any one which is so complete, so concise, and so systematic as in the small volume compiled by Mr. Blackwood. From Genesis i. to Rev. xxii. all the many times the word occurs are duly noted, and each book is dealt with seriatim, so that reference is easy. One object of the book is "to stimulate search and to arouse inquiry," and with this book by the side of the Bible one course of study can be made very profitable indeed."—The Rock.

SEARCHING THE SCRIPTURES

In order to abiding Communion with God. Also, Suggestions for Bible Reading and Study, and a Plan for Consecutive Daily Reading. By Dr. Anderson. Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d. Second Edition.

"Whether viewed as an analysis of the whole Bible, or as a plan for its daily perusal, or as a directory to the spirit and intention with which it should be studied, it is equally judicious and complete. The one design of the whole Scriptures is kept in view throughout."—Sword and Trowel.

CHRIST AND THE SCRIPTURES.

By Rev. Dr. Adolph Saphir. Cheap Edition.—Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth, Limp, 1s. 6d. Superior Edition.—Cloth, Elegant, 3s.; with Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d.

"This book is original. Dr. Saphir has the power of originating and combining, which is the mark of genius. It is the old truths to which we listen; but the old truths clothed in a living language, set in new lights, and drawn out in fresh applications."—Weekly Review.

BIBLE READINGS BY HENRY MOORHOUSE.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.

"We do not wonder that those who heard Moorhouse's Bible Readings found them full of power and suggestion. To him the Word of God was a sword—the only one worth using in spiritual warfare."—Liverpool Courier.

"This volume will be heartily welcomed by not only workers in the field, but by all who love to study the Divine Word. A careful reading must stimulate moral seriousness and earnest service for Christ."—Christian Commonwealth.

THE SURE MERCIES OF DAVID;

or, God's Dealings in the Sanctuary. By Anna Shipton. Best Edition, toned paper, Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 4s. 6d. Cheap Edition, Cloth neat, 2s. 6d.

"This is a well-written volume of spiritual instruction, interspersed with interesting narratives, from the able pen of Mrs. Shipton. It is well worthy of a wide circulation, especially amongst members of Christian congregations, Sunday-school teachers and scholars."—Free Press.

NOTES FOR BIBLE READINGS.

A Collection of over Six Hundred Subjects, carefully compiled and arranged. Suitable for Bible Readings, Cottage Lectures, Sermons, Addresses, Sabbath-school Lessons, &c. Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d. A cheap edition may also be had in tinted covers, 2s. 6d.

"A book which every Bible student should possess. It will be of special value to the class teacher, and an assistance also to the preacher. It supplies valuable matter for private meditation, and those who conduct Bible Readings will find it most suggestive."—Christian Progress.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MOSES:

As seen in the Tabernacle and its Various Services. By Rev. George Rodgers. New Edition. With two full-page Illustrations, and numerous smaller Engravings. Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth, bevelled gilt boards, edges, 2s.

"No young Christian, and especially no preacher, should be ignorant of the truth which this small volume very simply but very forcibly enunciates."
The Record.

"A very spiritual as well as instructive little book, the Saviour being typically portrayed in the Tabernacle, the High Priest, and the sacrifices."—Churchman.

BOGATZKY'S GOLDEN TREASURY of TEXTS

FOR THE CHILDREN OF GOD. A Series of Scripture Texts and Meditations for every Day in the Year. Cheap Edition—Cloth back, 2s.; Toned Paper, Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d. Presentation Editions—Leather Back, Leatherette Sides, Gilt Edges, 3s. 6d. Whole bound in Leather, Gilt Edges, 5s.

"Bogatzky's Golden Treasury" has been translated into nearly all European languages, and has obtained an enormous circulation in Germany and Great Britain. In this country very few books except the Pilgrim's Progress have been so largely circulated or so widely read."

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

NINTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"
WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.
CASE of DISEASED LUNGS at BISHOP AUCKLAND.

The name of this patient is W. T. Fraser. By the request of Rev. R. F. Handford, of Bishop Auckland, I forwarded medicine at reduced charge, with advice, in June last.

Illness commenced in February with diseased finger, affecting his general health. Cough followed, with shiverings, loss of flesh, pains in the chest, &c. Expectoration thick and green, occasionally profuse night perspiration. "Two doctors reported left lung diseased and in a wretched state." So the patient writes me June 13.

In July the perspirations had ceased, and the cough and expectoration were easier. In August some other symptoms had abated. Ordered to continue the medicine as directed; also the use of an inhaler was permitted (according to the wish of his local doctor).

In October and November letters from the Rev. R. F. Handford reported still more favourable progress. The patient also writes: "The medicine undoubtedly has saved my life."

After steadily persevering in the use of five large bottles for seven months, recovery was fairly complete. On Jan. 4 Mr. Handford writes concerning him: "W. T. Frazer is working from morning to night, and feels as strong as ever. He says he has gained weight so much that, although he was reduced to 9 stone 7 lbs., he now weighs 11 stone 10 lbs. He says: 'I am grateful to God and to Mr. Congreve for (humanly speaking) saving my life.'"

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

J. THEOBALD & CO.'S SPECIALITIES.
FIELD GLASSES FOR THE EASTER HOLIDAYS.

There is not anything which so enhances the pleasure of a holiday as a good field glass, with which the surrounding country can be brought into immediate view. The great reason why so many people do not possess a field glass is because opticians have charged exorbitant prices for glasses of any power, thus placing them out of the reach of thousands of people of whom it cannot be said that to them "money is no object." We have, however, special facilities which enable us to place them within the reach of all. We purchase in immense quantities for cash direct from the actual working manufacturers, and not from an wholesale house on long credit, which means that the purchaser must pay dearly for what he buys.

THE "ACME" FIELD GLASS.

There are no glasses so highly recommended for power and cheapness as those sold by us. Why is this? Simply because we lay ourselves out specially for this line of business; we determine that we will get glasses of a quality so high and a price so low as to defy competition. The consequence is, we sell thousands where an ordinary optician would sell ten or twenty. Any person calling at our establishment can have over 3000 glasses to select from, while to keep a stock like this would ruin half-a-dozen ordinary shopkeepers. Our glasses were used on board the ships bombarding Alexandria, are used daily by large numbers of the officers in the Indian army. Travellers, tourists, and sailors alike speak loud in their praise. They are taken out by enterprising ship canvassers, and sold for double and treble our prices to passengers on board and travellers across the water.

THE 15s. 6d. "ACME" FIELD GLASS, A PERFECT MARVEL FOR THE MONEY.

This glass has six lenses of thorough good quality, and object glasses measure 1¼ inches in diameter. Will carry 20 miles, and will bring into immediate sight objects that cannot be seen with the naked eye. Each is fitted with rack work movements, so that it can be altered to suit any sight, has Japanned Mounts and Morocco covered body. With each instrument is given a strong leather case with spring snap, buckles and straps for slinging across the shoulders. This powerful instrument we offer to send carriage free for 15s. 6d.

THE 37s. "ACME" FIELD GLASS.

This is the same size as the one at 15s. 6d. but of very superior finish, being fitted with twelve intensely powerful lenses of remarkable clearness, will show distinctly the moving of birds that are mere specks of dirt against the sky, the flags of ships at great distances, and a church clock at 3 to 4 miles distance. In case with straps complete, carriage free, 37s.

THE "VICTORIA" FIELD GLASS.

This is our latest speciality. It is a well-known fact that the further away lenses can be placed from each other the greater power and definition can be obtained, but persons have objected to carrying a cumbersome instrument to effect this purpose. Our new glass THE "VICTORIA" FIELD GLASS does away with this objection altogether, for it is made with double drawers, so that the length desired is obtained without in any way making the glass larger when closed than any ordinary single drawer Field Glass. When closed the glass is only 3½ inches high. It has six lenses of the very best quality, and the object glasses measure 1½ inches diameter. The body is morocco covered and fitted with sunshades complete in strong velvet-lined case with handle and straps. This glass is extremely powerful, and readily carries 30 miles. Owing to its small size and special adaptability of its lenses it would do equally well for the opera as for long distances. Each glass is engraved "The Victoria," and bears our name, without which none are genuine. We offer them for 28 days, carriage free, for 50s. We do not guarantee to supply any after 28 days at this price, as owing to an immense strike amongst the optical workmen, we can only sell what we have manufactured during the winter at these prices.

THE "KENSINGTON" FIELD GLASS.

Precisely the same kind and size Instrument but with twelve lenses, giving an immense increase of power. Carriage free, £2 3s. All orders must be accompanied by coupon. Carriage to all foreign places, 5s. extra.

"Smiles for Tears."

AN APPEAL FOR GIVING

A Whole Week in the Country Free

To the Poor and Debilitated Children attending the Four Sunday Schools and Two Ragged Schools of the North-East London Gospel Missions.

For many years we have spent considerable sums, not collected without diligent application, upon the proverbial "DAY IN THE COUNTRY" for our poor School Children, but with increasing exercise of heart as to the ultimate good attained physically or morally.

We are, in consequence, earnestly anxious to substitute for this rush out and home again, all within a few hours only, A WHOLE WEEK in the country to all such of our poor scholars who most need so helpful a change (there are few that are not needing it more or less), quite free, rail fare included.

Assured that little need be said in these times to win sympathy for these poor little toilers, whose lives are ebbing, and whose tiny faces are growing old ere their teens are reached, we are encouraged to believe, many who have given us a little help for the former, will extend again their willing aid to the same or greater extent for this latter proposition. The number taken will of course be determined by the amount of help received.

We have secured a desirable roomy cottage close to Lavender Hill, near Enfield, one of the most healthful spots, overlooking a large open country, and a Christian friend long known and valued by us, has been asked to take the charge. A liberal dietary has been arranged, a few simple rules, and now only the monetary help is needed to put the little plain furniture in, and open our doors.

Groups of boys and girls will be taken alternately. Letters of commendation will not be needed, nor shall we be easily be imposed upon, seeing we live and labour among the poor children we want to benefit.

We calculate that £200 will enable us to take over 300 children, and include the charge of rent, furniture, &c. A most desirable freehold cottage (new) almost adjoining might be purchased advantageously, if friends would sufficiently help.

The Trustees of our Mission Halls are F. A. BEVAN, Esq., T. A. DENNY, Esq., S. GURNEY SHEPPARD, Esq., JOHN MCCALL, Esq., and ALBERT A. HEAD, Esq.

Contributions will be gladly received by the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN, or by

Yours very respectfully,

MAGNETISM: ITS VALUE AS A MEANS OF RECUPERATING THE SYSTEM.

Perfect Magnetic conditions preserve the vigour of the healthy man, producing a flow of animal spirits, the opposite of which is exhibited by the nervous patient, whose innumerable afflicting, and, not unfrequently, imaginary symptoms, would fill, and have filled, volumes—liable as he is to sick-headache, sleeplessness, melancholy, chorea, paralysis, or epilepsy. He requires generally an equalisation of his disordered nerve-forces; that which soothes the nervous system equalises the functional action of each organ and invigorates the nerve-centres. The unfortunate sufferer from rheumatism and its kindred ailments is never assured that, although comparatively free from pain to-day, to-morrow may not, by a constitutional deflection, find him prostrated with a return of the affection.

The remedy is simply to supply a positive influence to the negative condition of the man. This positive stimulus, operating on the blood, strengthens and vitalises the inner man as naturally as refreshing water revives the drooping plant, it urges the system to demand its proper nutriment during digestion, and to efficiently distribute those constituents to the general welfare of the body. The dyspeptic, unnourished, finds every function of mind and body fail him, because the mal-digestion of his food prevents the formation of healthy constituents for the blood. The natural impetus of Magnetism stimulates the latent functions by securing a better secretion of gastric juice, and a more healthy nervous and circulatory condition; and so, throughout a long catalogue of general and specific affections, Magnetism "allies itself with the recuperative powers of the system, thus increasing its resistance to all unfavourable external influences, and producing so radical a change in the whole organism that, if the weakness is not entirely overcome, it is kept in abeyance to a degree fully credited only by those who have proved its efficacy."

From MR. OWENS, Lavinia-street, Belfast.

February 23, 1884.

"I gladly bear my testimony to the success of your treatment in cases that have come under my notice. My own case was an obstinately chronic one; an affection of the bowels induced by overwork when I was young. In all other respects I was a strong, healthy man, but my sufferings internally were terrible. When I explained my case to you, I never expected you would be able to assist me, but I can truthfully say that from the time I began to wear the appliance, till the present, my weakness has never troubled me.

"Mrs. Owens was quite prostrated by an internal injury which confined her entirely to bed, and her sufferings were great; but since adopting your treatment she is able to go about, and the change is marvellous. She will gladly communicate with any sufferers.

"It appears to me that for affections of the nervous system no remedy is so useful as Magnetism, for it seems to put new life into the sufferer entirely."

The above instance, together with our list of 850 patients who have recovered from various chronic maladies, by Magnetic treatment, and to whom reference is permitted, will show that the best energies of many years devoted to the perfecting of such a remedy have not been spent in vain. The aim has been to place our treatment by Magnetism in its proper place as a Therapeutic agent.

Full particulars of the treatment may be obtained free on application to B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

The Christian.

THE CORRUPT CHURCH AND MODERN CHRISTIANITY.

By Rev. B. BORTON BROWN.

A RECENT American writer, W. H. Holcombe, M.D., in a chapter on "The Dead Church," has drawn a significant picture of the state of society in America, which he considers as the latest product of "Modern Christianity." This picture might do very well in some of its features for other countries beside, in Christendom. It may seem to some extent an exaggeration, but even discounting it somewhat, it is another confirmation how ripe the nations are becoming for some definite and divine crisis; how powerless the present state of professional spiritual life in the Churches is to remedy abounding evils; and how any true soul would be only too ready to praise God at the thought of a really divine and decisive crisis which should strike at the root of present evils and bring in everlasting righteousness.

He asks: "What do we see?

"The spiritual desolation of the age, in all its most painful forms.

"The differences, contentions, disintegrations, decadence, and helplessness of Christianity, associated with the most enormous pretensions and self-delusions.

"The baneful and often concealed ravages of infidelity, rationalism, spiritualism, and sensualism.

"The palpable decay of the old modesties and rectitudes of life.

"The sacrifice of all the moralities in the haste to get rich.

"The frequent desecration of marriage to the barbaric level of bargain and sale.

"The multiplying absurdities and tyrannies of fashion.

"The amazing extravagance, dissipation, heartlessness, and hypocrisies of society.

"The failing sense of the sacredness of obligations.

"The shameless repudiation of debt, public and private.

"The neglect, falsehood, and evasion in the payment of taxes.

"The enormous greed of employers, demanding the greatest possible service for the least remuneration.

"The wide-spread faithlessness in service and contract, among all classes.

"The rule and ruin of hideous 'rings' in politics, in business, and even in ecclesiastical circles.

"The alarming increase of intemperance, opium eating, debauchery, the social evil, insanity, suicide, embezzlement, and all other crimes; insanity alone increasing proportionately faster than the population in every civilised country.

"The extraordinary sensationalism rampant everywhere.

"The increase of emotional disorders, scrofula, blood-poisonings, blindness, deafness, monstrosities, &c., the hereditary products of a diseased civilisation.

"The growing contempt of authority, recklessness of life, and laxity of laws; the decline of patriotism, without any compensating development of the cosmopolitan spirit.

"The selfishness, malignity, mendacity, and jobbery of parties.

"The gradual dying of the public conscience.

"The autocracy of money, meanly lording it over intellect, virtue, and labour.

"The waning power of duty; the apotheosis of pl asure; the reign of buffoonery.

"The astonishing fact that Christians can consent to be rich, and to grow richer, amid all the want and suffering that surround them.

"That they squander in ostentatious displays and selfish appetites more money than would relieve all the necessities of the world."

He asks: "Are we tending in the midst of our fifty thousand churches to become a nation of drunkards, paupers, criminals, and lunatics?"

"The official statement of the annual expenditure of the people of the United States for alcoholic liquors is £140,000,000 per year. Can anyone imagine the moral and physical evils present and prospective, which are involved in that terrible fact?

"The money expended by the enlightened nations of Europe in the maintenance of standing armies for the unchristian business of overawing, checkmating, or destroying each other, would give food, clothing, work, and education to every necessitous human being in their borders: and these nations are not pagan, but the finished products of Christian civilisation!

"Licentiousness, open or concealed, is spreading its subtle poison without limit. Paris exists everywhere. If the surfaces be such as we see them, what must the hidden recesses contain?

"'It is quite curious,' says Ruskin, 'how often the catastrophe of the leading interest of a modern novel turns upon the want, both in maid and bachelor, of the common self-command which was taught to their grandmothers and grandfathers as the first element of ordinarily decent behaviour.'

"Fifty-five years ago when the first French ballet dancer bounded upon the stage in New York in short skirts and regulation tights, every lady in the dress circle rose and left the building. Now crowds of Christian people witness patiently and admiringly the dancing of troops of women, whose continuous approaches to apparent nudity have been regulated by the increasing demoralisation of the popular taste.

"The crime against the unborn child, which destroys the parental instinct, encourages sensuality, and suppresses population, is as common to-day in the most enlightened Christian communities as it ever was in pagan Rome. Dr. Storer, of Boston, has collected an enormous amount of evidence on this subject.

"But the list of special evils is too long to quote. It enumerates an unscrupulous press, the rapid increase of the gambling spirit in all shapes, the effort to amass enormous wealth without one stroke of honest labour, combinations to inflate and depress the markets of the world, detestable thievery, adulteration, quackery, bribery, the augmentation of the dangerous and vicious elements of society, &c.

"The diffusion of a vile, cheap literature through all classes, children included, like an underground sewer, full of nameless putridities.

"And to add a crowning horror to these allegations, men professing the religion of Christ participating in the spirit or the profit of all these evils.

"And amid all, the Churches of Christendom are semi-social, semi-political institutions with more religiosity than religion, formal, contentious, inflated, time-serving, power-loving, unable to Christianise in any true sense the majority of their members, or to civilise the besotted millions at their own doors in our towns and cities. Society indeed has reached a point in which the salvation of the helpless and brutal classes is, under the present regime, totally impossible."

Such is only a part of the indictment, but it is sufficiently heavy. It is utterly impossible for any one who knows it to exaggerate the fearful evils of these latter days.

It would be a mistake very grievous to say that true Christianity is the mother of all these evils. There is a false Christianity which is worse than powerless to prevent these evils, because it administers to the carnal desire of the natural man as to power and show; fosters pride, envy, deceit, mere appearances; expends marvellous energy on mere outsides, and is inwardly full of uncleanness and death.

Perhaps it is no wonder that men without faith and with confused discernment, say that "Christianity is played out; we want a new religion"! Well if all a man wants is a new religion, says Kingsley, "he can make one as often as he is tired of the old one. Man wants more than a religion; he wants the living God": "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God." It would be nearer the truth, instead of saying Christianity has failed, to say true Christianity has not been fully tried, except in very few instances. For instance, has this command of Christ the Lord become the practical basis of modern civilisation? "A new commandment have I given unto you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." Christendom professes to reverence the ten commandments, and places them in the churches; but does it accept and inscribe as all important the one great commandment of Christ, which transcends and includes all others as the one new commandment of the Christian dispensation?

What is really wanted is Christ, not "modern Christianity;" divine life, not mere religion; the Holy Spirit, not the spirit of the world or even of the Jewish dispensation, or even of what is called "modern civilisation." What is wanted is a chaste, pure, sacrificial Church of Christ, not a meretricious, flaunting, false spouse, proposing an alliance with Christ, but living in adulterous union with the world—a veritable Babylon.

The Royal Sorrow.

"Weep with them that weep."—Rom. xii. 15.

OUR nation heaves with sudden start,
And sad is many a royal heart,
For death has shot a secret dart
And laid a loved one low.

A noble Prince has breathed his last,
And England's sky is overcast,
As all his kindly useful past
Comes mournfully to mind.

Now mourn we with the widowed wife
This shadow o'er her early life;
Alas that woe should be so rife!
God help and comfort her.

And mourn we with the Mother-Queen
This loss that comes so swift and keen;
Oh that her sorrowing soul may lean
On Jesu's breast alone.

Oh that his hand may wipe each tear,
Oh that his love her heart may cheer;
His sympathy make life less drear;
God grant this for our Queen.

And mourn we too for those who know
A sister's grief, a brother's woe;
How quick must childhood's memories flow
Through all their aching hearts.

A solace from our God's good hand
We ask for this grief-stricken band,
And guidance to the tearless land,
Through all the ills of time.

A WORD TO FORMALISTS.

By Mr. D. L. MOODY.

THE next class is more difficult to reach—the formalists. They go in strongly for "order." I venture to say there were a good many of this class in the house where Jesus was teaching in Capernaum. They were, doubtless, very much disgusted with these four men who brought the palsied man to Christ. "What do they mean by tearing up the roof and letting the man down in this way?" They were great advocates for doing things "decently, and in order." They believed in maintaining church order and dignity. The idea of making a hole in the roof of a man's house just to let a palsied man through—bringing down so much dust on their heads!

My friends, when God works many things will be done "out of regular order." It seems to me that will be a good thing. There are not a few who cannot be reached, apparently, through the regular channels, who will come to meetings like these out of the usual routine. You have got your churches and chapels, it is true, but we want to make an effort to reach these outlying masses who will not go to them. Many will come in to these meetings simply because they are to be held only for a few days. The hall will soon be taken down and removed to another place, and so, if they are to come at all, they must come to a decision about it quickly. Sometimes men will come out of idle curiosity, or a morbid desire to know what is going on. Perhaps at the first meeting they go to, something that is spoken or that is sung will touch them. They have come under the sound of the Gospel; probably they will become real Christians and useful members of society. May God deliver us from finding fault simply because things are done a little out of the regular line.

You will sometimes hear people say, "We have our churches and chapels; if men will not come to them, let them keep out." That was not the spirit of the Master; nor was it the spirit manifested by the four men of whom we are told in this narrative. When our Civil War in America broke out we had a very small standing army; a proclamation was sent out by the Government asking for volunteers to enlist. Several hundreds of thousands of men came forward and joined the ranks of the regular army. There was plenty for every man to do. These volunteers were not so well trained and drilled as the older soldiers, but we could use the irregulars as well as the regulars. Many of the former soon became efficient soldiers, and these volunteers did great service in the cause of their nation. If the outlying masses of the people are to be reached we must have the regulars and the irregulars both. If you have got any love for souls you will not be finding fault because everything is not done exactly as it has been done for the last fifty years.

I remember hearing of a Sunday-school in our country where the teaching had got into ruts. A young man was placed in charge as superintendent, and he wanted to rearrange the seats. Some of the older members said the seats had been in their present position for so many years, and they could not be moved! There is a good deal of that kind of spirit nowadays. It seems to me that if one method is not successful we ought to give it up and try some other plan that may be more likely to succeed. If the people will not come to the regular "means of grace," let us adopt some means that will reach them and win them.

You remember what Moses said to Joshua when the latter wanted him to rebuke Eldad and Medad because they prophesied in the camp. Instead of rebuking them, Moses rebuked Joshua. I believe it is the only thing on record against him; he objected to lay preaching. Moses said: "Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them."

Neither Elijah nor Elisha was in the regular line of prophets. John the Baptist and Jesus Christ were both out of the regular order of those who officiated in the temple. Wesley and Whitfield may also be said to have been out of the regular line; and yet what grand and mighty things they wrought in England. I would ask those who are bound down to particular forms not to be finding fault because the methods used in these meetings may not be exactly the same as they have been accustomed to. When the Holy Ghost works He will mark out channels for Himself. We must learn to let God work as He will.

(To be concluded.)

Mr. Noble in Lancaster.

A FIVE days' Mission in connection with Gospel Temperance was held in Palatine Hall, Lancaster, commencing Monday, March 24. Mr. William Noble, of London, was the missioner and chief speaker every night. The Temperance movement has taken great hold of this town, and the enthusiasm increases rather than diminishes. There are several thousands of pledged abstainers, the result of previous Missions, and a noble staff of earnest workers, who, by constant visitation, prayer-meetings, Mission services, and house to house solicitation, keep the good work progressing.

The enlarged Temperance Hall was crowded each night. Mr. Noble spoke with his usual passionate earnestness, ability, and spiritual power. He kept his audiences from first to last deeply interested, and the large numbers that stayed to the after-meetings proved that many hearts had been touched and minds impressed. These after-meetings were a special and blessed feature in the Mission. As Mr. Noble pressed home some Gospel truth and earnest prayers were offered for the unsaved, a deep, hallowed feeling pervaded the service. Much spiritual good as well as Temperance work was done.

A very interesting gathering of women was held on the Wednesday afternoon, and many of the mothers signed the pledge. The noon prayer-meetings were chiefly conducted by Mr. Noble, and the biblical expositions he gave greatly encouraged the workers. He was well supported each night by the ministers of all denominations and the gentry of the town. The Blue-Ribbon Choir rendered very effective service, and altogether the meetings were very enthusiastic and successful. 285 new pledges were taken.

A GREETING FROM ONTARIO.—Dear Sir,—Through the kindness of some friend, unknown to me, I have been receiving The Christian for a number of years; and I cannot sufficiently express my thankfulness for the blessing. It keeps me well informed with respect to all kinds of Christian work carried on in my native land. I am frequently much encouraged to see the zeal of good men at home for the kingdom of Christ, and their interest in the welfare of their fellow-men. May the Lord abundantly bless his people at home and their labours for the evangelisation of the world! My copy of The Christian has been hitherto addressed to Stayner, Ontario. I left Stayner, and am now labouring at Port Elgin. Kindly make this known that I may receive The Christian addressed accordingly.—Yours in Christian work, (Rev.) D. McNeill.

Port Elgin, Ontario.

FIRST STEPS IN SIN.

BEWARE of first steps in sin. The first step from either wrong to right or right to wrong, is ever of the utmost consequence. If Ahab had never begun to go astray, he had never been found in the depths of woe to which he afterwards fell. The point at which a man makes his first departure from the straight line of righteousness, is the point at which he goes astray, and that point is the weak place in his character, the place of his danger, and the spot which ought to be watched with all prayerfulness, constancy, and dependence on God.

The first step is that which determines everything. If that be taken, the after consequences must follow, if that be not taken the after consequences cannot follow. If you don't enter the train, you cannot be carried by it to the distant terminus. If you don't go into the sea, you cannot be carried away by the tide and drowned. If you roll a round stone over the ledge of the summit of a smooth sloped mountain, it will bound down and down until it plunge into the lake at the bottom and sink into its depths; but if that stone be not rolled across that ledge, it can never fall, but must remain on the heights. And it is ever so. Retain your integrity, maintain your hold on God and righteousness and you will never need to bite the dust of bitter degradation; but, let go your hold, and God only knows what the end may be.

And it is of the utmost importance to remember that a very slight deviation at first may widen and widen, till the consequences are direful in the extreme. A variation of half a point in the compass has wrecked many a ship, and drowned many a gallant crew. "Only just this once," has blasted and ruined, for time and for eternity, many a boy and girl. The little act of sin, does it. Oh, be warned of this. Lot said of Zoar, "Is it not a little one?" And this undertaking, the consequences of little things, blasted his life and ruined his family. The pulling back of a lever in the signalman's box, may determine whether yonder train which comes thundering along shall carry its passengers to Edinburgh in the North, or London in the South. The first result of the reversing of that line, is to alter the rail points about three inches, but the consequence of this slight change is, that in six hours that train will be four hundred miles distant from the place where it would otherwise have been. And it is even so with a man or woman who is turned aside from purity, goodness, Christ, and God. At first the departure may be only a thought or a desire, an imperceptible defection; but there follows the outward act, then repeated acts, and so on till the far-off misery and shame are reached.

How different was Ahab as a child, from Ahab the husband of Jezebel, and the corrupter of Israel. He would never have been the bad man he was, nor the glaring beacon light moored over the black rocks of apostacy and sin, where he made such sad shipwreck of himself, had he resisted the first temptation, and been on his guard against first steps in sin. F. F.

GROVE HALL AND WEST MARYLEBONE GOSPEL MISSION.—The first anniversary of this Mission was held at Grove Hall on April 1, Dr. Gilbart Smith presiding. Services are held at this hall every Sunday, Tuesday and Friday, as well as on all Bank Holidays, &c. Open-air services, work amongst the fallen, and house-to-house visitation, are other features of the Mission which is well deserving of support. BRING THE CHILDREN OUT OF EGYPT.

By Dr. GEO. F. PENTECOST.

WE make the following extract from one of Dr. Pentecost's Bible Lectures on "Getting out of Egypt," recently delivered in the Regent-square Presbyterian Church. The subject that afternoon was "The compromises which Pharaoh proposed to Moses." One of these was that the men of Israel should go themselves and serve the Lord in the wilderness, but should leave their wives and little ones behind. From the passage Dr. Pentecost drew this lesson: that the god of this world seeks to make parents contented with getting saved themselves, and to persuade them not to trouble their children with questions of religion. Said Dr. Pentecost:—

I wish very solemnly to lay upon the hearts and consciences of all parents here this afternoon the duty of seeking to win their children early to the Saviour. Many parents do not seem to think their children are in any danger of being lost. There is a widespread practical belief that children will be saved because they are children; that there is no urgent necessity for their being converted; that it is enough to teach them the ordinary Bible lessons, and bring th m up respectably; that we are not to expect young children to be converted. The consequence is, that sin gets the greatest advantage over them, and they too often grow up amid the pleasures of "Egypt" and "Egyptian" society. In after years parents mourn over the worldliness and even godlessness of their children, and wonder why it is that they have not given their hearts to Christ. I believe that God means us to have our children with us in the kingdom, and that we are to bring them out while they are yet little ones. We should make no compromise on this point, but set our hearts, from the moment they are given to us, on having them safe in the fold of Christ.

I venture to speak of the mercy of God to a child of my own by way of illustration. During the first year of my ministerial life I was a missionary in one of the small Western towns in our great country. We were living in one room, for we were but very poor, serving a little, feeble church. In that room, which constituted our dwelling, our first child was born. Of course she was solemnly consecrated to God. So far as we could do it, we gave her to the Lord, and asked Him to receive her and make her his own child. We believed that He would, but we were sure that it was for us to watch over and train her up in "the fear and admonition of the Lord." She was the subject of constant and unceasing prayer during all the period of her infant days.

As soon as she could speak any word, the name of Jesus was taught her. She could lisp that name almost as soon as she could those of "mamma" and "papa." Our thought was that she would grow up and never know anything otherwise than that she was a child of God; that being closely trained and tenderly cared for under the very wing of the Almighty, she would pass unconsciously from the death of nature into the life of grace in Christ. From her childhood we taught her the Scriptures, and her earliest delights were to listen to the Bible stories.

By and by, signs and marks of the unrenewed nature were apparent in her. Anger, passion, and wilfulness, would manifest themselves when her pleasure was crossed or she was not allowed to have her own way. An occasional act of disobedience caused us great sorrow and distress. At four or five years of age it was very apparent that, though by no means a vicious child, she was yet a child of Adam. Then we had great anxiety about her. Was this dear child, after all, to grow up and not be the Lord's own? Other children had come in the meantime; and this added more care to our parent hearts. I do not wish to convey the thought that our child was more sinful or wicked than children are in general; but that it became apparent to us that she was not regenerated. She was restless and impatient of restraint, and did not like in moments of wilfulness or times of childish disobedience to be chidden or remonstrated with. The admonitions of the Lord's Word, especially, were not received with a submissive spirit.

These were days and months of anxiety. The question came to us: how far and how urgently we should press upon her the claims of God, and enforce a strict discipline in God's name. I had often heard unconverted people say that they had acquired a distaste for religion by their too strict religious training in their childhood. They said they had learned to look upon Christianity as that one thing that was opposed to all childish freedom and pleasure; and so soon as they were free to choose their own way they went far astray from the precepts of the Lord. I dreaded to make religion distasteful to my child.

There were two or three years then in which we talked much more to the Lord about the child than we did to the child about the Lord. Parents need to be careful and very wise in their religious training of their children not to provoke or fret them by a too severe discipline.

Time went on, till my dear child was ten years of age; still there were no signs that she was a child of God. The bitter thought often came to my heart: "After all, is she to grow up without a vital knowledge of God, as so many children do?" And I cried unto the Lord afresh for my child.

One day she had committed some fault; I think now it was some act of disobedience, for which I chided her, and inflicted some slight punishment, perhaps restrained her from her liberty for a day, keeping her entirely in the house. The next day I took her into my study. My heart was very anxious and sore. Drawing her to me, I began to talk seriously to her about her soul. I had not for a long time had a serious direct talk with her. I told her plainly what sin was in God's sight, and what the consequences of sin were; how displeasing and hateful to God it was; how guilty and devilish a thing sin was. I tried to lay it on her conscience—not harshly, but lovingly. I said to her, with my arms about her: "My darling child, you know how tenderly I love you; how your sin has grieved me; how distressed beyond this I am, that you seem not to think that sinning against God is of any great account. Oh, my dear child, do give yourself to Him!"

She did not like the talk. She sat in a strained position, as if she would fain get out of my arms. She made no reply to me, but sat with downcast face and somewhat sullen looks. When I had said all I could say, I bade her go and think it over. She flew out of my arms, as if it were the greatest relief to get away from me. She went to play and I stayed to pray. Several months passed, and nothing occurred either to cheer me with the thought that she was turning to the Lord nor, on the other hand, to distress me about her conduct; for she was a loving and a dear child.

I was at this time pastor of a large church in Boston. Special interest arose among our people, and I was holding a few extra meetings and giving some addresses to the children and young people. I was greatly pleased to see Lucy at several of the meetings, coming of her own accord. One Monday morning, a week or so after this, as I was going down to the dining-room, she intercepted me at my study door. I was surprised to see her down so early, for she was not usually the first to come down to breakfast. She came toward me with a strange eagerness. I saw by her face and the tears standing in her eyes that something unusual had happened to move her. I said, "What is it, dear?"

She made no reply at once in words, but with a bound she flung her arms around my neck and began to cry and sob, not as if in sorrow, but with gladness, hugging and caressing me all the time.

Presently she said, "Papa, I have got something to tell you." I at once turned and drew her with me into the study. And catching her in my arms she sat on my knees in the same chair where a few months before she had so unwillingly sat to receive my rebuke and instruction in righteousness.

"Now tell me all about it, dear," I said to her.

"Well, papa, you know how naughty I was when you talked to me here a long time ago. I did not forget it, and I have been very sorry and ashamed about it, and have often since prayed to God to make me a better child. Well, you know the little meetings you had with the children? I went to some of them, and resolved that I would give my heart to Jesus, but I did not. Yesterday your sermon in church made me see what a great sinner I was, and I went to bed very unhappy last night, thinking of my sins and wondering if God would forgive me. I don't know how it was but I think God must have awakened me. It was in the night and quite dark, when I awoke. I thought of my sins, and then I thought of all you had taught me about Jesus. Then I got out of bed and knelt beside it, and gave my heart to Him, and oh, I am so happy! and I have been awake ever since, waiting for the morning to come so that I could tell you."

Dear friends, you may believe that there was a happy father as well as a happy child. I speak of this incident to encourage parents not to relax their purpose to bring their children out of Egypt. There may be times when your heart will fail you, but only be believing; seek wisdom from God and purpose truly and reverently that you will not leave your little ones behind you. God will assuredly give them to you.

Nursing the Sick Poor.

TO those who feel the importance of supplying the spiritual as well as bodily needs of our poorer brothers and sisters in the time of sickness, we would mention the Nursing Branch of the London Bible and Domestic Female Mission. This Mission seeks, in the first place, for earnest Christian women who are suitable, and then fits them for their work by the requisite hospital training. These Bible-women nurses, of whom there are between sixty and seventy, are then placed in or near their districts; and nurse the sick poor in their own homes entirely free of charge. The value of this agency (an offshoot from the earlier Bible-women's Mission, founded by the late Mrs. Ranyard) has been amply proved by fifteen years' experience.

The total cost of employing a nurse, including medical supplies, is from £55 to £60 per annum. The headquarters of the Mission are at 2, Adelphi-terrace, Strand, W.C. Hon. Sec., Mrs. Selfe Leonard. Treasurer, The Lord Kinnaird, 1, Pall Mall East, S.W.

THE CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.

THOSE who have learned the priceless value of the Word of God, and who know that it is indeed "able to make wise unto salvation," will rejoice in the fact that through the means of this Union about two hundred thousand children in this and other lands are now regularly reading daily portions of the Word. Evidence is forthcoming that to not a few of these youthful readers it has proved the "savour of life unto life." The fifth anniversary of the Children's Scripture Union, at which these facts transpired, was held on Tuesday, the 1st inst., in the Lower Room, Exeter Hall.

Rev. Sholto D. C. Douglas, who presided in the afternoon, read and expounded the Scripture portion for the day (John xv. 9-17). He dwelt on the "imperial measure" of love: "As the Father hath loved Me, so have I loved you;" the test of love: "Greater love hath no man than this, that He lay down his life for his friends;" the confidential friendship of love: "All things I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you;" the discriminating character of the love of God: "Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you;" and the purpose of love: "That ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain." Speaking of the work of the Union Mr. Douglas told of one country gentleman in whom he was much interested, who had been led to a deeper interest in spiritual things through his little daughter becoming a member of the Union. The questions she asked led him to search the Bible as he had never done before.

Mr. W. F. Seagrove spoke on "How to keep and influence our Members." The progress of the work was, he felt, most encouraging. The Master Himself has greatly blessed the work of his servants, not only in keeping up the number of young readers, but in bringing many of those to Christ. The Union has increased largely in numbers, but desirable as that is, the most important thing is to seek so to influence them that they shall be won to the Saviour. Dealing with practical methods, he urged the value of personal influence and correspondence; also bright interesting meetings for the members, where they should be encouraged to study the lessons of the portions read, to digest with thought and prayer, so that the truth may sink into their hearts.

Mr. Mitchell Carruthers strongly urged the usefulness of meetings, monthly or otherwise, with the view of interesting the children in the Scriptures read. Bright lively addresses, object lessons, text competitions, special subjects, as for instance, crowns, faith, soldiers, the flowers of the Bible, &c.; these and similar means would lead the little ones to see that the Bible was not a dry, uninteresting book, as regarded by some who know it not.

Mr. King called attention to the Public Schools Scripture Union, which he felt was of great importance. It was satisfactory to know that the Union was represented in many public schools, one having no less than 250 members. At Westminster there is an organised branch, with 47 members. These branches are worked by schoolboys, for only fellows in the house or on the same form have influence sufficient to induce schoolboys to become members of the Scripture Union.

In the evening the hall was again well filled. After praise, prayer, and the reading of a portion of Scripture from 2 Tim. iii. 14—17,
